PHILADELPHIA ASKS: IS CHICAGO AMERICAN?

Philadelphia is aroused by Mayor Thompson's outbursts to wonder whether "Chicago is an American or a German city." The Home of Brotherly Love apparently ignores the enlistment figures wherein Chicago shines, as contrasted with Philadelphia. The Philadelphia North American yesterday wired "The Tribune" as follows:

"Philadelphia, Pa., April 28.—The east is immeasurably shocked at the declaration of Mayor Thompson that Chicago is a German city. We had always supposed it an American city. He says it is the sixth German city in the world, and as such cannot welcome America's allies in war with Germany. Is Chicago for the United States or for Germany? If it is a German city, then it is the duty of American military authorities to march on it at once and conquer it, so that it can give no further aid and comfort to the enemies of this nation.

"Also, why has not Thompson been arrested as mayor of a German city, openly sympathizing with the nation with which we are at war?

"NORTH AMERICAN."

Indignation over Mayor Thompson's attitude toward the proposed visit of Marshal Joffre was apparent all over the city yesterday. In the federal building District Attorney Clyne was asked to take action on the charge that the mayor's talks were disloyal, and even treasonable. It is understood that a report has been made to Washington regarding the matter. Details are published on page 2.

"BULLY"

T. R. Rejoices When Senate Votes to Permit Him to Raise Division for Service.

THERE was an unlooked for outburst in the Roosevelt meeting when THE TRIBUNE, over a special wire, forwarded to the speakers' platform, a telegram announcing that the senate had voted, 56 to 31, to accept an amendment to the military bill permitting Col. Roosevelt to raise a division for service in France.

The colonel stopped and read the bulletin. His face brightened and he said, "Bully, bully! I'll tell them about that in a moment."

"Give it to us now," came a voice.

He raised his hand and said: "Just a minute. I want to say first that if the allies want only gold and not men, we should say, 'We won't help unless we can fight.' I do not wish to see this country become a glorified pawnbroker."

Later he read the bulletin. The whole audience rose to its feet, drums were pounded, and pandemonium was loosed again.

"I'll go with you, Teddy," came from all parts of the hall.

"I like it very much," the colonel finally got a chance to say. "If congress adopts that I'll agree to raise four divisions and go under Gen. Barry or any other commander of his type. I will go with a brigade if not a division. I just want to go, that's all. I ask that you put me in a position where you can say, instead of 'Go to the front,' I can say, 'Come to the front.'"

ADD HORRORS OF WAR: EVEN FREE LUNCH IS LOST

There will be no more free lunch in the saloons whose proprietors comprise the West End Saloonkeepers' association. The circumambient pretzel and the lissome pop corn may perhaps be retained; but the ruddy beef, the pickle, sickled o'er, and the fork reposing prongs downward in the jug is no more.

The West End association includes in its membership some 100 proprietors of dramshops between Harrison and Lake streets, and Oakley and Cicero avenues. They will meet this afternoon at William hall to arrange the obsequies.

A number of aldermen have been invited to attend a meeting of south side saloon interests this afternoon at Woodlawn hall, 6304 Cottage Grove avenue. The saloon men desire an ordinance prohibiting free lunch.

Girl Tries to End Life in Store with Poison

A well dressed, good looking young woman, apparently about 20 or 25 years old, tried to take her life by drinking poison last night in a dry goods store at 1124 Wilson avenue.

The police took the victim to the Lake View hospital, where she was said to be in a critical condition. The young woman at first refused to give her name, but later told the hospital authorities she was Ruth Coresw. She would give no address.

In her pocketbook the police found a picture of a small boy inscribed: Charles Halster, 749 North Franklin street.

JOFFRE COMING; MAYOR'S PLAINT LOST IN CLAMOR

Council, Massmeeting and Governor Join in the Invitation.

T. R. DIDN'T NAME BIG BILL—BUT HE MEANT HIM

"If it is necessary to hit anybody, for heaven's sake don't hit him soft. He'll hate you for hitting him and despise you for hitting softly. Now that we are at war with Germany let us not, at the same time, try to curry favor with the Germans by mocking meanness to Gen. Joffre."—From Roosevelt's speech at stockyards.

There is every reason to believe that, despite the hitch caused by Mayor Thompson, Chicago will be the host of Marshal Joffre and his colleagues on the French commission within ten days.

When news reached Washington of the mayor's declination to invite the French visitors to come here they apparently decided to eliminate Chicago from their tour, and a telegram of polite declination reached this city.

CITY COUNCIL'S ACTION.

However, the action of the city council in special session yesterday afternoon, combined with an invitation from Gov. Lowden on behalf of Illinois, put a new face on affairs. Last night it was said in Washington that Joffre and his colleagues will almost certainly come here.

At Col. Roosevelt's stockyards mass-meeting a resolution of invitation to both the French and British commissions was unanimously adopted.

Reticence in the capital over the plans for the journey is due to the desire of the state department to give the party all protection while traveling, but Assistant Secretary of State Phillips said last evening that the trip was being arranged and that Chicago probably would be the farthest city west to be visited.

INDIGNANT AT MAYOR'S STAND.

There was indignation in Chicago—and throughout the country—over Mayor Thompson's attitude. He was condemned by citizens generally.

A committee went to District Attorney Clyne with a complaint that the mayor had been uttering treasonable sentiments. The mayor later said he stood on his right of free speech under the constitution, which Mr. Clyne doubted if he ever had read.

The city council in its special session adopted unanimously—except for three Socialist members led by Ald. Kennedy—the resolutions asking the French commission to be the city's guests. Ald. Richert introduced the resolutions, and there was no debate.

The Socialists did not ask their votes to be recorded in the minutes, and accordingly the official record indicates that the invitation was unanimous.

Before the council convened the aldermen gathered in little groups to express their indignation at Mayor Thompson's attitude. They were especially bitter over the mayor's reference to Chicago as the "sixth German city of the world."

"Does the mayor think Chicago is not an American city, or does he believe that it is an appendage of the German empire?" several aldermen asked.

MORE NAMES ADDED.

While the mayor continued to express veiled antagonism to the visit of Gen. Joffre and the British and French commissioners, he said he would not veto the resolutions of invitation.

"Will you concur in the action of the council?" he was asked.

"Well, I don't know what you mean, but I won't veto it," he replied.

"Does that mean it will have your approval?"

"That's about the same thing, isn't it?" he responded.

Neither the mayor nor his supporters

BAKERS STRIKE; CITY FACES BREAD FAMINE AT ONCE

15 Largest Plants Are Closed, Cutting Off 1,000,000 Loaves.

WHAT THE BAKERS' STRIKE MEANS.

Eighty per cent of the city's bakery made bread—1,000,000 loaves a day at a daily cost to consumers of $60,000 — has been taken from the market.

The small bakeries not affected by the strike will be unable to furnish an extra 1,000,000 loaves daily, "or anywhere near it," according to the heads of the big shops.

The present retail price of from $15 to $16 per barrel of flour is prohibitive for a vast number of housewives who have found it cheaper to buy bread than to make it.

As usual, the public will suffer the chief burden.

Chicago today is face to face with a bread famine.

Fifteen of the city's largest bakeries, supplying about 80 per cent of the bakery made bread in Chicago and its suburbs, were forced to shut down at 5 o'clock last night, after members of the largest bakers' union in the city went on strike.

A big majority of the union members either were born in Germany or have Teutonic antecedents. Both sides vigorously deny, however, that any influence even vaguely savoring of Berlin had anything to do with the controversy. They denounce such reports as "trash."

Federal Agents Watch.

It became known, nevertheless, that the government has developments in connection with the strike under observation. Charles F. Hohmann, spokesman for the union, admitted to reporters that attorneys for the organization had discussed the matter with Hinton G. Clabaugh, local head of the department of justice.

What Mr. Clabaugh may be contemplating he is keeping to himself. There are reports, however, that the government may take action if the city is made to suffer for any length of time. In the case of several north side bakeries supplying bread to the Great Lakes Naval Training station at Lake Bluff and the Marine hospital in Chicago, the naval authorities may commandeer and operate the plants.

The fifteen big bakeries average 1,000,000 loaves a day.

Small Shops Involved.

In addition, more than seventy of the smaller bakeries are affected by the strike.

Following announcement of the big bakeries that they would refuse to grant the union demands the Master Bakers' association, including 600 of the smaller shops, voted likewise to refuse the demands of the bakers.

Our organization has the owners of two-thirds of the smaller shops in the city. We will make a fight of it," said R. Jackel, the president.

It was claimed by heads of the bakers' union, however, that many members of the smaller employers' organization had signed up.

Added to the trouble last night was the probability that the bakery wagon drivers would strike. They voted unanimously for a walkout at a meeting at 180 West Washington street. Their decision will be presented to the teamsters' joint council, and, if it is ratified, they will go out Monday or Tuesday.

Action of the bakers was taken at a meeting held in the afternoon at 218 West Oak street. They decided to go on strike and remain out from all shops that refused to grant their demands.

The Bakers' Demands.

The bakers' demands are as follows:

1. Increase from $26 to $28 a week.
2. Eight hour day in "machine shops" and a nine hour day in shops where all the work is done by hand.
3. No apprentices to be employed.
4. Only one superintending foreman to be employed in each shop, to be employed or discharged at the discretion of his subordinates.
5. Classification as a "machine shop" of any bakery installing even one article of machinery.

It was reported that one reason for the haste with which the bakers decided to strike was a report, discussed at the meeting, that the heads of several big bakeries had made the observation that "the government would

This is the cook. She orders the meals,
And serves them in lavish amounts.
Money's no object, she orders the best
For she doesn't pay the accounts.

This is the woman with several dogs
And all of them greedily eat.
She ought to cut down on the food that they use,
They help raise the cost of meat.

This is the man who won't realize
That the country is really at war.
Just wait till he sees what his income tax is,
And then he will realize more.

This is the man who hoards the food
And waits for a rise in the price.
He gloats at the thought of what he will gain,
Which is certainly not very nice.

This is the woman who eats too much.
"Waste" is her middle name.
A meatless day seven times a week
Would etherealize her frame.

This is the man who loathes the Boche;
He hates the Paci-fist,
Always the first to wave the flag—
And the last one to enlist.

END IRISH ISSUE NOW, PLEA OF 200 IN U. S. CONGRESS

Wire to Lloyd George Urges Settlement to Stir America.

Washington, D. C., April 28.—A cablegram urging a settlement of the Irish problem was sent to Premier Lloyd George tonight by 200 representatives in congress headed by Speaker Champ Clark.

There is great interest in this country in the situation, and the Irish home rule question has been discussed by American officials with members of the British commission now visiting the United States.

Message to Lloyd George.

The message sent by the representatives follows:

"You are quoted as saying that the settlement of the Irish question is essential for the peace of the world and for a speedy victory in the world.

"May we, members of the American congress, suggest that nothing will add more to the enthusiasm of America in this war than a settlement now of the Irish problem.

"We believe that all Americans will be deeply stirred and their enthusiastic effort enlisted if the British empire will now settle this problem in accordance with the principles announced by President Wilson in his address to congress asking it to declare war on autocracy for the world-wide safety of democracy and of small nationalities."

Men Who Signed Cable.

Among those who signed the message besides Speaker Clark were Democratic Leader Kitchin, Representatives Gallivan, Phelan, Dallinger, Rogers, Walsh, Fuller [Mass.], Fitzgerald, Griffin, Caldwell, Carew, Chandler, Smith, Mott [New York], Adamson, Howard [Georgia], Webb [North Carolina], Byrnes [South Carolina], Montague [Virginia], Kahn [California], Sloan [Nebraska], Doremus [Mich.], and members of many of the other state delegations.

MEASURE WINS BIG MAJORITY IN BOTH HOUSES

Senate Seeks to Put Issue of Prohibition in Wilson's Hands.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., April 28.—[Special.]—President Wilson and the general army staff have won their fight for the building of the American army on the system of selective conscription.

Congress late tonight gave its approval by majorities in both houses which were much larger than expected even by the most ardent supporters of the measure.

The vote in the house was 387 to 24. That in the senate was 81 to 8.

OPPONENTS OF DRAFT.

The names of the members of congress who opposed the draft in the final ballots in the two houses follow:

Representative Hollingsworth of Ohio, Republican, voted present.

TEST VOTES SHOW VICTORY.

The victory of the president was assured earlier in the evening when test votes were taken on the volunteer proposal in both houses.

In the lower house the Kahn amendment to the bill reported by the house military affairs committee was adopted, 313 to 109. The amendment knocked out the volunteer feature of the bill and restored it to the form desired by the army staff.

The senate test which dealt the death blow to the volunteer provision came on an amendment offered by McKellar of Tennessee providing that the president raise a volunteer army of 500,000, resorting to the draft only as the last recourse. The amendment was beaten, 69 to 18.

GIVES T. R. A CHANCE.

When it was seen that the volunteer idea was beaten, members of both houses who had suuported it began climbing into the presidential bandwagon and the big final vote was the result.

The senate late tonight wrote into the bill an amendment designed to permit former President Roosevelt to raise four infantry divisions for service in France. It was adopted, 56 to 31. A similar amendment was defeated in the house yesterday.

The senate amendment does not specifically mention Col. Roosevelt, but its purpose has been understood and its author referred to the fact it would permit the former president to raise troops to go to Europe.

Senators Ashurst, Broussard, Gore, Hardwick, Hollis, Husting, Johnson of South Dakota, Kirby, McKellar, Myers, Owen, Pomerene, Ransdell, Reed, Robinson, Saulsbury, Thomas, Thompson, Vardaman, and Williams, Democrats, supported the amendment. Senators Brady, Gronna, La Follette, and Warren, Republicans, voted against it.

AGE LIMITS UNSETTLED.

There still remain several differences between the bills which were passed by the house and senate and these must be ironed out in conferences before the measure goes to the president for his signature.

The chief of these differences is in the ages between which the men of the nation shall be registered and made liable to conscription. The limits fixed by the house are from 21 to 40 and the senate limits are from 21 to 37.

Both bills differ in this feature from the one urged by the general staff. It placed the ages at 19 to 25. It is probable the conferees will strike an average between the house and senate limits.

DRY ARMY UP TO WILSON.

The senate passed a prohibition clause which, if accepted by the house conferees, will give to the president the power to dictate that the entire army shall be "dry." It absolutely prohibits the sale or giving of liquor at training camps or army posts or to members of the army while in uniform. It leaves to the president the right to enforce further restrictions if necessary.

This amendment was the outgrowth of many others which were offered. One provided heavy punishment for the sale or gift of liquor to soldiers or even to members of congress. The substitute amendment was adopted, 51 to 33.

Representative Oliver of Alabama offered a strong prohibition bill in the house, but it was defeated on a point of order.

DRAFT ONLY FOR PRESENT WAR

Just prior to the final vote the senate adopted an amendment by Senator Stone emphasizing that the draft was only to be employed during the present war.

Another amendment, by Senator Kenyon, raised the pay of the American soldier from $15 to $30 during the war.

Immediately after the vote the senate recessed for thirty minutes in order to refer the house espionage bill to a committee.

When the senate reconvened a motion was made to substitute the senate for the house bill, the motion going over for formal action Monday. The senate then adjourned.

Changes Made in House.

The long fight in the house resulted in the following decisions:

Adoption of amendment authorizing the president to exempt from military service such farm workers as he may deem necessary for the maintenance of the military establishment.

Adoption of an amendment to prohibit payment of bounties to men who enlist in the army or national guard and prohibiting drafted men from obtaining substitutes.

Adoption of an amendment by which every state must get its quota of troops for the army in proportion to its population.

Adoption of an amendment by which boys under 21 years cannot enlist in the regular army or national guard without their parents' consent.

Some Proposals Beaten.

Defeat of an amendment that would have exempted conscientious objectors from military service.

Defeat of an amendment to strike out the word "selective" from the draft provision.

Defeat of an amendment to revise the military age limit to 45, 50, or 60 years.

Defeat of an amendment by which no troops would be sent to the trenches unless they volunteered for foreign service.

Defeat of an amendment by which aliens who have been in the United States for five years or more without becoming citizens would be subject to military duty.

Changes Made in Senate.

The senate, in addition to the Roosevelt amendment, made several changes in the bill.

An amendment by Senator Curtis, stipulating that men subject to draft who voluntarily present themselves shall be recorded as volunteers, was accepted by Chairman Chamberlain, and went into the bill.

The senate also accepted, 53 to 25, an amendment by Senator Fall of New Mexico authorizing the president to call into service three or more regiments of mounted volunteers for service on the Mexican border, or in any foreign country the president may direct.

Another long debate was evoked over amendments by Senators Thomas and La Follette to exempt from conscription those having "conscientious objections" to military service. Both were defeated without a roll call, and the bill's exemption proposals left unchanged.

Many of the more radical amendments adopted are expected to be thrown out in conference, and administration leaders hope to restore virtually all of the important features of the bill to their original form before it goes to the president.

Senate Test on Draft.

In the senate the conscription issue was fought out on Senator McKellar's amendment which would authorize a call for 500,000 volunteers and not put conscription into effect unless the half million men did not respond within ninety days. Mr. McKellar pleaded that this plan would not interfere with the draft plan, but would "show the world that we are a patriotic, and not a conscript nation."

The vote on the amendment was as follows:

No Ballot in House.

In the house there was no roll call on the volunteer provision. The long fight came to a close when Representative Kahn of California moved to strike out the volunteer provision written into the bill by the house military committee.

As the result of the voting became apparent, the members and the galleries broke into cheers, while Speaker Clark, Chairman Dent of the military committee, Chairman Padgett of the naval committee, and other Democrats who had fought the administration's plan sat silently in their seats.

Democratic Leader Kitchin, who was expected to vote against conscription, responded to the call for a quorum just before, but was not present for the vote on the amendment. Miss Rankin of Montana voted with the volunteer advocates.

The adoption of the Kahn amendment in the house was regarded on every hand as a tremendous victory for those who have been urging in the last year that the United States adopt some definite plan for the preparation of its citizens for war.

Several members of the Illinois delegation congratulated THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE on having been the first newspaper in the United States to advocate universal military training.

They declared THE TRIBUNE had given an immense impetus to the whole movement, and the fact that the United States now was about to adopt a comprehensive and efficient war scheme was a tribute to the power of THE TRIBUNE and its contemporaries in educating the people of the United States up to the point where they demanded that congress abandon the antiquated volunteer system.

Blow to "Volunteer" Men.

It was apparent this morning when the house met that the backbone of the opposition to the selective draft had been broken and that the misguided leaders of the house majority would be given a sickening body blow as soon as the test vote came.

Speaker Champ Clark, who said on Tuesday that the house would never pass a conscription bill, went about the house with a dejected look on his face and refused to smile as his colleagues attempted to joke with him on his false prediction.

Representative Dent, the leader of the anti-administration forces, who went to the White House two weeks ago to tell the president that the house was 3 to 1 in favor of the volunteer system, moved about like a man in a daze.

When the vote on the Kahn amendment was called for there was a veritable rush to be the first through the tellers. The aisles of the house became blocked and members pushed each other out of the way as they hurried down to have their votes counted.

Fight for Roosevelt.

Passage of the senate amendment to permit Col. Roosevelt to lead a force to France was due to the efforts of three leading members of the upper house. They were Senators Harding, who introduced the amendment; Lodge, and John Sharp Williams.

Declaring this is not a party war, it is an "American war," Senator Lodge made a vigorous speech in favor of the Roosevelt division.

"For heaven's sake," shouted the veteran Massachusetts senator, "is there any reason why he shouldn't be allowed to offer his life for what he believes most secred?"

He declared Roosevelt was the only man in the country who could raise a division, and that to let him do so would not injure the principle of universal service.

Means Immediate Army.

"For us to authorize Roosevelt to raise his army would be legislation which will make possible a volunteer army for immediate and intensive training, to be recruited by Col. Roosevelt, former commander in chief of the United States army and navy," Senator Harding said.

"It provides the advance guard of American ideals, bearing the oriflamme of new world liberty, new world civilization, and new world humanity, and armed assurance of our everlasting committal to maintain our national right."

Senator Harding declared the proposed Roosevelt division would "give form to a Rooseveltian expression of eager and ready Americanism and to provide an army of Americans who believe in him and his gospel of Americanism."

"And surely the interest is not a matter of politics here at home. God forbid there should be anywhere in places high or humble any narrow prejudices or partisanship in these solemn days of a great American crisis.

"There will be amazement through the land if this proposition is defeated."

HE'LL TELL SOME DAY HOW T. R. BAWLED HIM OUT

The mosquito fleet of motorcycles that rode in advance of Col. Roosevelt's automobile during his afternoon tour slowed up at Sheridan road and Irving Park boulevard to warn a touring car filled with women to keep clear of the procession.

The chauffeur evidently misunderstood the order, and in his excitement veered the machine directly in the path of the automobile in which the colonel and his party was riding.

Col. Roosevelt jumped from his car, and, shaking his fist, advanced toward the automobile that had caused the trouble.

"Arrest that chauffeur," he ordered.

One of the motorcycle men took the number of the car—3055—and the procession went on its way. The car is the property of Gerard J. Biehl of Wilmette, Ill.

District Attorney Weighs Disloyalty Complaint Made by Citizens Against Words of the Mayor of Chicago

District Attorney Clyne announced last night that he was "officially considering" the complaint of disloyalty to the United States lodged in his office against Mayor William Hale Thompson. The complaint was made by a committee of three man whose names Mr. Clyne refused to reveal.

"All I can say," said Mr. Clyne, "is that three prominent men of Chicago came to my office and laid before me the anti-war and anti-conscription statements attributed to Mayor Thompson, as they have been printed in the newspapers.

"I am giving the matter official consideration. No investigation, however, is necessary. The mayor's statements have been publicly made and publicly printed, and there are no secrets connected with them to be unearthed.

"It is the duty of this office to give consideration to any complaints that may be made against anybody who may be suspected of having infringed against the laws of the United States. I have not read the mayor's statements carefully as yet. I can't say whether or not they are violations of any federal law that may be enforced in war time."

The district attorney said the complainants charged that the mayor had shown himself to be a disloyal citizen and had uttered treasonable expressions.

That no action can be taken by the federal government against the mayor was the prediction of an official of the department of justice in close touch with the matter.

Mayor Thompson was not visibly disturbed by the complaint to the district attorney.

"Why doesn't Clyne read the constitution?" asked the mayor. "That has something in it about free speech. I don't intend to pay any attention to the incident. I shall neither demand the names of the complainants nor a retraction."

Corporation Counsel Ettelson, the mayor's chief legal adviser, asserted that some of the mayor's remarks may have been impolitic, but added that in no case have they been disloyal or treasonable.

When Mr. Clyne learned the mayor had advised him to read the constitution he said he had done so and added:

"I'll bet the mayor never read the constitution in his life."

Some of the comments of the mayor that brought down upon him general condemnation and that apparently caused the citizens' complaint to Mr. Clyne came out in connection with his brusque refusal to invite the Joffre-Viviani party to Chicago. Others of his pro-German utterances were made in connection with the "food conference" he held on Friday.

One of the mayor's remarks was this: "Our national officers seem to have their minds set on seeing how much they can spend and how much food they can ship out," replied the mayor. "It's time they considered their firesides at home."

The mayor read figures from the school census of 1914, showing that of Chicago's population 806,000 have American born parents, 876,000 are foreign born, and 784,000 are American born with foreign born parents.

"Chicago is the sixth largest German city in the world," said the mayor, "the second largest Bohemian, the second largest Swedish, the second largest Norwegian, and the second largest Polish."

"What inference do you draw from that?" the mayor was asked.

"My thought is that when a request is sent to the mayor in times of war to extend an official invitation to some nation engaged in the war in the name of all the people, I think the mayor is presuming considerably when he takes the position that all the people are in favor of this invitation."

"We're a part of this war now," suggested an interviewer.

"Are we?"

The mayor attacked conscription—said we should keep our food, etc., at home—and spoke for "neutrality" in general.

From almost every point in the compass criticism and condemnation is being heaped upon the mayor as a result of his "conscientious objections" to the war and the Wilson policy of waging it.

Members of the city council are receiving many letters condemning the mayor as out of keeping with the times. Here is an extract from a letter to a south side alderman:

"I appreciate your good attempts to discount the pro-German attitude of a number of our traitorous representatives—municipal, state, and federal. It must be a pleasant heritage for their children to know that the father of the family was just a common, pothouse, copperhead politician.

"More power to your elbow, and I hope that when Joffre comes here that his arrival will demonstrate that the loyal, patriotic, decent citizen body is much more important and much more numerous than that represented by our ass of a mayor."

The foregoing was signed by Dr. Casey Wood, who has an office in the Chicago Savings Bank building. W. P. Morrow, 4343 North Robey street, wrote to the mayor, saying that he, "like thousands of other deluded voters, assisted in electing you mayor." He berated the mayor for "broken preelection promises" and criticized his recent speeches bearing on the international situation as "pro-German to a degree."

The mayor was shown an editorial from THE TRIBUNE of yesterday asserting that "Mayor Thompson seems to have seceded from the United States."

"Any one who holds public office and does not concur in the views of the metropolitan press can expect abuse," he commented.

The executive was told that official Washington is reported to be amazed at the executive's lack of cordiality toward the distinguished English and French representatives who are planning to visit Chicago.

"I guess," said the mayor, "official Washington was amazed, too, when the speaker of the house said an attempt was being made to bulldoze the draft bill through congress."

"Do you believe in the views of Speaker Clark?"

"I don't know enough about his views to discuss them," was the answer, "but I admire a man like Champ Clark, who has enough courage to express his convictions."

CITIZENS ANGRY OVER MAYOR'S SNUB TO JOFFRE

Of Many Interviewed Not One Supports Gate Closing.

Mayor Thompson's refusal to invite the French commission to Chicago on his own initiative and his remarks on the food embargo were freely and indignantly discussed throughout the city yesterday.

Some expressions of opinion by Chicagoans follow:

"At a time like this the motto of the mayor of the second city of the nation should be 'America first,' but Mayor Thompson seems to have adopted the motto 'We Willielms must together sticken,'" said Vernon R. Loucks of the law firm of Atwood, Pease & Loucks in a letter to THE TRIBUNE.

Enclosed Find Check.

"Beg to enclose herewith check for $10 toward fund to deport Mayor Thompson to Germany, where he will be among his friends," Loucks added. "I think the expense should be borne by the citizens of Chicago, rather than by the government." The check was returned.

"I think Mayor Thompson's action at this time is very remarkable," said Mrs. Emmons Blaine.

Miss Jane Addams, head of Hull house, said she had been ill and had refused to grant interviews on any subject.

Mrs. John W. O'Leary, regent of the local chapter of the D. A. R., said that her organization was standing back of the president and the administration in the action taken and had unanimously urged congress to legislate for universal military service.

His Reasons Foggy.

"As we are standing back of the government, our cities should be thrown open to the distinguished representatives of our allies," she said. "I can't understand Mayor Thompson's reasons. I cannot see where he has anything to gain by not inviting the French commission to Chicago. If he did it to capture the German vote, I think he has failed, as he will find the German citizens in Chicago just as loyal as the others. I have moved among them a great deal, and I have not found a single exception."

"I think he was overconscious," said Judge Theodore Brentano. "It would have been the gracious thing to invite them."

He's All Wrong.

R. F. Benedict, former vice president of the Sons of the Revolution, said: "Mayor Thompson is all wrong. This is an American city and our allies should be welcomed warmly."

"Maybe Mayor Thompson's action was inspired by things I don't know about," said Henry R. Rathbone, president of the Hamilton club. "I cannot imagine, though, what they could be. I know that the Hamilton club has placed its clubhouse and its entire membership at the disposal of the general committee to receive and entertain the distinguished Frenchmen."

William R. Odell, vice president of the Chicago club, said:

"The Chicago club has extended the courtesies of the club to the visiting allies, and we have sent a telegram to the secretary of state asking him, on behalf of the club, to urge the commission to visit Chicago. Mayor Thompson's action in refusing to invite the commission is incomprehensible to me."

Seek His Resignation.

J. M. Dickinson, former secretary of war, sent his thanks to the writer of the editorial on Mayor Thompson in THE TRIBUNE yesterday morning, and said that a petition to ask him to resign should be started.

"I wish that THE TRIBUNE had called him his real name—a traitor, and of the worst kind," said Mr. Dickinson.

Bishop Samuel Fallows said he agreed with that and would be willing to sign a petition asking for his resignation.

J. Paul Goode of the University of Chicago said: "It is not right to mention his name in polite society."

LAUNCHES DRIVE FOR 150,000 IN RED CROSS HERE

Wacker Appeals to All to Support Flag of Mercy.

In a campaign for 150,000 members, the Red Cross was represented by Charles H. Wacker, who in the Roosevelt meeting last night declared that "in all our wretched state of unpreparedness there is no unreadiness more glaring than in the Red Cross—the only humanitarian side of the whole terrible mess of war."

"Soon our sons may go out to battle for our flag," he said. "Shall we not see to it that our starry flag is backed and bulwarked by that other flag—the banner of mercy?

All the World Loves It.

"The Red Cross flag! All the world loves it. Its white field proclaims succor and humanity. In its center blazes the crimson cross of blood sacrifice and devotion.

"Chicago, second city of the land, stands twelfth in Red Cross members; even Bridgeport and Columbus excel us and Des Moines crowds us close.

"Chicago is at the verge of a smashing drive for Red Cross members. We have set the mark at 150,000 new names—and we must do at least that for our flag and our city's honor.

"We shall ask for $10 and $25 and $100 memberships of thousands of our city's prosperous men and women, and for $1 and $2 annual memberships from the rank and file.

Asks Aid of Every One.

"It shall not be said that Chicago does for those abroad what it will not do for its own sons and daughters, for its own firesides, for its own heroes.

"That is why we must have the instant and hearty support of all Chicago, of its newspapers, and its news boys, of its bankers and its office boys, of all its classes and peoples and factions, solidly united in a vast work of mercy.

"LIBERTY LOAN" TO BE NAME OF U. S. BOND ISSUE

Washington, D. C., April 28.—The great loan which the United States is about to raise by the bond issue soon to be announced will go down in history, Secretary McAdoo announced tonight, officially designated as "the liberty loan of 1917."

This name was selected by Mr. McAdoo because the money derived from the loan will be spent, to the last dollar, in the fight which democracy is waging against autocracy. No more suitable name could be found, Secretary McAdoo believes. Many have been suggested, but the one selected, Mr. McAdoo says, not only characterizes the purpose to which it will be devoted, but brings to mind a vivid and clear cut mental picture of America's purpose in entering the war.

The terms of the liberty loan will be announced within forty-eight hours unless present plans are changed.

OBJECT TO ROOT GOING TO RUSSIA

New York, April 28.—[Special.]—Attacks on the choice of Elihu Root to head the commission from this nation to Russia have appeared in two Russian newspapers of this city.

The Russkoye Slovo, in an article signed by Mark Esimoelch, has termed it a "most unfortunate selection," while the Novy Miru, a socialist daily, calls it an "insult to free Russia."

The fact that Mr. Root when he was in the senate offered an amendment to an immigration bill that, it is charged, would have barred Russian revolutionists from entering this country is one of the points adduced against him.

GERMANS FUSS AT HOME OVER PEACE TERMS

BY CYRIL BROWN.

(Copyright: 1917: By Press Publishing Company (New York World).)

COPENHAGEN, April 28.—With a decisive battle staged in the west and apparently good for an all summer run, the factional Germans are waxing as bitterly controversial over the war aims as if peace were actually imminent.

The phenomenon of an impassioned polemic over annexation or no annexation, indemnity or no indemnity, at the very climax of the war and with all the argumentative factions pleading for internal unity, in view of the fact that the fate of the empire is hanging in the balance, could only happen in Germany, where the continual confidence in the strength of their military position is such that the Germans feel they can indulge with impunity in fighting behind the front over the peace terms.

Differences Unbridgable.

An interesting feature of the interior political struggle is that the cleavage of public opinion is so marked as apparently to be unbridgable by any compromise which the chancellor might make and that public opinion is consequently separating and navigating toward the two extreme storm centers of Conservatives and Socialists, whose views of peace are poles apart.

Extremes meet, however, in the common determination to seize the present moment and force the chancellor to come out in the open and state the government's concrete war aims. The Socialists are pressing Bethmann-Hollweg hard and bitterly, so hard as to state today that he is unequivocally opposed to annexation in both east and west.

Demands of Socialists.

The Socialists want the chancellor to go even further and go on record as seeking no war indemnity; and there is a strong Socialist movement to force the chancellor to formulate Germany's war aims specifically as the inevitable basis for further peace propaganda; the Socialist attitude also demands immediate inner political reforms and vague hints at trouble if their demands are not complied with speedily, the present temper of the Social Democratic masses being such as to cause justifiable concern to the imperial government, which has just had a foretaste of the strike possibilities, even though revolution is unthinkable.

The Conservatives and other annexationists, for their part, are putting up the strongest kind of fight against the Socialist and democratic efforts to force the chancellor to side openly with them. The Conservative publicists and leaders see the fatherland driving toward the brink of the abyss and in patriotic alarm brand the Socialists' tide as catastrophical if allowed to continue unstemmed.

Nobody Loves a Chancellor.

They call loudly upon the chancellor to play the strong man and make front against the Socialist menace, while Bethmann-Hollweg, vainly trying to pour the soothing oil of semi-official rhetoric in the Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung on the ruffled partisan sea, is continuing his policy of delay and procrastination in the matter of war aims and peace conditions, thus satisfying neither side.

While not making himself any more loved by the Conservatives and pan-Germans, he is still further alienating his already disillusioned liberal and Socialist supporters. Throughout the present peace controversy I have heard not one good word said for the chancellor, whose position is apparently becoming one of splendid isolation.

It is worth noting that, for practical purposes, there no longer exists in Germany any internal political censorship, and the press enjoys at least perfect freedom to discuss war aims and peace conditions. This has resulted in a remarkable volume of peace talk, and there is significance, too, in the increasing number of German voices, authoritative and otherwise, proclaiming that peace is nearer than is generally believed.

JOFFRE COMING; MAYOR'S PLAINT LOST IN CLAMOR

Council, Governor, and Massmeeting Join in the Invitation.

MAYOR WON'T VETO.

Twelve of the seventy council members were absent, according to the city clerk's record. The absentees were Kenna, Hickey, Gross, Powers, Fiok, Wallace, Haderlein, Ellison, Roeder, W. J. Lynch, Rea, and Hazen.

The only discussion on the floor of the council involved adding more names to the reception committee. It was finally decided to increase the committee already announced by appointing the following: Gordon Ramsay, George W. Dixon, A. Stamford White, Homer K. Galpin, President Kasmier Zychlinski of the Polish National alliance, President Peter Bosterkowski of the Polish Roman Catholic union, and all public officials of Chicago and Cook county.

"I voted 'no' because I didn't want to have an affirmative vote construed as favoring a prosecution of the war," explained Ald. Kennedy. "Personally I have no objection to the British or French coming here."

SEES SUFFERING AHEAD.

During the day the mayor said:

"I wouldn't be surprised to see flour selling at $25 a barrel within the year.

"If the government doesn't step in, I can only see the greatest suffering this country has ever seen. Even at $25 a barrel there won't be enough flour to go around. I am doing all in my power so that when the time comes I can feel that I have done everything possible to prevent this suffering. My father used to tell me it was bad policy to save at the spigot and spend at the bung. The bung now is the exportation of foodstuffs in unlimited quantities. Last Sunday more wheat was exported from Chicago than could be raised on 400,000 acres."

Just prior to the council meeting a man named McKinney nearly started a riot by his belligerent pacifism.

"You are trying to force this country into war at the behest of Wall street," he shouted at Ald. W. O. Nance.

"You lie," replied Dr. Nance, and a patrolman hustled the intruder out of the council anteroom.

LOWDEN'S INVITATION.

The governor's formal invitation to the French delegation was addressed to Secretary of State Lansing, as follows:

"In the name of the state of Illinois I wish now to renew formally the invitation personally extended in my name by Maj. Robert R. McCormick, to the illustrious members of the French commission now in Washington, to visit Illinois. The citizens of this state are eager to do honor to the representatives of France. I wish also to concur heartily in the invitation issued today by the city of Chicago, and to assure the French commission of the most hearty welcome.

"FRANK O. LOWDEN, Governor."

SENATOR LEWIS' TELEGRAM.

Senator Lewis wired from Washington to the mayor as follows:

Washington, April 28, 1:48 p. m.—I beg to inform you that at the instance of business associations and social clubs of Chicago I have pressed upon state department invitations for the British and French commissions to visit Chicago. I am now assured by proper sources that if the city council invites the commission officially by the mayor and council, the commissions will come. This is the most appropriate method. May I beg you to consider such action.

JAMES HAMILTON LEWIS.

SENTIMENT OF MASS MEETING.

At the Roosevelt massmeeting in the stockyards at night resolutions introduced by W. T. Abbott were adopted unanimously asking that both the French and British commissions visit Chicago. These resolutions were:

"Resolved, That this great meeting of the citizens of Chicago, called together by the National Security league, with all the enthusiasm of a common purpose, indorse the invitation extended by Frank O. Lowden, governor of Illinois, and the city government to Minister of Justice Viviani and Marshal Joffre of the French commission and the Hon. Arthur J. Balfour of the British commission and their distinguished associates to visit Chicago and personally meet its people; that whatever else may occupy their time and attention while here, we urgently request that their presence and their valued counsel from such of their number as will speak directly to its people at a meeting to be held in Chicago at their convenience.

"Resolved, That in anticipation of their favorable answer and entire cooperation, in the same spirit that the invitation is expressed, the president of the National Security league shall appoint such committees and with such authority, as may best carry into effect the purpose and the intent of this resolution."

INVITATION FROM KANSAS CITY.

Kansas City, Mo., April 28.—Governors of two states and the mayor of Kansas City today asked members of the French and British commissions now in this country to visit the "typical American municipality." Gov. Capper of Kansas, Gov. Gardner of Missouri, and Mayor Edwards of Kansas City extended the invitations.

CHAMP RAMPANT

Speaker Says He and His Double Barreled Shotgun Will Run His Critics Out of Missouri District.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 28. [Special.]—Speaker Champ Clark, during the late night debate, let loose his wrath on those of his constituents who have been sending him messages demanding that he support the president's conscription plan. Rising with blazing eyes, the Missourian shouted to the house:

"A lot of old skunkers all over the country who think that nobody is going to be forced into this war except boys from 19 to 25, and that their miserable, cowardly hides will be safe, have been sending telegrams here.

"I know them. I know every man in my district who has telegraphed me, and I know who is at the bottom of it, and I can take a double barreled shotgun and run out of my district every man who sent me a telegram to vote for conscription, and, if school doesn't keep too long, I will run a few out, too."

Oklahoma Indians, 5,000 Strong, Ready to Enlist

McAlester, Okla., April 28.—[Special.]—All the Choctaws who are eligible to serve in the army under the age limits in the army bill before congress are preparing to enlist. Victor Locke, principal chief of the tribe, said today:

"Those who are too old or too young to serve are planting crops to help feed the army."

There are nearly 25,000 Choctaws living under the tribal government. About 5,000 young men would enlist.

"NEVER HIT SOFT," COLONEL TELLS THOUSANDS AT STOCKYARDS

Col. Roosevelt's chief address, delivered in the evening at the stockyards auditorium, was as follows:

Col. Roosevelt's address at the stock yards auditorium in full is as follows:

"I come here tonight to appeal to the people of the great west, the people of the Mississippi valley, the people who are the spiritual heirs of the men who stood behind Lincoln and Grant.

"You men and women who live beside the great lakes and on the lands drained by the Ohio, the Mississippi, and the Missouri have always represented what is most intensely American in our national life. When once waked up to actual conditions you have always stood with unfaltering courage and iron endurance for the national honor and the national interest.

Women's Courage High.

"I appeal to the sons and daughters of the men and women of the civil war, to the grandsons and granddaughters of the pioneers; I appeal to the women as much as to the men, for our nation has risen level to every great crisis only because in every such crisis the courage of its women flamed as high as the courage of the men.

"I appeal to you to take the lead in making good the president's message of the 2d of this month, in which he set forth the reasons why it was our unescapable duty to make war upon Germany. It rests with us—with the American people—to make that message one of the great state documents of our history.

"Let us accept the lessons it teaches. Let us grasp what it says as to the frightful wrongs Germany has committed upon us and upon the weaker nations of mankind, and the damage she has wrought to the whole fabric of civilization and of international good faith and morality.

Emulate Our Founders.

"Then let us steel our hearts and gird our loins to show that we are fit to stand among the free people whose freedom is buttressed by their self-reliant strength. Let us show by our deeds that we are fit to be the heirs of the men who founded the republic, and of the men who saved the republic; of the continentals who followed Washington, and of the men who wore the blue under Grant and the gray under Lee.

"But, mind you, the message, the speech, will amount to nothing unless we make it good, and it can be made good only by the high valor of our fighting men, and by the resourceful and laborious energy of the men and women who, with deeds, not merely words, back up the fighting men.

"We read the declaration of independence every Fourth of July because, and only because, the soldiers of Washington made that message good by their blood during the weary years of war that followed. If, after writing the declaration of independence, the men of '76 had failed with their bodies to make it good, it would be read now only with contempt and derision.

Patriots' Words Made Good.

"Our children still learn how Patrick Henry spoke for the heart of the American people when he said, 'Give me liberty or give me death,' but this generation is thrilled by his words only because the Americans of those days showed in very fact that they were ready to accept death rather than lose their liberty.

"In Lincoln's deathless Gettysburg speech and second inaugural he solemnly pledged the honor of the American people to the hard and perilous task of preserving the union and freeing the slaves.

"The pledge was kept. The American people fought to a finish the war which saved the union and freed the slave. If Lincoln and the men and women behind him had wavered, if they had grown faint-hearted and had shrunk from the fight, or had merely paid others to fight for them, they would have earned for themselves and for us the scorn of the nations of mankind.

"The words of Lincoln will live forever only because they were made good by the deeds of the fighting men.

Keep Flag on Firing Line.

"So it is now. We can make the president's message of April 2 stand among the great state papers in our history; but we can do so only if we make the message good; and we can make it good only if we fight with all our strength now, at once; if at the earliest possible moment we put the flag on the firing line and keep it there, over a constantly growing army, until the war closes by a peace which brings victory to the great cause of democracy and civilization, the great cause of justice and fair play among the peoples of the world.

"We Americans are at war. Now let us fight. Let us make it a real war, not a dollar war. Let us show that we have the manhood to pay with our own bodies, and not merely to hire other men to pay with their bodies. Let us fight at once.

"Let us put the flag at the front now, at the earliest moment, and not merely announce that we are going to fight a year or two hence.

Universal Service Vital.

"I most earnestly and heartily stand by the proposal of the president to raise an army on the principle of universal obligatory military training and military service, demanded as a right, not as a favor, from all the young men of the country capable of bearing arms.

"This is the principle I have long advocated with all fervor of conviction. It is the only really democratic principle on which permanently to shape the military policy of this country. To have it adopted as the permanent principle of our national military policy will be of incalculable service to our national peace and welfare.

"Moreover, if the war lasts, as well it may, for one or two or three years, the army, to see it through, must be raised in this fashion.

"It is vitally essential, both from the standpoint of fighting this war through to a successful conclusion, if it should last a long time, and from the standpoint of our permanent national safety and democratic welfare, that we should immediately inaugurate this principle and set about raising a great army in accordance therewith.

Troops to Europe Early.

"Such an army will naturally need a long time to train, and at the earliest moment we should begin to devote our strength and energy to calling it into being and training it. This should be the task which we treat as of prime importance.

"But most emphatically we should not rest content with this. We should not rest content with merely preparing an army to act a year or eighteen months or two years hence. Let us put the flag on the firing line at the earliest possible moment, this summer, wherever our services are most needed—in France or Flanders or the Balkan peninsula.

"It need only be a small army at first. But even a division would be better than nothing. Then we can constantly keep that division filled, and other divisions from time to time added to it; until, a year hence, if the war continues, we have a really formidable fighting force at the front, a fighting force which will be steadily increased month by month, year by year, until the triumph comes.

Supplement by Volunteers.

To do this it is necessary that we should appeal for volunteers, not in any way as a substitute for, but as a supplement to, the administration's plan for raising an army in accordance with the principle of obligatory universal service.

"If the system of universal obligatory training and service had already been in existence here for a number of years, and if in other ways we had been prepared in advance, we could by this time have had an expeditionary force of 1,000,000 men under way for the front, ready to strike the finishing blow.

"But the system does not yet exist, and, necessarily, all kinds of preliminaries will have to be gone through before it can now be called into being and an effective army of large size raised under it.

"Therefore, to wait for it before really entering into the war means an indefinite delay, a delay that might bring us to the end, not merely of the campaign this year, but of the campaign next year before we can strike hard and effectively.

"Let Those Go Who Want To."

"I wish to see the system of obligatory service used in order to make all men serve who ought to serve. It would be a capital mistake to use it in such fashion as merely to prevent men rendering service when they wish to render it and can render it, and ought to render it.

"Do not let any one volunteer to stay at home. But do not hinder men, who, under conscription, would be entitled to stay at home, from volunteering to go to the front if they can render good service.

"Under the bill proposed to congress by the war department, many millions of excellent fighting men would be exempt from service, while a long time would elapse before the others are sent to the front.

"Under these conditions we ought to use the volunteer system to fill the gap; it opens to us at once a great possibility; let it be used, and used exclusively, to give to those who would otherwise be exempt an opportunity to go to the front without claiming exemption.

Do Our Own Fighting.

"Congress has passed, without a dissenting vote, a bill to appropriate $7,000,000,000 as representing part of our contribution to the great war. This is fine; but only on condition that we also put our men into the fighting line.

"Half of this great sum is to go to the allies; that is, it is to be spent by them in getting their men up against the German and Austrian and Turkish shells and bullets.

"Now, we Americans have always prided ourselves on being able to do our own fighting. It is right to help others to fight in the common cause for which we are engaged. But it is even more necessary that we should fight ourselves.

"We fight for our own rights. We fight for the rights of mankind. This great struggle is fundamentally a struggle for the fundamentals of civilization and democracy. The future of the free institutions of the world is at stake. The free people who govern themselves are lined up against the governments which deny freedom to their people.

"Our cause is the cause of humanity. But we also have bitter wrongs of our own which it is our duty to redress. Our women and children and unarmed men, going about their peaceful business, have been murdered on the high seas, not once, but again and again and again.

"With brutal insolence, after having for well nigh two years persevered in this policy, Germany has announced that she will continue it, at our expense and at the expense of other neutrals, more ruthlessly than ever.

Leave Heritage of Pride.

"I ask that we send a fighting force over to the fighting line at the earliest possible moment, and I ask it in the name of our children and our children's children, so that they may hold their heads high over the memory of what this nation did in the world's great crisis.

"I ask it for reasons of national morality no less than for our material self-interest. I ask it for the sake of our self-respect, our self-esteem.

"Our children will have to read the history of what we have done during this war. Let us make the chapter that yet remains to be written one that our children shall read with pride; and they will read it only with a feeling of self-abasement unless they read that in the times that tried men's souls we have shown valor and endurance and proud indifference to life when the honor of the flag and the welfare of mankind were at stake.

Not Dollars Alone.

"Put the flag on the firing line, and valiant men behind it; and keep it there, sending over a constantly growing stream of valiant men to aid those who have first gone.

"In the civil war there were many men who went to the front to pay with their bodies for the high faith of their souls. There were some men who hired others to go as substitutes to the front.

"Which ones among these men are the ones to whom we look back with pride—those who faced the bullets or those who paid with dollars to buy the willingness and ability of other men to face them? There is no need to answer.

"In exactly the same way there should be no need to answer now the question as to whether we are merely to spend billions of dollars to help others fight or to stand in the fighting line ourselves.

"By all means spend the money. A prime essential is to furnish the allies all the cargo ships they need for food and all the craft they need to help hunt down the submarines. By all means aid them with food and ships and money, and speedily; but do not stop there.

Show That We Can Fight.

"Show that we can fight, as well as furnish dollars and vegetables to fighting men. At the earliest possible moment send an expeditionary force abroad, show our German foes and our allied friends that we are in this war in deadly earnest, that we have put the flag on the firing line, and that we shall steadily increase the force behind that flag to any limit necessary in order to bring the peace of victory in this great contest for democracy, for civilization, and for the rights of free peoples.

"Now that we are at war, let us make it a real war, not a make-believe war, not a war of limited liability. Germany has been in a state of war with us for two years, but so far we have only been at the receiving end of the game.

Never Hit Soft.

"No fight ever was won yet except by hitting. A good rule to remember is never to hit if it is possible to avoid it, but above all things never to hit soft. We have gone into the fight; we have determined to hit, and we must not hit soft.

"Three months have passed since we broke off diplomatic relations with Germany. Read the history of the opening months of the war and you will get a vivid idea of what the German army would have done to us during those three months if we had had only our own unprepared strength to defend us.

"We owe our safety at this moment to the British fleet and the French and British armies. I, for one, am not content to rest under that kind of obligation, and I do not believe that my fellow countrymen are content to rest under it.

"I wish to see us owe our safety to our own strength and our own courage and to the respect we inspire in our foe. We shall inspire no respect if we merely try to parry that foe's blows and not to return them.

"It would be a scandal and a shame if the war ended now with our part in it limited to having furnished dollars behind the shield of other men's bodies. We are in the war. Let us fight it through ourselves, with our own strength and courage, to a triumphant conclusion.

Immense Moral Effect.

"So I ask that we at once send a force over to the fighting line primarily for our own sakes. Even if the allies asked us merely to furnish them with money and foodstuffs, such a request would imply so galling a contempt for our manhood that I would with equal scorn refuse it; I would answer that in war as in peace I put the man above the dollar, and would not rest content to see America make this on her own part merely a dollar war, instead of a man's war.

"I have already seen in the public press the statement from the French minister of war that he confidently expects us to send troops to the battle line. In a letter just received from James Bryce he urges me to support as 'specially useful' two steps, of which the first one is 'the dispatch of an American force to the theater of war. The moral effect of the appearance in the war line of an American force would be immense.'

"From France, England, and Canada, from the highest sources, I have been told the same thing.

Send Volunteers First.

"Our regular army is so small that such a force, if sent abroad at the earliest moment, ought to consist largely of volunteers. Of course, no incompetent men should be given commissions; but to refuse competent men commissions for fear of lack of strength of mind to refuse the incompetent is at the outset to confess incompetency to handle armies.

"By all means let us set our house in order here at home. Let us obey the president's exhortation and put a stop to waste. Let us do as he outlines in furnishing money and ships and food to the allies. Let us furnish the war-craft necessary to hunt down the submarines wherever the British admiralty deems that this service can best be rendered and in whatever manner it desires.

"Let us, if necessary by governmental action, see that the fullest use is made of the soil and the largest possible production obtained therefrom. Let us see that skilled workers are employed wherever they can do most good, and all our industrial establishments and transportation lines used to the utmost.

No Improper Profits.

"Let us see that there is no improper or excessive profiteering by those whose business activities are stimulated by the war.

"Let us, even in war time, strive efficiently, by legislation and administration and through the activities of private associations and organizations, to secure a larger social and industrial justice for the men who actually toil, the workingmen on the soil and in industry; the wage workers and the farmers; so that we may show by our deeds that this is their country, the country of all of us, where the welfare of every honest and hard working man is the prime object of government, where the flag means justice, and fair play, and reasonable equality of opportunity to all, and where, in consequence, we have a right to expect, and, if necessary, to exact, from all the fullest measure of loyal service to the flag.

"Do all this; and yet remember that it is all of little avail unless we also show by the valor of our fighting men at the front that there is in us the great quality which makes us willing and eager to do and dare and die at need for the things we hold sacred.

Appeals to All Americans.

"I make my appeal to all Americans without distinction of creed or of national origin, of birthplace, or of the section in which they live. In time of war like this all party distinctions vanish, and I know only those who are for America and those who are against America.

"I make my appeal to northener and southerner, to easterner and westerner. I appeal equally to the Protestant and the Catholic, to the Gentile and the Jew, and to the men whose fealty to the great laws of righteousness is given outside the limits of any recognized creed.

"I care not a rap whether the man was born here or abroad. I care not a rap whether his forefathers came from England, Ireland, Scotland, from Germany, France, or Scandinavia.

"But I demand that this single hearted loyalty be given to the one flag that floats over all of us, the flag which we are bound to reverence and hold dear to the exclusion of every other.

Heed National Honor.

"We are a new nation, by blood and culture akin to, but different from, every nation of Europe. We are in honor bound in every crisis to judge every other nation by its conduct in that crisis.

"We are bound to pay heed only to our own national honor and need and to the just interests of mankind as a whole—the interests of the men and women now existing, and of the generations yet unborn. We are in honor bound to be swerved from our duty neither by improper friendship for nor unworthy antipathy toward any other nation.

"I speak as a man who himself has German blood in his veins. The American of the future will have in his veins the blood of many different nationalities, and he will not be American at all unless he is loyal to the principle of the American of the past, who opposed any nationality, if that nationality was a foe to his country and to humanity.

"The Americans who followed Washington in his first campaign fought against Frenchmen. The Americans who followed him at Trenton fought against Germans. The Americans who followed him at Princeton and Yorktown fought against Englishmen. His followers included men of English descent, like Lighthorse Harry Lee and Greene; of German descent, like Muhlenberg; of Irish descent, like Sullivan.

All Americans; Nothing More!

"But they were all Americans and nothing more! They treated one another each on his worth as a man without regard to that man's creed or blood. When they were pitted against an enemy they did not ask as to his national origin, but only as to whether he was an enemy of their common country and of that country's flag.

"Twice we have fought Great Britain; and in each case the immense majority of our citizens of British origin were undividedly loyal to the United States. And now, when we fight Germany, I know I utter the sentiments of the immense majority of my fellow citizens of German origin when I say that their undivided allegiance is given to the stars and stripes and to the nation for which the banner stands.

"I appeal especially to the descendants of those heroes of liberty, the Germans of '48. We battle now for freedom and justice in exactly the spirit of the men of '48 who so valiantly stood against tyranny.

Appeals for Division.

"If I am allowed to raise the division for which I have asked I most earnestly hope that it will have as large a proportion as possible of Americans who are in whole or like myself, in part, of German blood. The other day I was with the head of the war college at Washington, Gen. Kuhn. He is of pure German blood, his father and his mother being born in Germany. But he is an American, and nothing else!

"I would welcome the chance, if I am allowed to raise a division, to serve with that division under him at the front; and I would ask no favor of any kind save thus to serve with him and to be judged on my merits by him for my service.

"In similar fashion I would gladly serve under Gen. Barry, who is with you here in Chicago, and who is of Irish parentage; or under Gen. Pershing, or, of course, with deep enthusiasm under my old friend and commander, Gen. Leonard Wood, who like Pershing is of revolutionary stock; or under any other men of the same type.

"Each of the men I have named has held my commission when I was president; and I would wish nothing more at the close of my active career than the chance to serve under one of them or under any other officer of their type. They differ in blood and in creed among themselves and from me. But they and I are Americans and nothing else. Our lives are actuated by the same principles of honor, and our undivided loyalty is given to the same flag.

Asks Chance to Go Soon.

"I have asked leave to be allowed to raise a division to take to the front in the first expeditionary force, under the commander of that force; a division which, after two or three months' preliminary training here, can be taken for intensive training to France, and then put into the trenches at the earliest possible moment that the allied generals deem it fit to render service. I ask that I be allowed to join with others who feel as I do in making good the president's message.

"I ask that I and those dearest to me and closest to me by blood shall be given the chance to prove the truth of our endeavor and be sent at the earliest possible moment under the flag to the firing line.

Wants to Share Hazard.

"I have led a regiment in battle and commanded a brigade on active service, and since then I have been the commander in chief of the army and navy of the United States. Let me raise a division to serve in an army corps under its chief, or to serve in command of a brigade under the division chief.

"Let me be given the authority to help raise the division or the army corps and to serve under whoever is appointed over me, but let me be put in the position where I can say to the men I address that I do not merely ask them to go to the front, but to come with me to the front; that I am to be allowed the great privilege of sharing with them the hardship and the hasard.

"Remember, friends, that what I am asking is not in any way as a substitute for, but as a supplement to, the plan for a great army to be raised on the principle of universal obligatory military service, a plan which I favor with all my heart.

"I do not ask for men in the classes which would be taken under the administration's plan for an army raised under the obligatory system. I ask for men who would not otherwise be allowed to go.

The Favor He Asks.

"The force I propose to raise would represent an absolute addition to the nation's military strength, an addition which could be used at once, which would serve to put the flag and keep the flag on the firing line during the time that the great army itself was being raised, and while our flag would otherwise not be on the firing line.

"The favor I ask is the great favor of being allowed to render a service which I believe that my record entitles me to say that I am able to render.

"I ask to be allowed effectively to do my part in showing that the Americans of today are worthy of the great heritage bequeathed to them by their fathers who lived in the days of Lincoln, and their forefathers who lived in the days of Washington; that we are loyal to the spirit of the mighty men of the past; and that we, too, as freemen who prize beyond measure our freedom and who feel that the enjoyment of rights and the observance of duties go hand in hand, are eager, in our turn, to prove that those who are fit to live are not afraid to die."

British Forge On and Mow Down Foe, Who Charge Into Sure Death.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, April 28, via London.—There has been desperate fighting along the British front today, and the Germans, thoroughly spurred on by the declarations of Field Marshal von Hindenburg that they must hold their present positions at all costs, are making a resistance more stubborn than any heretofore encountered.

All tactical points captured in the first forward rush by the British the Germans have been ordered into counter attacks with reckless disregard for loss of life. The battle was still in progress late today and it was possible near Oppy to see at one time no less than five gray waves of Germans blindly facing the British fire in an attempt to retake their lost positions.

Heavy shells broke upon them in a most explosive torrent, and where each shell burst great gaps were cut in the ranks of the oncoming men.

Galling Fire Riddles Germans.

Those who penetrated the British barrage from the larger calibered guns were met by field-gun fire and mown down under continuous sprays of machine gun bullets. Under this galling fire the attack utterly broke down.

In some places there was ferocious hand to hand fighting. The British got home with the bayonet, but there was no lack of fighting in which even bayonets were forgotten and the men went at each other's throats and eyes. Many Germans went to their death from blows with rifle butts.

Although the fighting was wholly obscured by great clouds of dust, the whole battlefields of ten days ago have completely disappeared.

The dust raised by the barrage fire resembled an approaching storm. Shrapnel bullets pelted the dry earth like a heavy leaden drops of rain, and great columns of dust seemed to spring from the earth everywhere.

Attack Begun at Dawn.

The attack began with the coming of dawn. It extended in an easterly direction from Vimy Ridge at its northern point and ran southward to the Scarpe. Progress was made everywhere, and the so-called Oppy-Mericourt line, which protects the Drocourt switch to the Hindenburg line, was pierced again.

The Canadians, who had been more or less resting since they swept the Germans off both slopes of Vimy Ridge on Easter Monday, made a brilliant assault against Arleux-En-Gohelle and entered that village and held it against all counter attacks.

The British also crossed the German trench west of Oppy and there was fierce fighting about that village all day.

Secure New Positions.

Southeast of Oppy is a gradually rising knoll known as Greenland hill, which looks down into the Scarpe valley.

The British swept on to this hill today, and although it was bitterly contested they were late today secure in their newly won positions.

The chemical works on the Arras-Douai railway just north of the village of Roeux, which was another particular spot in the fighting, changed hands several times. Up to a few days ago the chemical works stood up prominently on the landscape, with a great chimney rising more than a hundred feet. Today it is only a mass of ruins, the chimney having crashed under the weight of the heavy shelling.

When the correspondent left the fighting about 800 prisoners had been sent to the rear, with possibly more to come. The fighting, however, was not of a nature which would result in a great haul of prisoners. Almost everywhere it was fight to the death.

Routed Again at Monchy.

The German chagrin over the loss of Monchy-le-Preux seems to grow rather than abate as the British retain possession of it and considerable territory beyond it.

Late last night the Germans launched two violent and heavy attacks against the British position east of the town. Two new German divisions just brought into the line, and said to be composed of the best Wurtemberger units, were flung into this fighting. They were literally cut to bits and failed to gain even an outpost.

The fighting was in close order at times and the British rifle fire had much to do with the final rout of the Germans.

Gavrelle also was violently counter attacked today during a British assault to the north of that village. One can easily lose track of the number of these attacks against Gavrelle in the last few days, but the German effort this morning must have been the fourteenth or fifteenth. At no time during the Somme battle were such efforts made to regain lost ground.

American Fliers Prepare!

With the British artillery roaring tonight over a vast front, its ranges carefully and precisely calculated from airplane observations, aviation officers discussed whether American could aid in the air.

American flyers, they were a unit in saying, will be welcomed immediately. But the warning they all voiced is that America must begin at once to prepare. It should start training for a great armada for 1918.

But while America is preparing for next year in its aerial branch it was suggested on every hand here at the front that it send a large number of officers to join the British and French squadrons and with them obtain actual battle experience. Without this experience, a flyer, no matter how expert in peace times, is utterly unfit to command flying units.

After Americans had undergone such training in actual warfare they would make invaluable commanders of the air fleets which might arrive from the United States.

Not only flyers but American mechanics, riggers, and fitters will be welcomed here. Moreover, they will be worth their weight in gold to American flying crews who come over later.

[From the London Daily Mail.]

We've pushed 'em orf the "Anker,"
We've pushed 'em orf the Somme,
We'll push 'em out o' Belgium
Wiv bay'nit an' wiv bomb.
We've pushed 'em out o' Bagdad
An' into Palestine,
An' glory to the gen'ral
Who can push 'em past the Rhine!

Now fix yer bay'nits ready,
Now fill yer 'aversacks,
Now take yer chargin' steady,
Now shoulder up yer packs;
Now listen for the whistle,
An' see that you're in line,
An' glory to the gen'ral
Who can push 'em past the Rhine!

Now keep a good alignment,
Just as the rule-book tells,
An' never mind the bullets
An' never mind the shells.
Now, can't yer see 'em runnin',
The dirty 'eathen swine?
O! glory to the gen'ral
Who can push 'em past the Rhine!

An' now we're in the village,
A-chargin' down the street,
A-giving okey-pokey
To every 'Un we meet.
O Lord! ain't this a birfday?
O Lordy! ain't it' fine?
O! glory to the gen'ral
Who can push 'em past the Rhine!

We've pushed 'em orf the "Anker,"

WILSON LETTER COMMENDS WAR WORK OF Y. M. C. A.

New York, April 28.—The war work council of the international committee of Young Men's Christian associations held its first meeting here today. Its immediate task is the raising of the $3,000,000 necessary for the support of the association activities in army camps, naval stations, munition plants, and hospitals during the remainder of 1917 and the enlistment and training of at least 1,100 secretaries to carry on this work.

The following letter from President Wilson to Dr. John R. Mott, general secretary of the international committee and of the war work council, was read at the meeting:

"May I not, in view of the approaching meeting of the war work council, express to you the very high value I have attached to the work which has been accomplished by the Young Men's Christian association in behalf of our own army and navy, as well as in behalf of the prisoners of war and the men in the training camps of Europe, and may I not express also my sincere personal interest in the large plans of the war work council for the work which is still ahead of the association?"

It is proposed to erect about 200 association buildings in the army camps throughout the country, each building to serve a brigade and to have a staff of five secretaries.

Parade of 2,500 Marches Through Chicago Heights

All the employés of the Central Locomotive and Car Works and the Parrett Tractor company turned out for a patriotic demonstration in Chicago Heights yesterday. The police force, the fire department, soldiers, boy scouts, school children, and citizens in automobiles—2,500 in all—joined in a parade of the town.

LIKENS DRAFTED MEN TO THIEVES AT CRUCIFIXION

Washington, D. C., April 28.—[Special.]—The bitterness with which some of the pacifists took the defeat of the volunteer bill today was demonstrated by Representative Mason of Illinois. Shortly after the Kahn amendment had been accepted, Mason attacked the administration in a vitriolic speech.

"Take the sugar coat off and let's swallow the bitter pill of servitude," he said, referring to conscription. This brought loud cries of "No! No!" from the house, but Mason kept on.

"Washington was a volunteer," he said, "and Jesus Christ was a volunteer on the cross. The men on each side of him were conscripts."

This comparison of the American youths who will serve under the conscription system to the thieves that were crucified with Christ brought down on Mason the censure of all fair minded men in the house. Groups of congressmen gathered in the lobbies and declared that they had never heard a more sacrilegious statement.

A movement was started to have the remarks "taken down," which is the preliminary to having them expunged from the record, but this movement was blocked by those who declared that the people of Mason's state ought to know just what he had said.

LEAVE OUR LAND ALONE, GERMAN PRICE OF PEACE

COPENHAGEN, April 28.—Germany's conservative newspapers are now talking guarantees against encroachments on Germany's territory as necessary to any peace agreement.

Today the Vossische Zeitung (Berlin) carried a long editorial discussing the semi-official Vienna declaration that Austria was willing to forego all annexation plans in event of peace.

"It is quite different in Germany," the newspaper asserted. "Our armies invaded Russia. Nevertheless, Germany is ready for peace without taking Russian territory. But she must have territorial guarantees."

A number of other Berlin newspapers expressed similar sentiments.

British Blockade About Germany Grows Tighter

Washington, D. C., April 28.—Notice of extension of Great Britain's danger area in the North sea, effective May 3, was received here today in an admiralty note forwarded by the American embassy in London. The last definition of the danger area, dated March 24, is canceled. The new order extends the danger area closer to the North sea coast of Germany and takes in waters bordering on the limit of territorial jurisdiction of Denmark and The Netherlands.

GERMAN BREAK BY GUATEMALA

Washington, D. C., April 28.—[Special.]—Guatemala, one of the dominating Central American republics, has severed diplomatic relations with Germany.

Official notification of this action was given to the state department today by Joaquin Mendez, Guatemalan minister to the United States.

In communicating the news, Minister Mendez offered the United States use of territorial waters, ports, and railways of Guatemala "for use in common defense."

CALL MEETING TO LINK STATES FOR WAR WORK

Delegates to Confer on Co-operation with Defense Body..

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., April 28.—[Special.]—To perfect plans for state councils to work in cooperation on war problems with the council of national defense, forty-eight states are sending delegates to a conference to be held here beginning next Tuesday.

The basic purpose of the conference is to coördinate scattered activity, and, through state units, assist in mobilizing American resources. Plans already are well under way for a countrywide organization under direction of the section of state organization of the defense council with George F. Porter of Chicago as chairman.

"The real work of American participation," a statement issued today by the defense council says, "must be done by the manufacturers, the farmers, and the producers of raw materials. It is the work of the national council, through Mr. Porter's section, to organize these ultimate workers to give most effective assistance to the warmaking powers."

Much Work Already Done.

The council of national defense in its various departments of munitions, labor, raw materials, etc., already has done a tremendous work in gathering data and listing the resources of American industry, but the coöperation of state councils, with subcommittees in close contact with the people of the country is absolutely requisite for complete mobilization.

The council of national defense will recommend at the conference the creation of an executive committee of active men for doing the work of the council and an advisory committee of representative men from the states. The latter will be divided into subcommittees, including finance, sanitation, and medicine, civic relief, food, labor, military service, and transportation.

Local defense committees in each town upon similar subjects probably will be created to complete the network of war organization. The work of coördinating the efforts of local patriotic and aid societies will be one of the most imperative activities of the states.

Governors to Attend Meeting.

The first meeting of the conference will be held in the secretary of war's office. The immediate work will be the forming of state organization plans and the consideration of how the states can best serve in food production and conservation, and in the building of ships. President Wilson will address the conference on Wednesday.

The following governors already have sent word that they would attend: Gov. N. E. Harris of Georgia, Gov. W. L. Harding of Iowa, Gov. Carl E. Milliken of Maine, Gov. Emmet D. Boyle of Nevada, Gov. Walter E. Edge of New Jersey, Gov. Lynn J. Frazier of North Dakota, Gov. Ernest Lister of Washington, Gov. John J. Cornwell of West Virginia, Gov. Moses Alexander of Idaho, Gov. Richard I. Manning of South Carolina.

British Continue to Pound Away Against Foe in the West.

FRENCH FRONT

BRITISH.

LONDON, April 28.—Severe fighting, in which our troops have had the advantage, took place throughout the day from the Scarpe river to the Acheville-Vimy road. We captured Arleux-en-Gohelle and enemy positions on a front of more than two miles north and south of the village.

Our troops also progressed northeast of Gavrelle and the western slopes of Greenland hill, between Gavrelle and Roeux. South of the river we have gained ground north of Monchy-le-Preux.

The enemy again delivered many violent counter attacks with considerable forces and suffered heavily from our artillery and machine gun fire. In the neighborhood of Roeux and Oppy heavy fighting is continuing. Several hundred prisoners were captured during the day.

AVIATION.

Three German airplanes were felled yesterday in air fighting and a fourth was shot down by our anti-aircraft guns. One hostile observation balloon also was destroyed. Three of our airships are missing.

DAY STATEMENT.

British troops occupied half the village of Oppy and Arleux, a trifle further to the north, fell to the attack.

The fighting in this sector continues after a night of never ceasing clash.

After vicious battling, the British retain all ground gained, beating back desperate German counter attacks with tremendous losses.

FRENCH.

PARIS, April 28.—The artillery action was intermittent over the greater part of the front, with violent outbursts between times in the Aisne and Champagne regions.

On the Chemin-Des-Dames we made progress in the neighborhood of Ostel and took prisoners. Everywhere else the day was calm, without infantry actions.

AVIATION.

On April 27 two German airplanes were brought down in an aerial engagement. Six others were compelled to land in a damaged condition. It is confirmed that four German machines reported as damaged were really destroyed by our pilots on April 24 and three others on April 28.

DAY STATEMENT.

Between St. Quentin and the Oise there was heavy artillery fighting during the night. Skirmishes occurred among grenadiers in the advanced positions south of St. Quentin. Near Laffaux the enemy attempted without success a surprise attack against one of our advanced posts.

In the Champagne the artillery fighting was severe. After a violent bombardment the Germans attacked one of our trenches east of Auberive, but were thrown back by the fire of our artillery and machine guns.

On the left bank of the Meuse one of our detachments penetrated the German lines in the sector of Hill 304 and brought back prisoners.

According to the latest information since April 16 French troops have captured 175 cannon of all calibers, 412 machine guns, and 119 trench cannon. The total number of prisoners has reached 20,780.

BELGIAN.

PARIS, April 28.—There was an artillery action in the region of Dixmude.

GERMAN.

BERLIN, April 28.—On the battlefield of Arras the British today for the third time failed completely in their attempt to break through the German lines. The attacks, which began at daybreak, with strong masses on a thirty kilometer front on both banks of the Scarpe, all failed under our fire, and in counter attacks the enemy again suffered a heavy defeat. His losses were very great.

On the Aisne and in Champagne there was an artillery duel of varying intensity.

DAY STATEMENT.

Front of Crown Prince Rupprecht—On both banks of the Scarpe the enemy continued a strong bombardment of our positions and the territory in the rear. We fought the British batteries with appreciable effect.

Yesterday afternoon at Monchy several British attacks broke down before our lines with heavy losses.

Today at dawn the artillery battle increased to extreme violence from Los to St. Quentin. Shortly afterwards, after a drumfire, the infantry battle recommenced on the whole front.

Front of the German crown prince—The situation remains unchanged, with occasional outbursts of strong firing. At Draye the French failed in an attack. At Hurtebise farm we took prisoners and captured machine guns from enemy troops which made an unsuccessful assault. Near Driment and to the north of Theims advances undertaken by the enemy failed.

Front of Duke Albrecht—Nothing important occurred.

AVIATION.

Three enemy airplanes were brought down by our anti-aircraft guns, and two captive balloons were shot down in aerial engagements.

MACEDONIAN FRONT

BULGARIAN.

SOFIA, April 28.—On Friday there was intermittent violent enemy artillery fire between the Vardar and Lake Doiran. The ground in front of our positions still is covered with dead of the enemy, abandoned guns, and other war material.

Reconnoitering raids northeast of Kissoli and east of Doljeli [three miles west of Doiran] resulted in our capturing three machine guns and one mine thrower.

Small detachments of the enemy, supported by violent artillery fire, attempted to advance south of Doiran, but were repulsed.

GERMAN.

BERLIN, April 28.—Owing to rain and to snowfalls in the mountains there was little activity.

FRENCH.

PARIS, April 28.—On the 26th the Bulgarians, after a violent bombardment, succeeded in gaining a temporary foothold in the trenches recently captured by the British troops west of Lake Doiran, but an immediate counter attack drove them out with heavy losses.

The bad weather has grown worse. The snow on the hills has reached a depth of six to eight feet.

BRITISH.

LONDON, April 28.—On the front between Lake Doiran and the Vardar a strong attack by the enemy during Thursday night on our positions situated at the extreme right of the positions gained by us Tuesday night, succeeded in penetrating our trenches, but a counter attack was immediately organized and the enemy was driven out, leaving a large number of dead.

On the Struma front the artillery has been active against villages near our front line.

RUSSIAN FRONT

RUSSIAN.

PETROGRAD, April 28.—The usual rifle firing and patrol operations are reported.

GERMAN.

BERLIN, April 28.—Owing to the pronounced activity of the Russian artillery in the neighborhood of the coast, west of Lutsk, and on the Zlota, Lipa, Narayevka, and Putna rivers, our fire also was increased in these sectors.

TURKISH FRONT

RUSSIAN.

PETROGRAD, April 28.—The enemy manifested intense activity southeast of Erzindjan. On the Kelkerami - Azirbabo - Mazrajsof-Baluemer front he succeeded in breaking down one of our barriers and capturing a height in the region of Baluemer. Southeast of Banch the Turks, supported by Kurds, attacked our positions and took possession of a part of the heights occupied by our advanced posts. By a counter attack the position was restored.

ITALIAN FRONT

ITALIAN.

ROME, April 28.—In the Ledro valley on Thursday our accurate fire destroyed a small fort on the slopes of Monte Sperone. The enemy's artillery replied with violence, but caused no damage.

On the Asiago plateau one of our patrols penetrated the enemy's lines and brought back prisoners, arms, and munitions.

There was persistent activity on the part of artillery and aerial craft yesterday in the Trentino and on the Carnia front. Elsewhere nothing of importance occurred.

ROUMANIAN FRONT

RUSSIAN.

PETROGRAD, April 28.—The usual rifle firing and patrol operations are reported.

MEDITERRANEAN SEA

GERMAN.

BERLIN, April 28.—A submarine has successfully bombarded the harbor works, important for transports, near Gouraya, west of Algiers. One loading bridge was demolished and another badly damaged.

SUPPLEMENTARY

AUSTRIAN.

VIENNA, April 28.—No important action has taken place on any of the Austrian fronts.

WHERE THE GERMANS ARE HOLDING STRONG

Stubborn Fighting Along the Chemin des Dames (Plateau) to Hurtebise, to Craonne, to Reims.

Von Hindenburg's troops are holding doggedly to their new positions on the front east of Soissons, reaching along the Chemin des Dames to Hurtebise farm, to Craonne, to Reims. Along the plateau some of the bitterest fighting of the new Somme battle has occurred. Since the French captured the high ground of the Chemin des Dames they have been unable to make further gains.

Severe battling is in progress near Vauxaillon, Laffaux, Venteuil, Cerny, and at Hurtebise farm, west of Craonne. In the region of La Ville au Bois and Juvincourt there is daily battling of a fierce nature. On the remainder of the front to Reims the kaiser's men are holding strong. The map indicates the small gains made by the French in this region since the spring advance began on March 16.

BRITISH VICTORY

The British yesterday cracked the "Wotan line," the new German defensive section stretching from Lille to Queant. The break came at Arleux (indicated by an arrow), which the British captured. The peril to Douai now becomes more serious to the kaiser's men.

GERMANS LOSE ONLY 6 U-BOATS IN TWO MONTHS?

AMSTERDAM, via London, April 28.—According to the account in the Tageblatt of Berlin of the statement on submarine warfare made to the reichstag main committee by Vice Admiral von Capelle, the Germans in the first two months of unrestricted submarine operations lost only six U-boats, a number which in the same period was surpassed several times by new construction.

Von Capelle asserted the prestige of the British had been shattered more by the Skagerrak battle than by U-boat warfare.

Being questioned regarding the abandoning of submarine warfare, the minister expressed the opinion that the day was not far off when Great Britain must declare her readiness to enter into peace negotiations.

Norse Steamer Sunk.

LONDON, April 28.—Official announcement of the sinking of the Norwegian steamship Torvore, 1,067 tons gross, is reported in an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Christiania.

"INFANT POWER"

Today Is Opening of "Baby Week," the Mission of Which Is Welfare of Generations to Come.

Today is the opening day of "Baby Week," and it belongs to the Infant Welfare society, whose mission in life is to conserve, tend, represent, boost, and cause to thrive and blossom the manpower of tomorrow—our babes of today.

The pulpit, the civic body, and the public have no interest at stake greater than the interest in the little Americans who will have to carry out the work and ideals of the present generation when it is no longer able to do so.

Health Commissioner Robertson has personally induced the packing interests to pledge $10,000 to the general fund, and has detailed his staff to coöperate with the executive committee of the society, which is headed by Lucius Teter.

There are to be conferences, photographic displays, moving pictures, juvenile entertainers, child welfare lectures. Today will be devoted to sermons on the subject. The program tomorrow will be lectures by Dr. Winfield Scott Hall on "Nutrition," and Marguerite Clark, the moving picture "baby," in a screen version of "Still Waters." Equally interesting programs have been arranged for the balance of the week.

CHICAGO M. D.'S TO ACTIVE DUTY ON WAR COUNCIL

Washington, D. C., April 28.—[Special.]—Drs. Franklin H. Martin and Frederick A. Besley of Chicago were commissioned today by Secretary of War Baker as majors of the medical reserve corps and assigned to active duty with the council of national defense.

Others receiving similar commissions were Dr. Frank M. Simpson and Victor C. Vaughan. For weeks they have been working with the council of national defense as civilians mobilizing physicians, surgeons, chemists, dentists, veterinarians, pharmacists, and nurses of the country on a war basis.

They are now placed on a military basis and will receive pay and allowances of majors in the line of the army. Work of a vast corps of doctors soon will be demanded all over the country to examine recruits for the army under the conscription bill.

24 BREWERS IN POLL FRAUD; ONE FINED $10,000

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 28.—Officials of twenty-four Pennsylvania brewing concerns indicted for influencing elections in violation of the federal corrupt practices act entered pleas of nolo contendre in United States District court here today.

The case of the United States Brewing association was disposed of also. A plea of nolo contendre was accepted, but Judge William Thompson imposed a fine of $10,000 and costs—the highest penalty to which any offender is liable. The case against the Pennsylvania Brewers' association was held over.

Judge Thomson heard the Pennsylvania brewery heads plead. Sentences were not imposed. Cases against thirty-five of the defendants were dismissed.

RIVAL FACTIONS BRING CRISIS TO GERMAN CABINET

Socialists and Junkers Push Their Demands to the Limit.

THE HAGUE, April 28.—The German cabinet is facing the most difficult situation of its war time existence in its effort to find a safe middle ground between the Socialists and the Conservatives. Both parties are becoming more and more insistent and vociferous, the Socialists demanding the democratization of the government and peace without conquest or indemnity, while the Conservatives are demanding reforms in exactly the opposite direction.

Dr. Diederich Hahn, leader of the Agrarian Junker party and member of the reichstag, yesterday delivered a speech in Berlin in which he declared that Germany's submarine success insures the unconditional surrender of her enemies. He attacked the demands of the Socialists and censured the government for continuing so long to maintain diplomatic relations with the United States.

Must Act as Conquerers.

"Has monarchical Germany failed?" he asked. "No," he added, "it stands brilliantly before the world as conqueror. We are today within sight of peace. May it be a real German peace. We hope those who govern us will realize our strength, will keep their nerve, and continue to face the enemy as conquerors, not as cowards. Let us keep to Bismarck's policy. Germany's future is a future of battle and conquest. . . .

"Some people are demanding a new order of things in Germany. Let me tell you what new order we Conservatives desire. Germany's industrial and agricultural future must be so ordered that she will be in a position successfully to withstand any future attack. We must have the coal fields of Longwy and Briey. We must have fresh territories for emigration in the east. We must not return any lands we have conquered. That would be an unforgivable sin against our agricultural population, would compromise our industrial development, and would mean that our blood had been spilled in vain.

Opposes Poland Action.

"Already we have foolishly bestowed a kingdom upon Poland without securing Germany's rights therein.

"There also must be changes in the army where there is too much young blood. A 20 year old lieutenant should not command a 40 year old landsturmer. The government must cease conferring with the Socialists.

"'There is only one way to deal with our Anglo-Saxon enemies and that is to be as brutal as they. Look at what our government has done in the case of the United States. Long after we knew on what footing America stood, we allowed Ambassador Gerard to live among us and to mix in our politics."

Wisconsin Man Offered Command.

Madison, Wis., April 28.—Adjt. Gen. Holway today confirmed the report from Washington that Gen. C. R. Boardman of Oshkosh has been offered the command of a Wisconsin brigade of infantry with the commission of brigadier general.

SWEDEN FACING GRAVEST PERIL FROM BLOCKADE

Trade Paralyzed and Famine Is Threat to All People.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., April 28.—[Special.]—An authoritative statement of the economic situation in Sweden, produced by the complete isolation, so far as trade with the United States is concerned, and revealing the extent of the industrial paralysis of the nation resulting from this prohibition upon her commerce, was obtained here today.

"The present economic situation in Sweden is desperate," the statement says. "The people have had sugar cards and bread cards for three months. There is little milk in the country and no butter. In the early days of the war many people killed their cattle and other live stock, selling the meat, fearing the coming lack of feed. For a brief while, therefore, meat was comparatively cheap, but that is gone, and what little milk there is now is fed to the calves to prevent the extermination of cattle.

"Sweden can get neither gasoline nor rubber. Cotton has been so restricted that none can be imported, as the British blockade authorities will not permit the issuance of letters of assurance for it.

"After the declaration of the German unrestricted submarine warfare, the Swedish owners of vessels plying between England and Sweden were unwilling to risk their ships, and all the sailors and firemen refused to go on boats entering the submarine zones, so that all shipping was brought to a state of paralysis, both through the effect of the submarine warfare, as concerns British waters, and in the American trade, because of the British prohibition."

Spouse of Butter Thief Held for Jumping Bonds

Laporte, Ind., April 28.—[Special.]—The wife of Jack B. Kelly, now serving a term in prison for stealing 5,000 pounds of butter from the Michigan Central railroad, was arrested this afternoon on a warrant from Rochelle charging her with jumping a bond in connection with the shooting of a policeman by her husband when he escaped in September, 1915. After her arrest she revealed the hiding place of a thousand pounds of stolen butter, in addition to the eight hundred pounds already recovered.

ALLIES TO HELP U.S. TRAIN GREAT AVIATION CORPS

British and French Experts Will Be Assigned to American Service.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., April 28—[Special.]—One of the first practical results of the French and British war commission conferences, it was learned tonight, is the designation of aviation experts from the British and the French aerial services to be attached to the signal service of the United States army.

Decision to this effect was reached after conferences between French and British commissioners and Brig. Gen. George S. Squiers, in command of the signal service. Gen. Squiers announced that the officers to be detailed here would arrive soon.

Gen. Squiers conferred during the day with Gen. Joffre, field marshal of France, and later with Maj. Rees and Commander Seddon, representing the army and navy wings of the British aviation service. Principal problems confronting both American and allied armies and navies from the aviation standpoint were reviewed and pledges of coöperation were made for development of a larger and more efficient aviation service for the United States.

Will Give U. S. Information.

Foreign experts to be detailed to this branch of the war department will place at the disposal of the American authorities all information desired. The British and French aviation experts assert that their flying equipment, including motors and practically all parts of the planes, is superior to the American and recommend that the future construction of American service machines be patterned after their models.

Importance of the United States sending ships, food, and other war supplies to European nations now at war with Germany was emphasized again today at a trade conference between American and British officials at the British embassy.

While no announcement was made, it was learned that a general understanding of a plan for furnishing ships and sending food and munitions upon a monthly systematic basis is being worked out. Development of the details will result from further conferences to be held next week.

Few Conferences Held.

Few group conferences between the French and British war commissions and American officials were held today, the afternoon and evening being devoted largely to social functions. Tomorrow the French and British commissions will go to Mount Vernon on the president's yacht Mayflower. There Mr. Balfour, for Great Britain, and M. Viviani, for France, will pay public tribute to the memory of George Washington.

Mr. Balfour will place a wreath on Washington's tomb and deliver an address. M. Viviani will lay on the tomb a bronze palm leaf in the name of France and also deliver an eulogy.

The French vice premier, M. Viviani, in addressing distinguished Americans at the French embassy last night, paid high tribute to President Wilson.

Many Children Fatherless.

M. Hovelacque, a member of the French commission, outlined two special missions today in the United States with which he has been intrusted by the French government. The first of these is to coördinate the work of American charity in providing for the support of hundreds of thousands of fatherless children of France. The second is to bring about closer intellectual relations between the French and American nations.

"Few Americans," M. Hovelacque said, "have any conception of the terrible devastation which exists in France today as a result of the German invasion of the northern part of the country. Hundreds of thousands of French children are fatherless.

"We look confidently to the United States for moral as well as financial assistance to enable us to bring these children up as they should be brought up."

FIX INSURANCE PREMIUMS FOR MEN IN SERVICE

New York, April 28.—[Special.]—After two conferences between representatives of ten insurance companies and a committee on uniform war service regulations of the national convention of insurance commissioners, these recommendations were agreed on today, to be urged for adpotion on every life insurance company and commissioner in the country:

First—The military clause shall cover the entire period of military or naval service, in time of war, if commenced within five years of the register date.

Second—The extra premium charged for the present shall be at the rate of not less than $37.50 per annum per thousand of insurance.

Third—In the event of death during service or within six months after termination thereof, the liability of the company shall, unless all required extra premiums have been paid, be limited to an amount not exceeding the total premium paid on the policy, which may have been paid for military or naval service.

Fourth—The clause shall require payment of extra premium within thirty-one days after entering on service, or, if already in service, along with the first premium on the policy.

Fifth—A refund will be made of any extra premiums not required.

'BLUE DEVIL OF FRANCE' HAS HAD LIFE OF THRILLS

Joffre's Chief of Staff Had Part in Fiercest Battles of War.

Washington, D. C., April 28.—Lieut. Col. Jean Fabry, Marshal Joffre's chief of staff, attracted almost as much attention in the streets of Washington today as his superior when stories of his gallantry in action became known.

"The Blue Devil of France," as he is known in his own country, probably has experienced as many thrills as any man in the French army. As commander of a battalion of Alpine chasseurs he led his men in the battles of the Marne, Ypres, Dixmude, Arras, and in the Vosges.

In a gallant action in which his battalion carried by assault a position on the height of Reichacherkopf, Lieut. Col. Fabry lost a leg.

Has Remarkable Career.

M. Hovelaque, a member of the French commission, speaking of him today, said:

"The Blue Devil of France is grateful to America for the wooden leg he is wearing, but he is not so grateful at the price he had to pay for it. Col. Fabry is a remarkable man. He has been wounded several times, and has seen some of the most dreadful things that have occurred during this war. Here is what happened at the Yser:

"Fabry, in command of about 1,000 men, defended a long line for a week against German line after German line that sought to break through. The earth was soft, so soft that the only parapet that could stand had to be made out of some other substance. He used dead Germans, and when they decomposed he would discard them and would throw out a hook and haul up more bodies for the same purpose.

Fought by Side of Dead "Pal."

"His best friend was killed beside him. Because of the nature of the earth it was possible to dig down only a foot before striking water. He buried the man and then for days lived and fought for France with only a foot of earth separating him from the body of his friend.

"Terrible hardships were experienced. Food and ammunition had to be brought up with great danger under cover of darkness, and it was impossible to move the body until some time later."

The Germans, it might be added, did not break through the lines held by "The Blue Devil of France." The uniform of officers of the Alpine chasseurs is sea blue.

Germany Closes Swiss Frontier.

ZURICH, April 28.—The German-Swiss frontier has been strictly closed to all travelers and postal services. No German newspapers have arrived since Wednesday. This is usually the prelude to an important military move.

DANES LIVE NO LONGER IN FOOL'S FOOD PARADISE

U. S. Entry Into War Cuts Profits, Provides Hunger Peril.

[Copyright: 1917: By Press Publishing Company (New York World).]

COPENHAGEN, April 28.—Denmark is beginning to feel the first faint nips of the food pinch and although it still is a fool's food paradise to one just emerged from Germany, the happy gastronomic conditions cannot possibly last.

The prospect that America may embargo food exports to the continental neutrals still doing business with Germany, or that America will throw its food reserves into allied stomachs first, leaving the small neutrals to scramble for the crumbs, already is causing alarm and consternation among thinking Danes, who sense the manifold complications and dangers with which the resultant situation is certain to be involved.

Need American Live Stock.

Denmark is certain to run out of potatoes at least a month before the new crop, and while no statistics are available it is already obvious that the shortage of breadstuffs is beginning to make itself felt. Between the sharp British blockade control and the extensive submarine sinkings, American cattle feed will soon be a vital question to Denmark, which is dependent upon importation from America for the bulk of the requirements of its immense herds of live stock. Should America declare an embargo it would prove fatal to Denmark's live stock industry.

To the Danish government the continuance of its present brand of neutrality is synonymous with self-preservation. It is bad enough to have been caught between the British blockade and the German submarine war, but still bearable.

What is robbing Danish statesmen of their joy in life is the prospect of the world economic struggle being sharpened to the limit with Denmark helplessly trampled between the irresistible economical and food pressure of England and America on one side and the immovable German military and moral suasion on the other, certain to result in the quaint puzzle picture, "Find Denmark."

Germany Only Cattle Market.

But, even should Denmark's worst fears prove groundless, should America not use a food and feed embargo as a lever to force neutrals to discontinue their food exports to Germany, but merely an embargo on general principles, or to reserve America's food supply surplus for the allies in the first line, the same result, fatal to Denmark, might indirectly be reached.

If American cattle feed does not reach Denmark in sufficient quantities the slaughtering in mass of the Danish cattle will be inevitable. The only market physically capable of absorbing the surplus Danish cattle, on the hoof or dressed, is Germany, since, much as the Danes would prefer to sell to the allies, there remain transportation difficulties.

An American embargo on food and feed to Denmark would thus be, paradoxically, of immediate benefit to Germany, which would get something like five-sixths of Denmark's live stock.

FAKE DETECTIVES ROB CHICAGOAN

New York, April 27.—[Special.]—While scores of men and women looked on five confidence men posing as detectives, "arrested" Frank Sheridan, said to be a credit man for a Chicago house, at Broadway and Forty-sixth street last night, searched him and took $1,031, and escaped.

Charles Zeller of 754 Eighth avenue was arraigned today charged with working in the gang and was held in $2,500 bail.

Sheridan told the court that he met Zeller a year ago in Chicago and met him again a few days ago on Broadway. Zeller proposed a theater party last night, and after they left the theater, the fake arrest and robbery occurred.

Burn Congressman in Effigy.

Cleveland, O., April 28.—"Roaring Bill Gordon," Cleveland congressman, who opposed the administration conscription measure, was burned in effigy here yesterday.

ITALIAN QUAKE LEVELS VILLAGE; DAMAGES OTHERS

ROME, April 28.—The entire village of Monterchi was destroyed in the earthquake of yesterday. Complete casualtics are not yet available.

Ten persons were killed in the earthquake shocks in Tuscany and Umbria. Thirty persons were severely injured. Citerna was almost completely wrecked, thirty being caught in the wreckage and injured. At Anghiari and San Sepolcio great damage is reported, but no lives were lost.

Most of the inhabitants of the stricken districts have fled in terrior of other shocks and are camping in the open.

Zeppelin Destroyer a Captive.

PARIS, April 28.—The Matin says news has been received at British headquarters that Lieut. William Robinson, the aviator who destroyed a Zeppelin, is not dead but a prisoner in Germany. Lieut. Robinson's gasoline ran out and he was obliged to land.

USE CANADIAN TRAINING PLAN TO PREPARE MEN

War Department Lays All Details to Get New American Army.

Washington, D. C., April 28.—Soldiering will take on an aspect entirely new to American military science when training of the forces to be assembled under the draft bill begins at the sixteen training cantonments. Plans laid by war department officials provide for the application immediately of every lesson learned from European battlefields. The army war college has prepared new manuals based on the latest information from the trenches and brought by the British and French officers here as members of the war missions.

The training system probably will follow that used in Canada, where the instructors have made every effort to reproduce as closely as possible conditions at the front. So as to harden the muscles of the troops, as well as their wind, the Canadians have placed batteries opposite practice trenches and keep up a steady fire. The infantrymen have done their work night and day with shrapnel bursting close to them.

Another work that will be new to American troops will be bombing practice, and machine gun work will be revolutionized. With the artillery, all the complicated mechanism for curtain and barrage fire must be provided for.

Points to Great Task.

Secretary Baker said today that it now seemed unlikely that the entire 1,000,000 or more men who will be liable for duty in the conscriptive forces could be enrolled, physically examined and otherwise called upon for exemptions before the process of calling to the colors began.

Mr. Baker is inclined to favor the jury wheel system of choosing the men to be called first. When any township is called upon for its quota to fill the first 500,000 increment, the names of all of its citizens previously registered for military duty would be placed in the jury wheel and the proper number drawn. Examination of that number would then be carried out and enough additional names drawn to fill up the quota with provision made for exemptions.

Volunteers Get First Chance.

The secretary indicated that passage of the draft bill would be followed by further vigorous efforts to stimulate voluntary recruiting in the regular army and national guard. President Wilson may issue a proclamation calling for 50,000 or more volunteers for these branches of the service. Mr. Baker made it plain that the war department does not plan to apply the draft to fill up the regular and guard forces until the supply of volunteers has been exhausted.

Within a month after enactment of the bill, the secretary expects to set the registration date for the conscriptive forces. A proclamation will be issued notifying all men affected to appear at the registration places. The election machinery of each community will be used to facilitate registration, and the police forces will be employed to bring in those who fail to appear. Exemption boards will be localized to the greatest possible extent.

New Style Weapons Planned.

The department issued a statement today to correct the impression that the army Springfield rifle is to be abandoned for the British Enfield. Tentative contracts have been let, however, for enough modified Enfields to arm the second million men.

The department announced also that it had ordered two types of heavy field howitzers of foreign design.

GUARDSMAN

Boy of 2 1-2 Years Made Member of Co. D., First I. N. G., in Appreciation of Gift of Flag.

"Bobby" Millspaugh
Mrs. Adeline Millspaugh

Little "Bobby" Millspaugh, although only 2½ years old, has had one of his ambitions realized. He is a member of Company D, First Illinois infantry. And thereby hangs a tale.

Last week THE TRIBUNE printed the fact that Company D was in need of a flag. Mrs. Adeline Millspaugh promptly sent THE TRIBUNE a beautiful silk flag, saying it was to be presented to Company D with little Bobby's compliments.

"Bobby is just a little too small to fight for his country, but he and mother want Company D to have this flag. Will it do?" she wrote. Yesterday Capt. Robert H. Smith of Company D sent Bobby a beautifully engraved certificate of membership, making the boy a life member of the company.

"We are making your son, Robert Charles Millspaugh, a life member, and we desire to express our thanks for your courtesy and kindliness in presenting to us the beautiful and valuable American flag," Capt. Smith wrote to Bobby's mother.

TAX SCHEDULES IN WAR REVENUE BILL ARE FIXED

Committee Ready to Report on Ways to Get $1,500,000,000.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., April 28.—[Special.]—With the exception of one or two minor taxes, the subcommittee of the ways and means committee today finished its work on the $1,500,000,000 war revenue bill. It is said that these taxes can be arranged and the administrative features of the bill determined at the committee's meeting on Monday.

Chairman Kitchin will call a meeting of the full committee on Tuesday to receive the subcommittee's report. The taxes that have been agreed to by the subcommittee are not in any way yet to be regarded as a part of the bill which the full committee will report. Members of the subcommittee today decided to waive objections they held toward certain features of the tentative bill and will permit their objections to be thrased out when the full committee meets.

Two Items to Be Adjusted.

The taxes that remain to be adjusted are the tax on soft drinks and the taxes on freight and passenger transportation receipts. The soft drinks tax, which is estimated to bring in about $20,000,000 a year, is one of the most perplexing with which the committee has to deal. There is a vast difference in the value of equal quantities of various soft drinks and mineral waters and the committee is having a hard time equalising the tax.

It now is proposed that the freight and passenger transportation tax be assessed on the basis of 4 per cent. That is, the passenger of a railroad, electric line or domestic water route would have to pay to the government 4 per cent of the value of his ticket. Freight consignors would have to pay to the government 4 per cent of the amount which they pay to a railroad company.

Report Up to Full Committee.

The committee practically has decided to submit to the full committee the other taxes in the long tentative list as they have previously been determined on and published in THE TRIBUNE. Representative Rainey of Illinois, however, has served notice that he will carry to the full committee his proposal to confiscate all incomes over $100,000 a year and other proposals which he has made concerning business taxes.

TRAINING CAMP OPENING MOVED BACK TO MAY 15

War Chiefs Need Time to Sift Vast Number of Applicants.

Training camps for officers throughout the country have been ordered postponed for one week by the war department, which is overwhelmed with applications.

The camps were scheduled to open on May 8, but the number of applicants and the necessity of making $250,000 worth of improvements at Fort Sheridan, Fort Snelling, Fort Benjamin Harrison, and Fort Riley in the central department and other additions in other departments has caused the department to conclude that May 15 will be the earliest date possible for actual training.

Selections on May 8.

According to announcements in Washington and at the office of Maj. Gen. Barry in Chicago, a list of those selected for the camps will be announced on or before May 8. A final date for filing applications will also be announced soon by Gen. Barry.

"All reserve officers of the infantry, cavalry, field artillery, and coast artillery will be ordered into active service at once to report to training camps as may be designated by department commanders," says the Washington statement. "They are expected to arrive at camp not later than May 8."

Applications Surprise.

Applications for training are far more numerous than was expected, the department explains.

The department also announced that many officers in the quartermaster's reserve corps and the signal corps reserve have been called out for active service.

Capt. Raymond Sheldon, who is examining applicants for the Fort Sheridan camp in room 604 Republic building, requested that those notified to report to do so promptly. Eighty-four men sent to him have not put in an appearance. His office will be open all today for examinations.

Similar programs will be given before the Evanston Sunday Evening club and at Frederick Douglas center, 3032 South Wabash avenue; First Presbyterian church, 3409 South Dearborn street, and Monroe Street Church of Christ, 2901 West Monroe street.

Prepare NOW for War-Time Food Prices

ONE of the first places where the people of the United States are going to feel the effect of this nation's entry into the war is in increased food costs.

This is inevitable. No matter who you are or where you live, you are going to feel it—unless you do something about it right away. What can you do, and how shall you do it? Every man and woman who has room in his yard or who can get the use of a vacant lot near his home to start a garden should think and act right now.

You to whom this idea is new will be surprised to know that the yield from even a small plot of ground will produce enough vegetables to feed a family of five all summer. Figure this out in dollars and cents and you will be surprised at the amount of money a small garden will save you in a single season. Invest the cost of necessary seeds and the small amount of labor required and you will be delighted at the additional goodness you will enjoy in fresh garden truck picked right out of your own patch. Try this plan, beginning now—this month is planting time—and you will find that you will be distinctly benefited physically—yes, and mentally, too—by the wholesome outdoor work of pottering around in the ground among growing things.

And right here is where you will find the new Encyclopaedia Britannica of immense practical value.

Order your Britannica NOW or you can NEVER buy it.

Are you surprised at the idea that the Britannica can be of immediate help in such an ordinary undertaking as a garden?

The Encyclopaedia Britannica covers the whole range of agricultural subjects completely from the very foundation of a thorough knowledge of gardening and extending over the widest field.

It will tell you what kind of ground each crop needs. It will tell you how to prepare the ground, how far apart to plant the rows of seeds, when to plant, how to cultivate the ground while things are growing, and it even gives the names of reliable varieties of seeds.

The Britannica describes local crops and any local methods of farming that are of special interest. It contains some 600 articles on individual plants.

The article "Soil" (Vol. 25, p. 345), tells how to make the best quality of soil. The article Manures and Manuring tells about fertilizing, the supplying of ingredients the soil needs to make it most fertile. There are articles on Bacteriology, the effects of Sunlight, Shade, Heat, Cold, Water enough, Drainage, Irrigation, Reclamation of waste lands.

There is an article that tells how to fight all kinds of pests from bug and the like to the larger enemies like the rabbit. It is safe to say that any ameteur gardener with the help and instruction to be found in the Britannica can multiply his chances of success and the yield from his patch many, many times.

Think of this matter of food supply seriously. It will become very serious if the war runs on.

Every farmer of a dozen acres or many hundreds of acres, growing such staples as wheat, barley, corn, rye, hay, cotton, etc., will be called upon to increase the yield and reliability of his crops. The farmers of big farms will find in the Britannica articles full of information and help to them, for the agricultural articles and articles on correlated subjects are written by agricultural experts of world-renown.

The Britannica is the highest authority in the world for information on all farming subjects including live stock and the animal industry.

If you have room for poultry, the Britannica articles on Poultry and Poultry Farming will help you to make this a successful economic side line.

Bee keeping and the honey industry is a method of food production that is interesting and practically without expense. People who live in apartment houses in the cities, miles from the country, have kept bees on their roofs successfully and profitably. The Britannica articles on the Bee (Vol. 3, p. 625) and Honey (Vol. 13, p. 776) are complete and instructive.

NOW or NEVER is your only chance to own a set of the "Handy Volume" Britannica printed on genuine India paper.

This is only one phase of the value to you of The Encyclopaedia Britannica. It covers every subject of human knowledge with equal thoroughness and in an equally practical way. It covers every manufacturing subject in every line of trade. It covers every subject of interest to the shop worker, the salesman, the professional man or woman, the student and scholar.

The war's effect will increase the pressure on the pocketbook of every home in America. With the Britannica as a practical help you can materially ease this pressure.

But to own the Britannica—to have this valuable work immediately available, you simply must decide about buying right away. The remaining number of sets of the "Handy Volume" issue of the Britannica, printed on genuine India paper, are very few. Within two, or at the most three, weeks the last set will be sold.

To help you decide and order while there is a single set left, arrangements have been made with the merchant in your city, whose name and address is printed below, to show a complete set of the "Handy Volume" Issue of the Britannica—and samples of the various bindings, also sample volumes of the superb Cambridge issue (the large type, large page, more expensive form).

It is NOW or NEVER for you to decide about buying.

Go today to this store—examine the complete set, see the bindings, learn the prices, learn the plan of buying on conveniently small monthly payments, prove to yourself once and finally whether or not the Britannica will be useful and helpful. Then, if you decide to buy, leave your order right there in the store. IF YOU DO THIS TODAY YOU WILL BE IN TIME FOR ONE OF THESE LAST SETS.

If you cannot go to this store of if you already know that the Britannica will prove a help and of practical use to you, sign and send us today the Reserve Order Form which is a part of this announcement. We are not going to have nearly enough sets to fill all the orders we will receive in the next few weeks. We could sell many thousand more sets if the papermakers could get the flax from Belgium, Germany or Ireland and the hemp from Russia—two raw materials necessary to make genuine India paper. Because these two products are unobtainable, the publishers cannot print any more sets of the "Handy Volume" Britannica on this wonderful paper.

NOW or NEVER

Remember—if you do not decide NOW you will NEVER be able to buy at all. Therefore—you must go to the store named below, see the books, decide and order—OR sign and mail the "Reserve" Order Form. There is no time to write for information—because the last set will be sold before you can get the printed descriptive matter, read it, make up your mind about buying and get your order in.

To be sure, you should act TODAY.

Those who cannot go to this store may use this "Reserve" Order Form, which will be legally binding upon us to reserve one set for you, just the same as if you ordered it in person.

SEARS, ROEBUCK AND CO., Chicago, Ill.

EGG KINGS PINCH THOUSANDS OUT OF CITY FAMILIES

Hold Up Trains and Juggle Prices So All Get Bit of Profit.

In the six days ending last night 208,063 cases of eggs were received in Chicago, against 204,000 for the same period last year. Last week 195,741 cases were received. Last year it was estimated that James Wetz, egg king, and his little coterie cleaned up $7,000,000 by manipulating the market and boosting the price from 20 to 22 cents.

Yet this year, with 4,000 more cases for the week on the market, the egg prices bobbed up and down between 30 and 36 cents. Normally it should be about 20 to 22 cents. John R. Tyler of John Tyler & Co., large dealers, said he estimated that 400 cars filled with eggs are now standing on team tracks and sidings in Chicago, against 200 cars the first of the week. And the presence of these 200 cars started the federal grand jury investigation.

Testifies Before Inquiry.

Mr. Tyler, who is a member of the Chicago butter and egg board, went before the grand jury and testified. He said to THE TRIBUNE that a little clique of men, who meet in a hotel or some other handy place, fixed the price daily with a few small trades.

"If Wetz cleaned up $7,000,000 on a 2 cent raise some one must be doing nicely in the present transactions," he remarked.

Mr. Tyler said he had no knowledge of the truth of the rumor which has it that egg prices for the entire month of April were fixed at a "meeting" of the bigger egg manipulators held on March 10 in St. Louis. That was the time of the convention of the Missouri and Kansas Carload Egg Shippers' association.

Consternation Among Egg Men.

It is understood that a witness will go before the grand jury Monday and will testify to the truth of the St. Louis "egg fixing" rumor. A man closely connected with the investigation said:

"I believe that almost all of the members of the Chicago butter and egg board will be indicted. Consternation spread among them today when they learned that they had been violating the injunction issued some time ago by Judge Landis restraining them from speculating in 'paper eggs' and 'paper butter.' This injunction demands that eggs and butter sold on the board must exist and be delivered. It would stop 'paper settlements.'"

"In England they have evolved a system to defeat this speculation in food products," said H. A. Emerson, investigator for the state of New York, who is in Chicago. "No wholesaler is permitted to sell to another wholesaler. He must sell direct to some retailer, who in turn sells direct to the consumer. This cuts out the multiplicity of middlemen."

ROBERTSON ASKS BOYCOTT TO KEEP EGG PRICES DOWN

Health Commissioner John Dill Robertson yesterday advocated a boycott on eggs and the government regulation of cold storage warehouses to conserve the food supply.

"This is the time of the year," he said, "that eggs for next winter's consumption are stored in the warehouses and I would suggest that the people of Chicago refrain from eating eggs for about three weeks so that they can be stored at reasonable prices. I would think it a good plan for the government to take all cold storage warehouses and stock them with foods."

The quarterly reports from the warehouses are due May 1, Dr. Robertson said. He sent twelve investigators on a tour of the warehouses to get a line on how much food was in storage.

Police Sergeant Offers 1,280 Acres for Food Crop

George G. Chatt, desk sergeant at the East Chicago avenue station, and famed as a flycaster and sportsman, last night offered to the United States government 1,280 acres of "plumb good land" near Hysham, Rosebud county, Mont. "It'll make fifty bushels of wheat to the acre," said the sergeant. "I want the government to have it and I'll pay all expenses."

FOR DRY U. S.

League of Cook County Women's Clubs Passes War Resolution.

"Stop the making of alcoholic liquors and save the grain for food," was the substance of a resolution passed by the League of Cook County Clubs at a meeting held in the Masonic temple yesterday. The resolution was sent to President Wilson and copies to every senator and congressman from Illinois.

President Wilson was urged to use all his influence to bring about a "dry United States" for the period of the war. The League of Cook County Clubs represents 106 organizations with a membership of 75,000 women.

Potatoes took a sudden turn downward when 150 cars from the northwest, about 75,000 bushels, made their appearance in Chicago quite unheralded. They came from Idaho, Washington, and Oregon. As a result old potatoes were sold at retail as low as 85 cents a peck and at wholesale as low as $2.85 a bushel.

EDUCATORS BACK FRINK'S SCHEME OF FARM CAMPS

Nation-Wide Move to Use Cadets Is Started.

A nation-wide movement to mobilize high school boys for farm work to insure an abundant harvest for the nation during the war and keep down the cost of living has met with enthusiastic indorsement from educators throughout the country.

The idea, which originated in Chicago with Lieut. J. L. Frink, U. S. A., who is aiding Capt. Edgar J. Steever, in charge of military training in the city's high schools, contemplates the establishment of summer high schools in agricultural districts at once while the farmers are in the midst of planting time and are calling urgently for labor.

The summer high schools are to be in camps or cantonments and the boys are to be given military training under competent instructors. At the same time they will have the benefit of a course of lectures under expert agronomists and will put their lessons to practical effect by daily work on neighboring farms. For their labor they will be paid a daily wage which will go into their own pockets.

Majority Favors Plan.

THE TRIBUNE has sounded the educators throughout the country on the plan. Most of them expressed themselves as strongly in favor of it. All approved of farm work for boys, but some did not indorse the military training adjunct.

W. G. Wilcox, president of the board of education of New York, said: "Military training for boys in New York state is under the direction of a military training commission. I should say that Lieut. Frink's idea of combining military training and farm work was practicable and would render good service to the country."

Fine for City Boys.

"Farm training," said L. R. Alderman, superintendent of the Portland, Ore., public schools, "is one of the best things that can come to a city bred boy. The idea will be especially good in thickly populated eastern cities."

School superintendents in Grand Rapids, Mich.; Buffalo, N. Y.; Memphis, Tenn.; Milwaukee, Chattanooga, Wilmington, Del.; Spokane, Wash.; Omaha, Neb.; Boise, Idaho; Fargo, N. D.; Mobile, Ala.; Toledo, O.; Seattle, Wash.; Bridgeport, Conn., and El Paso, Tex., expressed themselves favorably.

TRAIN BOYS AT ST. JOHN'S.

Delafield, Wis., April 27.—St. John's Military academy will open a training camp for high school students of southern Wisconsin in June, according to an announcement by President S. T. Smythe.

Accommodations for 300 will be provided at a small expense to cover rations and khaki uniforms. The grounds, buildings, and use of equipment will be donated by the academy.

President Earling Gives Rail Garden Prizes

President A. J. Earling of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad has given additional incentive to the people living along the Milwaukee system to get busy and join the food productive league. He has personally donated $1,500 to be distributed in prizes among amateur gardeners.

BAKERS STRIKE; CITY FACES BREAD FAMINE AT ONCE

15 Largest Plants Closed, Cutting Off One Million Loaves a Day.

step in and send the strikers to Fort Leavenworth if they dared to go out."

Threat Is Denied.

This met with denial from the bakery heads. It was stated that the remark in question actually was that "the government might commandeer and operate the plants."

In behalf of the employers, Merrill Hutchinson made the following statement:

"In face of the exorbitant and unjustifiable demands of the Bakers' union there is nothing we can do but close up shop and make it a fight to the finish.

"We might as well go bankrupt this way as be forced to the wall through attempting to operate under the union demands.

"We were ready to come to an agreement with the bakers in the matters of wages and hours. But the other demands are preposterous. Now that the strike has been called, we will remain closed until the bakers come back to work. No bread will be delivered after Monday morning.

"The union tells us: 'You are not to employ apprentices.' This means that we can hire no youths to start in at the beginning and learn the baker's trade, and helps to make the union more of a 'closed combination' than ever, and with more power over the employers.

Employes Would Be Bosses.

"They declare: 'You can have but one superintending foreman in each shop, and we are to have the privilege of discharging him if he doesn't get along with us, and replacing him with a man of our choice. On the face of it, this means that the employing bakers practically would have nothing to say regarding the operation of their own shops.

"Demands of the drivers are no less unfair. They ask an increase from $21 to $24 a week and a commission of 7 per cent on all weekly sales of more than $200. Their attitude is that we can increase the price of bread to the public—which must be done regardless of labor disputes because of the soaring cost of flour—if we cannot otherwise afford to grant the wage increase."

The bakers reply that the employers' "refusal to sign the new agreements was an eleventh hour move, made despite the fact that they appeared to agree with us when our demands were first presented." The drivers declare that their demands are prompted by the high cost of living. They denied that a majority of their members average more than $30 a week in wages.

Welcome Federal Control.

"If the government takes over the bakeries and operates them, we will be satisfied," said Hohmann, of the bakers' union. "We will be ready and willing to return to work in that case, because we know we will be assured of a square deal."

"This talk that the bakeries can't afford to pay the increase asked is all rot," said Martin Devries, business agent of the drivers' union. "They have been decreasing the size of the loaf until it now stands reduced from 30 to 16 ounces. The consumer is paying the same price, so the bakeries are now making more money than they ever were."

Devries also stated that the pie and cracker bakers and wagon drivers may join the strike in a few days.

The big bakeries closed by the strike include the Boysen Baking company, Robert J. Brammer company, F. Deppe company, Grant Baking company, the Heissler & Junge company, Schulze Baking company, H. H. Kohlsaat & Co., Livingston Baking company, the H. Piper company, Quality Baking company, Charles Seip Baking company, Sloan Baking company, Carl Sulzer's, the Vienna Model bakery, Ward Baking company.

More than 600 of the 2,000 members of the union are on strike, it was estimated. The remaining 1,400 are at work in the smaller shops. Some 500 members of the Jewish Bakers' union also are on strike, having gone out on Friday.

Training Camp Involved.

"We are buying from Chicago bakeries every loaf of bread consumed by the 4,500 boys at the Great Lakes station," said Lieut. Commander L. N. McNeir last night. "We buy 5,000 pounds a day. I shall wire Washington tonight of the strike. I ought to get orders tomorrow.

"We could bake 2,000 loaves a day, but the ovens are used for pastries. In ten days we will have new ovens and can do all of our own bread baking."

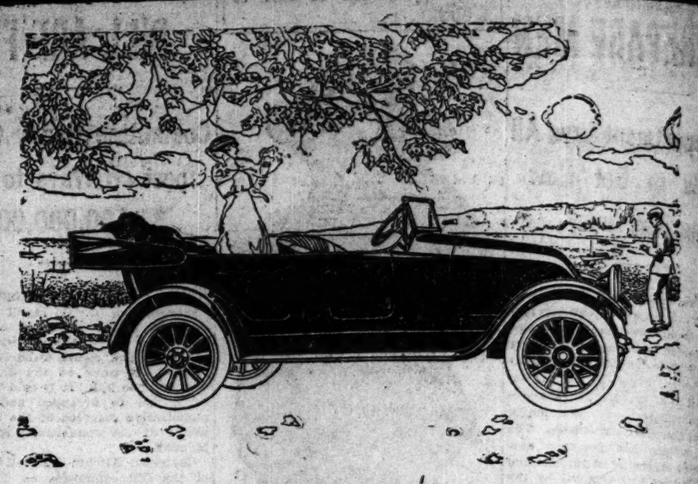
THE FRANKLIN CAR



What Is the Weight of the Car?

Why Is This Question So Often Tabooed?

ONE of the most difficult tasks for any car salesman to explain satisfactorily is why most fine cars must weigh between 3000 and 4000 pounds, when the Franklin Touring Car, for instance, weighs just 2280 pounds.

Big Weight Is Car Owner's Loss

We admit our inability to advance any real reason.

We know too well what Scientific Light Weight means in the Franklin Car.

Franklin weights are not attained to meet today's demand for light cars, but are the results of fifteen years of consistent scientific-light-weight car building.

The difference between the Scientific-Light-Weight Franklin and cars burdened with unnecessary dead weight is daily illustrated on the used-car market.

Used Franklins for sale are scarce, but if you find one, price it and see for yourself how high its value is in proportion to other used-car values.

Figure what is back of Franklin records of 10,000 miles to the set of tires and 20 miles to the gallon of gasoline.

Then investigate the claims of Franklin owners for unusual road ability, safety and comfort.

Look around and see if any heavy car is equalling the general satisfaction that Franklin owners talk of.

We say—find out all you can about the car you're going to own and maintain.

That's a business-like way to judge whether Scientific Light Weight or superfluous weight appeals to you and your purse.

Save Three Hours out of Every Four Your Horses Work by Using

Smith Form-a-Truck

F. O. B. Chicago

Every minute wasted on the road by slow, inefficient hauling and delivery costs you real money. Horses take from three to four times as long to cover the ground as it will take you when you install Smith Form-a-Trucks in your service.

Three to four miles an hour is the best horses can do with a ton load. Smith Form-a-Truck replaces the slow, time wasting walk of horses with a speed of from ten to fourteen miles an hour under every condition of work.

And it costs no more to buy a Smith Form-a-Truck than it does to buy a good pair of horses equal to the work of hauling a ton load. If your hauling or delivery requires all-day service every working day of the year, you must have at least two teams for every wagon.

The sturdy, efficient, untiring Smith Form-a-Truck never takes time out for rest, never has to lay off the job. It works steadily day in and day out, always maintaining its high speed, always moving its load quickly, easily, and at lower cost than any other form of service you can buy.

Records of service obtained from over 18,000 Smith Form-a-Truck users show a ton mile cost of less than 8 cents. And the first Smith Form-a-Truck ever sold has been in service four years, covered 20,000 miles and cost only $8 for repairs.

Get a Smith Form-a-Truck, attach it to any Ford, Dodge Bros., Overland, Buick, Chevrolet or Maxwell chassis and end your excessive hauling and delivery costs.

Put your hauling problem up to us. It doesn't cost you a cent to learn just how much money we can put back into your pocket that you are now putting into horses.

ILLINOIS TO USE ALL RESOURCES IN VICTORY WAR

State Defense Council's Program Is Laid Out—Leaks Plugged.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

Springfield, Ill., April 28.—[Special.]—Through the state council of defense—clothed with war time executive power and backed by the courts of the state—Illinois is preparing to place all its resources where they can be used best in the prosecution of the war.

The final stage of legislation of the omnibus act will be reached Tuesday, when the Turnbaugh bill, already passed by the senate, will be enacted by the house. It is understood the appointment of the fifteen members of the council will be announced forthwith by Gov. Lowden.

Samuel Insull, who has been picked for the chairmanship of the Illinois council, will go to Washington as one of the Illinois spokesmen at the conference between members of the national defense council and state representatives.

Ground to Be Covered.

Proposals of the utmost significance are to be undertaken immediately by the new state council. Among them may be enumerated the following:

1. Development of the greatest possible crop production, including the 100 per cent corn acreage.

2. Plans for harmonizing the relations between manufacturers and organized labor, so the greatest possible degree of cooperation in the conduct of the state's industries may be realized.

3. Coördination of all of the separate and distinct volunteer committees and organizations that have initiated plans for relief of the families of men who are called into the army and for general relief purposes. The state administration realizes this feature is almost of paramount importance.

To Build Up Guard.

4. Development of immediate plans for the recruiting of the Illinois units of the national guard and of the navy, the organization of reserves for the regiments, and the organization of such home guard units as may become necessary.

5. Organization of system that will guarantee to Illinois men called into the service, immediate protection against any shortage of quartermaster or commissary supplies, to the end that Illinois troops shall not suffer from hunger or cold while in the earlier stages of mobilization and training.

6. Adjustment of railroad transportation, so that troops and supplies may be moved with the greatest possible expedition.

All Points Covered.

The Turnbaugh bill, as passed by the senate, suggests all of these points in the section creating the personnel of the commission, which states that the members shall be appointed with reference to their special knowledge of labor, industries, public utilities, the development of natural resources, sanitation, finance, transportation, or some other subject matter relating to national or state defense.

It is a provision of the measure that the state council shall begin operations without delay in offices at the state capitol building. The members must serve without pay, but an appropriation of $50,000 is authorized for the necessary work of the commission. The orders of the commission, when necessary, shall be enforced through court orders, issued by any Circuit court judge of the state.

It is understood Mr. Insull will proceed to Washington authorized to tell the national government that Illinois will leave nothing undone that may be required by emergency.

Meanwhile the revised military code bill will become a law and Gov. Lowden will be free to exercise his power as commander in chief in recasting the national guard to conform with the federal army regulations under the new legislation that congress is perfecting.

WOMAN WANTS TO GIVE ORGAN TO ALGONQUIN

In its recent annual report the United Charities of Chicago asked for the donation of a hurdy gurdy for Camp Algonquin and THE TRIBUNE hospital at Camp Algonquin. Following this request a Chicago woman suggested to Supt. Lies that she would like to furnish one of these organs to the camp. In her letter she said:

"In looking over the annual report of the United Charities I was much interested in the request for a grind organ for Camp Algonquin, for they have always fascinated me.

"Having no idea of the cost of one, nor quite how to go about it, I want to ask you if you would be good enough to get prices for me and then I'll see what can be done in the matter."

An extended inquiry by the director of summer outings as to where and how one might be procured brought no response and so he has appealed to THE TRIBUNE to publish this fact with the hope that any one who knows where and at what price a hurdy gurdy may be obtained will communicate with the manager of THE TRIBUNE hospital.

Any of the readers of this item who can give such information will be doing a kindness for the children at the summer camp by writing to B. C. Roloff, United Charities, 166 North Michigan avenue, Chicago.

Another Yerion Murder Clew of Little Worth

Charles Fay, 2023 Indiana avenue, was arrested yesterday on information furnished by Dr. William H. Sage, deputy collector of internal revenue. Fay was questioned in the office of First Deputy Westbrook concerning his whereabouts on the night last month Meda Yerion was murdered.

Dr. Henry M. Weinberg, 3000 Ellis avenue, whose statement to Dr. Sage that Fay offered him blood stained money on the night of the crime to cure him of the drug habit led to Fay's arrest, is himself under arrest for violation of the Harrison anti-narcotic law.

Deputy Westbrook said he does not believe Fay had anything to do with the Yerion murder.

The House of Bartlett Announces the Achievement of a 17-Year Aim

The FORTUNE SPOT What Is It ?

It's "GREATER CHICAGO"

Bartlett's New Realty-Development Sensation!

The secret's out! The Fortune Spot, the "Money-Moon," is Greater Chicago—a Bartlett marvel-project that marks the ultimate in real estate developments. To thousands this announcement will come as a delightful surprise. For thousands know Bartlett, and know that Bartlett investment offerings not only promise big, but pay big, as unfailingly, as consistently as any enterprise human in origin can pay.

¶ We, or you, have never before seen the like of GREATER CHICAGO. We can't ever see its like again. For one thing, there is not another tract remaining within the city that is as large. And leaving size out of the question, no other piece of property that has been or will be marketed can begin to compare with GREATER CHICAGO in richness of natural and native advantages or in certainty of quick and enormous value-enhancement.

¶ For almost half a century this envied tract lay idle, untouched, in the hands of its corporation owners. Bartlett, in common with almost every other realty expert in the country, for years longed to gain possession of it. Bartlett and all the rest knew its inherent worth, foresaw its future plain as day. Each knew that if by any chance it could be parceled out to individual investors at modest prices the natural inevitable progress of the district of which the tract was the very heart would bring countless tidy fortunes in its wake.

¶ How GREATER CHICAGO came to Bartlett is a story by itself; you will learn it later if you care to. A decision of the Supreme Court played a vital part in the story. This forced the purchase price to an unbelievably low figure. And this, together with the Bartlett big-volume, tiny-profit policy, makes it possible for investors of every type and class to share in an opportunity unquestionably without parallel in the history of real estate selling.

¶ It is now generally known that Chicago is on the threshold of a real estate boom. Real estate values everywhere in town will soon commence to climb at a fast and furious pace. Yet when the boom is near its height Chicago property prices won't be above actual property values! But the important thing to remember is that present investors are going to profit biggest when the boom comes, a month or two hence. Those who buy now and hold on will get *"top" prices later!

¶ And so we urge an extraordinarily careful investigation of the possibilities that a GREATER CHICAGO investment has in it for you—today! We urge prompt action, for there's only a 500 to 1 chance of your "getting in"!

¶ We cannot now make public the entire GREATER CHICAGO story. Not because there is too much of it, but because the property is not quite ready for public sale. So complete details must be withheld for the time being from all but Advance Inquirers. Here is another phase of the invariable Bartlett selling plan. Bartlett Advance Inquirers become Bartlett PREFERRED CUSTOMERS. And you who have handsomely profited through the inside "ground floor" privileges and ahead-of-time reservation opportunities extended to you in the past as a Bartlett Preferred Customer know that to be registered among the advance inquirers on a Bartlett development is to doubly insure a speedy, handsome gain.

¶ Note, if you please, the column above, to the right. Glance again over the items that comprise it. And remember, in your re-reading, that they describe tersely, truthfully, impressively, but only in part, the GREATER CHICAGO of the present day.

¶ From this partial list of features, weighty though each one is of itself, you cannot possibly gather the import of the complete GREATER CHICAGO story. First of all, you fail to see in the list the location of the property. And that's the very essence of the entire proposition. It's where it is that makes GREATER CHICAGO what it is—that well-nigh alone stamps it the most brilliant investment opportunity of a generation.

¶ You must find that out surely. And you must learn, too, about the wonderful district (most wonderful in all the world of its kind) that serves GREATER CHICAGO—that looks toward GREATER CHICAGO for the new homes its people crave—yes, demand!

¶ There is really so much to tell you about GREATER CHICAGO, so much you ought to know, that it seems a shame to stop here.

¶ We might tell about the near future, for instance, and what it holds in store for GREATER CHICAGO and its investors. And about certain definite value-increasing projects already decided on, already contracted for. Also about the regulation, the control of the development to its own best ends and the protection of its new owners.

FRENCH ORPHANS THANK AMERICAN KIDDIES FOR HELP

Over 100 Letters Tell of Bravery and Sacrifices Made.

More than a hundred French children orphaned by the war have written their little American benefactors thanks for their thoughtfulness. The letters have been compiled by the Chicago fatherless children of France committee, of which Mrs. Walter S. Brewester of 1220 Lake Shore drive is chairman.

Each letter is accompanied by a picture of the sender. And each tells of the sorrow and childish bravery of the French children.

Wear Mourning with Pride.

"We wear our mourning with pride that papa died for his country and in doing his duty as a Frenchman," said one signed "Martha," and directed to "my benefactress." "And now I see, dear lady, that there are always kind souls who do not forsake the children whose fathers have died on the field of honor."

Another asks that the committee give her the name of the boy or girl who offers her help. She is 10 and her name is Madeline.

"Whoever it is, I love him already and I would be so happy to have his picture," she writes. "I am sending mine. It isn't very good, for we live in a country where there are only traveling photographers."

Most of them say they are still attending school, but that their mothers have to work hard and sacrifice a great deal.

In Cellar Without Food.

In what she calls her diary to her "dear lady" Martha writes of many thrilling adventures. Her father was a pottery worker when he was called on Aug. 2, 1914.

"On Aug. 12 the ferocious enemy invaded our town, and killed and burned eighty-five of our houses," she writes. "Then they took all that was in the houses and killed four or five families. We stayed three days in our cellars during the fight without eating. Then we were taken prisoners.

"Every one in the town was expecting all day long to be shot. They told us the French government were assassins, and that we brought on the war and ought to be satisfied. Finally some kind lady like yourself gave them 100,000 francs to save our lives.

"Then we were shut up in the courtyard of her castle. Soon they came again, and we had to leave without being able to carry away anything. For two weeks we had to walk through shrapnel and shells to sleep in the open or in lofts, like the poor soldiers.

"We finally reached Moulins, where they took care of poor refugees. Then followed the death of my father, who was shot through the heart in the trenches."

There are others, too, from Fernande, Josephine, Felix, Marcelle, Alexandre, and Germaine. And they all thank the American. "Skinny" and "Slats" and "Red" and "Fat" for their help.

Lieut. Ware was assigned from the New York navy yard to the Mongolia. Shortly before this he was an officer on the U. S. S. # FORMER CHICAGO ANTIQUE DEALER TAKEN AS SPY

Albert Wehde Arrested in Honolulu on India Revolt Charge.

Albert Wehde, who was named as a fellow conspirator with Gustav H. Jacobsen and others in an alleged plot to make trouble for Great Britain by inciting insurrection in India, is under arrest in Honolulu.

His arrest was confirmed at the federal building after dispatches had chronicled it. Another alleged conspirator, named in the complaint against Jacobsen, is now held at San Francisco under the name Richard Sternock. He denies he is Sternock, the man mentioned in the complaint on which Jacobsen was arrested April 6, and is resisting removal.

In U. S. for Twenty Years.

Wehde has been in the United States for about twenty years. For years he conducted an antique shop in the Fine Arts building, and it was here that he and Jacobsen met to plan the collection of money for the work in India and the furtherance of the intrigue, according to federal officials.

Wehde was prominent as a member of the Rotary club. He lived at 2754 Ashland avenue, but when he left this country more than a year ago the telephone number was taken over by his sister, who lives at 3706 Southport avenue.

"I'll never believe that he is the Wehde the government wants," said the sister. "I don't think he went to India to promote any scheme, for I have had letters from him from China, but none from India. He told me that he was going abroad to buy curios and he was writing a book in German on botany and said he wanted to gather material for it."

Another Seized on Wharf.

H. H. A. Van Derck, who formerly lived in Chicago, is under arrest in Seattle. Van Derck was seized by government men while on a wharf at Seattle and was unable to give a satisfactory explanation of his presence on the wharf. His brother, H. J. Van Derck, lives at 2958 North Whipple street. Van Derck is a naturalized American citizen and was born in Holland, according to Chicago relatives.

WOUNDED MAN TAKEN AFTER GUARD ROUTS 5

Otto J. Barcell, 2317 West Forty-eighth street, was found wounded in the right hip in the Englewood hospital yesterday, after Guy Carto, 1008 Lytle street, a watchman, had fired five shots at four men in an automobile. They were alleged to have tried to break into the grocery and market of Carl C. Marsano, 6110-12 South Kedzie avenue.

Barcell, who denied any complicity in the attempted burglary and asserted that he was shot by a highwayman, was removed to the bridewell hospital.

Carto, who was inside the store, fired through the door, and he says he heard one of the men shout, "He got me."

Carto had been employed as watchman since burglars took $700 worth of merchandise from the store a week ago.

"Mammy" Jackson Seeks to Appeal Delbridge Case

To obtain an appeal of the suit of "Mammy" Camilla Jackson for the custody of Marjorie Delbridge from the Juvenile court, Attorney Charles S. McNett filed a bill of exceptions before Judge Charles H. Bowles.

MACOMB BRIDE DENIES SEEKING OUT A HUSBAND

Mrs. Tina M. N. Reed, nee Nicholson, of Macomb, Ill., who recently was married to Edwin Reed of Monee, Ill., desires to set aside certain reported features of her romance.

"I have many friends and had plenty of company in Macomb," she says, "and have refused too many offers of marriage to be anxious to get married."

This in answer to the statement that she was anxious to get married. She declares she was merely willing.

"I never asked a traveling man to get me a husband," she adds.

Mrs. Reed declares all she asked the traveling man to get her was a job.

"I didn't wear a handkerchief on my shoulder when I met Mr. Reed at the Union station."

The identification mark, as previously agreed upon, says Mrs. Reed, was a dark blue suit with a white collar.

Otherwise everything is all right.

New Super-Six Speedster Now Here

Latest, fastest Hudson model just arrived. A smart car with new lines. Seats four. $1750 at Detroit.

The newest Hudson Super-Six model has just arrived.

It is the smartest Speedster you have ever seen. In the grace of its lines, the dashing beauty of its finish and its wonderful performance it expresses the "spirit of youth."

Our allotment of these cars is not large. Even before we were told anything of its details, even without advertising or announcement of any kind either by the factory or ourselves, customers placed orders with us to assure early delivery. Our only word from the factory was that a Speedster model would be ready some time this spring.

To get an idea of the probable demand for such a car we asked some of our Super-Six owners about it. The result is shown in the orders they gave us. We couldn't give them any description of the Speedster, not even an idea of what it would look like, nor even assure definite delivery dates. Still the orders continued to increase, and seeing a repetition of last year's condition, when buyers grew disappointed at not getting delivery of their Super-Six when wanted, we stopped accepting orders.

And why shouldn't there be such a demand for a Hudson Super-Six Speedster? Everyone knows of the official record of a stock Super-Six chassis in traveling a measured mile at the rate of 102½ miles an hour. And all motorists are familiar with other wonderful performances of the Hudson Super-Six. The Super-Six has proved it has just the qualities you would require in a Speedster.

There could be no concern about the beauty or grace or finish of the body. The artists responsible for such lines as are revealed in the Super-Six Phaeton, the grace of the Hudson Super-Six Limousine, and the daintiness of the Town Car, could be relied upon to design the smartest Speedster.

Such a car is here now for you to see. You must acknowledge its low sweeping lines, its rich cobalt blue body with vermilion wheels, the smartest Speedster you have ever seen.

Don't forget that our allotment is small, that the factory is not building many cars of its type, and that only a few cars are available to any one dealer. Some will probably not be able to get any at all.

LONG LIST OF SAFE ROBBERIES LAID TO GANG

Tapped Wires and Deciphered Ciphers Bring Arrest of 44.

Fifty-seven safe robberies in Chicago since the first of the year are believed to have been committed by a "mob" of thieves run to earth by Acting Chief of Detectives James L. Mooney. Thirty-eight men and six women, constituting the organized band, are under arrest.

Many of the men are believed to have looted $2,000 from the Kowalewski Brothers' bank at 1289 West Fifty-first street and the Merchants' bank at 4649 South State street in daylight stickup robberies Friday. James Bolton, a saloonkeeper at 1726 West Chicago avenue, was partly identified by employees of the Kowalewski bank. Joseph Hussey, 2345 West Madison street, had on his person when arrested money wrapped in a bank wrapper, which was identified by J. P. Casey, proprietor of the Merchants' bank.

Gets Key to Code.

The gang had planned wholesale burglaries for the immediate future, it is said. Chief Mooney had come into possession of a key to the code which they used in telephoning to each other to avoid danger from tapped wires. He planned to capture the thieves red handed in a robbery. With his rifle squad of detective bureau he trailed them on the nights of April 19 and 21 to the Chicago Clothing store at Nineteenth place and Halsted street and to Borden's central milk depot at Van Buren street and Ashland avenue.

Four of the burglars drove to these points in an automobile, looked them over and drove away. Chief Mooney believes they suspected they were being followed. If they had cracked Borden's safe they probably would have obtained over $15,000. More than 300 milk wagon drivers had left their collections there the night before.

Tap Telephone Wires.

Chief Mooney's detectives had learned of them contemplated jobs by tapped telephone wires and had decoded the talk of the thieves. Their code consisted of an arrangement of numbers which referred to letters of the alphabet.

To show how cunningly it was contrived, the man who received a message always subtracted one from the number mentioned, which gave him the correct letter. In the code of the gang, for instance, the name "Borden" would be spelled 3-16-19-5-6-13. From each of the figures one would be subtracted and the corresponding letters would spell the name. By the use of this code they communicated their plans to each other and arranged where the gang should meet to start upon the midnight adventure.

Learns Their Plans.

It was by tapped telephone wires and a knowledge of this code that Chief Mooney learned that "Big Joe" Moran, "the brains" of the gang, and R. P. Wilson had started for Gary, Ind., after one of the first police raid had reached them. Detective Sergts. McFarland and Wilson trailed the fugitives through Chatham to Gary and arrested them late last night.

Moran had $345 in cash sewed in his clothes, Wilson had $430. Edward Bauer, who had driven them to Gary in a hansom was arrested with them. Moran is believed to have led the gang which robbed the Kowalewski and Merchants' banks. Wilson is thought to have participated in the robbery. The money, it is thought, is part of the loot.

Jilted Man Betrays Them.

Jealousy of Charles Francis, a member of the gang under arrest in Cincinnati, led to the police round-up of the burglars. Francis, a full-blood Indian, had married Kay-se, also known as Daisy Francis, an Indian girl. Moran wooed and won Kay-se and Francis for revenge revealed the names of his former partners in crime. He said he feared that Moran would prevent the possibility of the girl's betraying him by killing her. There is a possibility that Moran may have sealed the girl's fate by killing her.

She had lived with Moran at 6827 South State street in a cottage purchased, Francis said, with the proceeds of the safeblowing at the Bowman Dairy company, 4452 Cullom avenue in the early part of April, when the burglars obtained $8,100. Chief Mooney expected to find her either there when he raided the place or in company with Moran when the latter was captured.

But Kay-se was not at the cottage and Moran claimed not to know her whereabouts. Chief Mooney believes Moran may have prevented her forever from revealing the gang's secrets.

Many Rendezvous Points.

The chief rendezvous of the gang which was raided by the police were at 6837 South State street, the saloon of Joseph Gallagher at 1726 West Chicago avenue; Jacob Mueller's saloon at 768 West Van Buren street; James Hussey's home, 2374 West Madison street; the flat of Arthur Metzner, 4530 Prairie avenue; "Kid" Diehme's home at 2304 West Monroe street; and James Kerrigan's house at 305 North Kilbourn avenue.

Of the forty-four persons arrested twelve have long records as safeblowers. The noted safeblowers and "petermen" in the crowd are: Joe Moran, James Gallagher, John Jones, Arthur Metzner, John Ryan, Walter S. McConnell, James Driscoll, James Hussey, Harry Wilson, John Leonard, "Jackie" Carr, and "Kid" Diehme. All of these have served prison terms for safeblowing and are recognized as among the "stars" of the "profession" throughout the United States.

Moran Sought as Slayer.

Moran is wanted for murder in Fort Wayne, Ind. "Kid" Diehme killed Ray Corbett in a saloon brawl in Thirty-fifth street four years ago. When the police raided his home, Diehme, also known as Charles Wilson, leaped through a window, but was recaptured.

At the detective bureau he strolled out the door unnoticed and again was recaptured several blocks away. "Jackie" Carr was arrested in connection with the $20,000 holdup robbery of Edward Alberti's jewelry store at 1446 Milwaukee avenue three years ago. He formerly was associated with "Scully the Robber" and "Ice Wagon" Connors, both "settled" long ago.

Boy Killed by Train.

While playing with several companions on the Burlington tracks at Home avenue yesterday, Benedict Wojciechowski, 5 years old, of 3047 West Seventeenth street, was fatally injured by a train.

ROBBERS, CROOKS AND 'DIPS' PROFIT $50,000 IN WEEK

340 Burglaries and Larcenies Are Reported in Seven Days.

Taking advantage of Mayor Thompson's proclamation for a cleanup week, burglars, pickpockets, swindlers, holdup men, and automobile thieves cleaned up $50,000 in loot.

Besides the two bank robberies by auto bandits there were thirty other holdups, in some cases the victims being assaulted. Although the total of holdup robberies for the week was below the average, the amount of loot was larger than for any former week in six months.

340 Thefts Reported.

Three hundred and forty burglaries and larcenies were reported, which is a slight increase over the average. The police say there is always an increase in burglaries around housecleaning and moving time. Women, the police say, hire strangers to help with the work, and discover later the disappearance of valuables.

Auto Thieves Active.

Automobile thieves were unusually active during the week. Sixty-five cars were reported stolen. About 10 per cent of stolen autos are not recovered. Tires and other accessories are taken from those which the thieves abandon.

Judge Delays Action on Fender Injunction

At the conclusion of arguments yesterday on the petition for an injunction by the Consumers company and other users of heavy trucks to restrain the city from enforcing the fender ordinance passed last June, Judge Smith in the Circuit court announced he would take the matter under advisement.

POLICE LAY NET FOR WRIGLEY GEM BURGLAR

Detectives Raid House at Los Angeles, Recover Diamonds.

Chicago police are laying a net for the burglar who got $40,000 in gems from the Los Angeles residence of William Wrigley Jr., and escaped within the last thirty-six hours from the coast city. He is variously known as Raymond A. Sweet, G. C. Dunlap, and John L. Sullivan.

Sweet is known both by the police and the Pinkertons as a west side character who, besides having a record, is known for the conspicuousness of his burglarious enterprises. He has been a member of a west side crew of crooks for several years.

The Pinkertons yesterday raided a Los Angeles house which has been the western headquarters of the Sweet gang and recovered a large part of the Wrigley diamonds. It is believed there is a good chance of recovering the remainder. Sweet escaped capture by leaping from a third story window and is believed to have caught a train for Chicago.

Mr. Wrigley now is in New York and has been informed of the recovery of some of his gems. He has offered a reward of $5,000 for the return of all of them. More than $25,000 worth of the jewels were recovered.

Banker Escapes from Prison.

Leavenworth, Kas., April 28.—W. H. Hume, a trusty and formerly a banker of Arkansas City, Kas., escaped last night from the state penitentiary, where he was serving a sentence of from one to five years.

WOMAN'S CLUB INDORSES DRAFT; PACIFISTS BALK

Belated Message Is Sent Despite Delaying Action by Anti-War Members.

A strictly "pacific" difference of opinion among members of the Chicago Woman's club accounts for the fact that the telegram to Champ Clark, prepared on Wednesday, and giving the club's indorsement of the draft bill did not go till late yesterday.

On Wednesday, after the first session of the club's annual meeting, it was announced to reporters that the resolution indorsing the bill would be presented to the legislative committee at once and the telegram would undoubtedly be sent that evening. But this did not happen.

Pacifists on Committee.

On the legislative committee are certain well known members of the Woman's Peace party. Inexplicably it was discovered late Wednesday that it was impossible to get a quorum together. On Thursday also the committee failed to meet. It was not until Friday finally that the committee assembled and after a three hour session decided to pacify the pacifists by offering a substitute resolution to the club calling for "universal service for men and women."

Yesterday the club met for an all day session, the battle was fought, and the resolution indorsing the general staff bill won in time for the telegram to be sent. The women emerged from the meeting looking somewhat careworn but with a warlike gleam alike in pacifist and militarist eye.

Echoes of the Meeting.

"I'm so glad that everything passed off so pleasantly, with no hard feelings," said Mrs. George Boone Carpenter, a former president of the club, when questioned about the disagreement.

"She never even brought our substitute resolution to the club," said an incautious pacifist excitedly. "I told them that the bill was undemocratic and unamerican. I think it's a shame."

"O, no, no; there was no fight," said a third member of the group.

"Hurrah! We beat the pacifists!" said another.

The Woman's Peace party will have its innings in the clubrooms tomorrow morning, when Miss Jane Addams will address the peace committee on "Patriotism and Pacifism."

DR. M'DONALD, RESIDENT SINCE 1886, IS DEAD

Dr. Edward V. MacDonald, member of the faculty of the Chicago Hospital Medical school and a practicing physician in Chicago since 1886, died yesterday at his home, 5804 Dorchester avenue, of heart failure.

Dr. MacDonald was born at Fall River, Mass., in 1859, was graduated from Harvard in 1882 and from the medical department of Harvard in 1886. After coming to Chicago he joined the staff of the Cook county hospital and later that of the Fort Dearborn hospital. He was 58 years old.

In 1889 he married Miss Emma J. Callaghan. He is survived by a widow; five sons, Edward K., James E., Bernard C., Robert R., and William C. MacDonald, and three daughters, Mary K., Margaret L., and Emma J. MacDonald.

Funeral services will be held at the late residence Monday morning at 9:30 o'clock and then at the Church of St. Thomas the Apostle. Interment will be at Calvary cemetery.

WANTS TO TALK

He Says Divorce Action Is a Conspiracy.

FREDERICK C. GEHRKE, 1457 Rosemont avenue, a real estate dealer, filed a petition for a writ of prohibition in the Appellate court yesterday to stop the divorce proceedings of Frederick E. Bray, 1462 East Sixty-sixth street, against Mrs. Elisabeth Bray unless he is allowed to testify in his own behalf. Bray named Gehrke as a co-respondent and later filed a suit for $25,000 damages charging alienation of affections.

At a preliminary hearing Gehrke charged conspiracy on the part of Mr. and Mrs. Bray, who, he said, are now on intimate terms despite the fact the divorce is still pending.

Other divorces:

MRS. IRENE MEAD, 6838 South Hermitage avenue, told Judge Gridley Ernest W. was cruel.

WAYNE G. CHISTY, an actor, charged Mrs. Rose D., an actress, with desertion.

Harlow N. Higinbotham Is Taken Ill Suddenly

Harlow N. Higinbotham, who was the president of the world's fair in 1893, and a member of the firm of Marshall Field & Co., was taken ill Friday night while on his regular visit to the Chicago Home for Incurables, one of his favorite charities. He was given a room in the home.

Dr. James A. Harvey, the physician in charge, said last night that Mr. Higinbotham's condition was improved, but the danger was not past.

Mrs. Joseph Medill Patterson and Mrs. R. T. Crane Jr., daughters of Mr. Higinbotham, are with their father. He will not be taken home for a few days.

Exonerated for Slaying Boy.

Detective Sergeant William Doran was exonerated yesterday by a coroner's jury of blame for the death of Thomas H. Dowd, 18 years old, 3561 South La Salle street, whom he shot and killed April 7 when the youth and three others attempted to escape after they were caught stealing merchandise from a box car.

ENGLAND'S BEER CUT TO 10 MILLION BARRELS YEARLY

Salvation Army Tells of Vast Reduction in British Brew.

The local post of the Salvation army yesterday made public a letter from General Bramwell Booth, founder of the army, announcing the prime minister of England has ordered that the enormous production of beer be cut to 10,000,000 barrels annually. This, Gen. Booth feels, is not radical enough to take care of the emergency.

"The whole country is being put on short commons. Prices of the necessities have risen enormously, and now again increase. Multitudes of the poor, the aged, and the young children must go hungry. These poor shivering thousands, and thousands more who are already sick and sore with the burden, must work still longer hours. The government knows all this. So do the brewers and distillers, and the drinkers. But in spite of all this knowledge, and with their eyes wide open in the gulf of human misery, vice, and crime which this drink has made, 10,000,000 barrels are to be forced upon us.

"Yes, and really all the talk about economy is reduced to a farce while the expenditure on intoxicants goes merrily upward. Beer and spirits have cost the people since the war began close to a thousand million pounds.

"Well might the prime minister say, 'Drink is a greater foe to England than the Germans!' We have a government which dare not cast it out. God help England! God save her from the hand of her enemies!"

MUSIC-FESTIVAL CLOSES IN GLORY: STOCK CHEERED

Chicago's music-lovers undertook last night an eleventh-hour atonement for their neglect of the Tuesday and Wednesday programs in the big festival, by jamming the Auditorium to the dome. Hundreds were turned away at the box-office from noon on with the information that not a seat remained for sale.

The capacity audience gave to Mr. Stock a sincere and thrilling ovation at the end of Part I of Mahler's eighth symphony, which was given for the third time in the five nights of the music-festival. Two huge wreaths of laurel were passed up to him. The nine hundred choristers stood up and applauded; and, as if on cue, the audience, also stood and cheered Mr. Stock for three minutes. He made a brief response, in which he said that he and his associates were more than repaid for their labors by their knowledge that the festival marks the chief milestone so far in Chicago's musical progress.

A second unusual demonstration for the conductor followed when, after Part II, he led the orchestra, chorus and audience through "The Star-Spangled Banner." The two hundred boy singers from the Oak Park and River Forest public schools presented Mr. Stock with a scarfpin in the course of the evening.

The cost of the music-festival is between thirty and thirty-five thousand dollars; and the deficit is, the management said last night, less than was expected: exact figures are not yet available. The festival is guaranteed by a committee made up of members of The Orchestral Association and subscribers to the regular season of the Orchestra.

Zimmer Leaves Joliet to Be County Hospital Warden

Michael Zimmer, who resigned as warden of Joliet penitentiary some time ago, but who remained in the office at the request of Gov. Lowden until an appointment could be made, left the prison yesterday to assume his new duties as warden of the Cook county hospital. L. Bowden, secretary of the state charities commission, has been made temporary warden.

Melrose Park President Arrested as Embezzler

Charles J. Wolf, who, upon being re-elected president of the village board of Melrose Park, discharged his brother, who was village treasurer, was arrested yesterday on a charge of embezzlement. He is head of the Citizens' bank of Melrose. A warrant also was served on John Engbrecht, former village clerk. Wolf is accused of transferring $847.51 of village money to his own account. He charges spitework on the part of his brother's followers.

For Year 'Round Comfort in Any Weather—A Cadillac Enclosed Car

Year 'round comfort cannot be secured in an open car—any more than on an open veranda. The glass enclosed sun parlor has replaced the "porch," and the enclosed car is now the preferred type among experienced motorists.

There was a time when an enclosed car seemed a rich man's luxury—the last car to buy. Now it is the first car considered by wise buyers of all classes—and the open car has become the luxury for those who can afford two cars.

Today our demand for enclosed cars is three times last year's. The spring season has but increased it. For those who are changing cars now know the greater comfort and cleanliness of enclosed types in town or country.

A Cadillac Enclosed Car the year 'round—in town or out—provides the surest comfort, the steadiest service. Its eight cylinder, eighty horse-power motor is equal to any emergency. It is as able in sand, in mud, on hills, as on the boulevards.

Its longer wheel-base, wide doors, unusually roomy body, substantial construction and wide opening windows—all afford a comfort in any weather, on any road, that no other car can match.

So think out this new car problem on a service—a business basis—before you buy. Look around among your friends of standing. Note the change to enclosed cars for year 'round use.

It is actually so pronounced that we now must supply more enclosed cars in spring than winter required two years ago. And forehandedly we are prepared. Prompt deliveries are still assured.

Eight types of enclosed Cadillacs are here for your inspection. Prices from $2735 to $3935. Foster Custom Built Bodies on the Cadillac Chassis, $4000 to $5500. Open cars, four types, $2265.

TASTE DECLINES AS UNIVERSAL SERVICE GAINS

France Never So Democratic—Will United States Learn?

BY NORMAN HAPGOOD.

[Copyright, 1917, by Norman Hapgood.]

LONDON, April 28.—There is no longer any doubt in England that compulsory service is better than a volunteer one. Like many others who began with sympathy the other way, this conclusion has been forced on me by a study of the situation here.

Personally there is no difference of opinion upon the principle now, some British Liberals maintain that the voluntary system was correct when the war began. It enabled the government to avoid discontent and division until the country realized the needs occasioned by the great war and changed its views.

The most impartial observers, however, think that compulsory service should have begun immediately. Much time and effort would have been saved.

Kitchener at the beginning of the war promptly said: "We won't volunteer because it is not a square deal. The richer classes get all the commissions as well as privates with no privilege. The government should have shared the burdens of this war will be shared without favor. There shall be no advantage given to the rich or undemocratic, no advantage to the selfish over the generous." This would have saved England much dislocation.

The volunteer system is unfair also because it selects the most sensitive and conscientious man, leaving the one with less feeling of responsibility to stay at home.

France Needs Americans.

Compulsory service in America will not interfere with a certain number of Americans who wish to join the British and French armies immediately. France is capable of bleeding to death. She wants men now, to put in her army, to keep it up to the required strength. What Kitchener foresaw, the French commander and the French minister of war now realize. It is extremely doubtful if the war lasts long enough for an American army to fight in France. If it does, the difficulties of separateness are distressing. Britain was just across the channel and after nearly three years she has a great army in effective action. We are 3,000 miles away with forty ton of shipping needed for food.

Train the army, by all means, but don't wait. Whenever men can join the fighting forces without taking shipping room otherwise valuable, let them join the French, who will receive them with gratitude and use them with promptness.

One of the two French officials I have just questioned went so far as to say, "If America will follow this plan it will be our salvation."

Germany Sticks to Class Lines.

America should realize the influence of the division of a class army and a democratic army. The German army is in such a class organ that ordinary citizens are being mostly kept from rising from the ranks even now. As the deaths increase the Germans multiply the number of noncommissioned officers and reduce the number of commissioned officers. It is not unusual now to see a company of 250 men with one captain and two lieutenants only.

It is difficult to underrate the bad effects of a regular army when under a class system. The lack of democracy in the German army is the only explanation for the German atrocities.

The greatest contrast in this condition is in the organization of the French army. There is not a company in the French army from which one could not pick eight or ten men to make captains. The French pick their men just as they come, without regard to their previous occupation or social status. The French are democratic in social life as well as in politics. There is nothing unsatisfactory to a Frenchman when a man serves under another man who has been his servant in private life.

Bulwark of Democracy.

The French army is the bulwark of the democracy. Every politician in Paris knows that the army won't stand any gesture from republican institutions. Since the war began many said France would be a monarchy again before the war was ended. They did not understand the new meaning of the democratic army. The rise of the distinguished Frenchman, Gen. Joffre, is a famous example of the working of such a system. There is no greater contrast to a democracy than an army which is made up of the entire population and where privileges for both privates and officers are earned. France was never so safely democratic as today. The first class system in England has been based mostly to the early stages of the war. The expression "temporary gentleman," which was used by the old aristocracy to apply to a man who had risen from the ranks is not as popular as it was a year ago. The "T. G.'s," as they are called with amusing snobbishness are so numerous that after the war they will make it hard for the permanent gentleman to remain a ruling caste.

Compulsory Service for America.

In America there are no definite issues, but favoritism in the giving out of contracts must be avoided. Properly conducted compulsion is the most democratic institution which modern life has produced.

The underlying democratic feeling in England is stronger now than when the war began, five will emerge from the war a more democratic nation than she was before. There will remain certain forms of centralization that are the result of war, but there will be greater equality in the labor class, greater power for labor, and less class distinction.

Class preference still remains in England, especially in the west, for example. A democratic system would probably mean that if it were understood that democracy usually means inequality of opportunity, equality means equality.

At the end of the war and the period of American influence on world politics will both be forwarded by a powerful American army. The Adriatic question is obviously serious. There is a probability that Bulgaria will make a separate peace. Russian politics permits the allies to offer Bulgaria an attractive offer in Thrace.

Germany has learned her lesson; let

MRS. GEO. S. ISHAM DIES; WAS ILL ONLY ONE DAY

North Side Woman Long a Leader in Philanthropy.

Mrs. George S. Isham [Katherine Porter] died at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon at her residence, 1340 North State street, after an illness lasting only a day. She was the only daughter of the late Henry H. Porter. Surviving her are her husband, Dr. Isham, and three children, Henry Porter, Ralph Nelson, and Helen. She was the sister of H. H. Jr., and George F. Porter.

The funeral will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m.

Known in Charity Work.

Mrs. Isham was widely known for her charities and for an administrative capacity that made her a leader in such public work. She was long an active member of the Women's Board of the Passavant Memorial hospital, and was a supporter of the Eli Bates house, where she maintained a day nursery and instituted a Red Cross shop to combine the giving of work to the needy of America with the giving of aid to the sufferers abroad.

She also supported a girls' trade school at Hull house, was treasurer of the fund for the Fatherless Children of France, which was started at her home, founded the Parents' league, and at the time of her death had just initiated a movement to coordinate all branches of women's service for the defense and aid of this country in its crisis.

Tribute by Friend.

One of Mrs. Isham's friends and coworkers said of her last night:

"Not only to her immediate family and her large circle of devoted friends, but also to the larger group of those whose lives touched hers at any point, the death of Katherine Porter Isham is a loss, heartfelt and irreparable. Her generosity towards any cause having even a remote claim upon her and her consideration for every individual with make hers a character of rare beauty, force, and lovableness."

Club Women of State Plan to "Mother" Soldiers

"Mother service" for the soldiers in camp will be part of the work of the club women of the state. At the request of Gov. Lowden they have decided to keep their clubrooms open during the summer and themselves ready to respond to any call.

Mrs. W. C. Foresman of 5445 Hyde Park boulevard, who introduced the idea of "mothering" the soldier at a meeting of the Woman's club, said last night:

"Our idea is not to be foolishly sentimental, but now that we have asked the war department to deprive them of what we consider unwholesome amusements we want to substitute something valuable. Our plans are undeveloped as yet."

Women Start Tomorrow Campaign for $100,000

Oak Park Y.M.C.A. to Give $60,000 for Army and Navy

The Oak Park Y. M. C. A. is making a seven days' campaign to raise $60,000. The campaign closes tomorrow night at 6 o'clock. Last night more than half the amount, $31,272, had been pledged. Of the amount raised $10,000 will be devoted to Y. M. C. A. work in the army and navy.

U. S. HELIGOLAND TO BE MADE OF VIRGIN ISLANDS?

Danish Purchase Should Supply Fortress Against European Attack.

BY GEORGE HINMAN JR.

[Special Correspondence of The Tribune.]

ST. THOMAS, V. I., April 11.—A century and a decade ago the kingdom of Denmark owned a small island off the north coast of Europe. In 1807 Great Britain seized that small island, only to cede it to Germany eighty-five years later in a moment of international insanity. Today that diminutive ex-Danish island—Helgoland—is the stronghold protecting the seacoast of Germany, thirty miles away.

Last month the United States acquired from Denmark three small islands at the salient of the right angle formed by the West Indies. The bill was $25,000,000. Economically the islands are a liability, not an asset; but some day two of these ex-Danish islands may do for the United States what the ex-Danish island of Helgoland is doing today for Germany.

Ever since the United States half a century ago negotiated for the purchase of this pair, St. Thomas and St. John, more or less inexpert "naval experts" have written volumes on the value of one or the other, or both, as a naval base, and thus has been widely circulated the fallacious doctrine that the United States navy seeks three West Indian naval bases to protect each of the three passages used by vessels entering the Caribbean sea from the north and east.

Plans Misunderstood.

It would be well to understand this fallacy. Between Cuba and the island of Haiti is the Windward passage; between Haiti and Porto Rico, the Mona passage, and between Porto Rico and the Virgin islands, which include St. Thomas and St. John, the Virgin passage.

Amateur "naval experts" would have us believe that the navy wants a base to control each of these passages for the protection of the Panama canal. They accuse the navy of seeking Mole St. Nicolas, Haiti, for use in conjunction with the naval base on Guantanamo bay, Cuba, to guard the Windward passage; Samana bay, in the Dominican republic, they say, is wanted for the guarding of the Mona passage, and St. Thomas, in connection with Culebra island, part of Porto Rico, to control the Virgin passage.

This doctrine is just close enough to the truth to be dangerously false. Real naval experts, graduates of the navy war college, have little use for Mole St. Nicolas, even less use than they have for Guantanamo bay, our present so-called naval base. Guantanamo is superior to the Mole tactically, and strategically the distance between the two is so short that there is no choice.

Where Naval Base Is Needed.

The treaty of September, 1915, by which the United States rules the nominal republic of Haiti, makes no mention of Mole St. Nicolas, an omission which surprised Latin America, with its dread of American aspirations. Actual American aspirations arouse enough antipathy; and to endow the United States with ambitions it does not have scores only to aggravate an already unpleasant condition.

What the navy does want and what the navy feels the United States needs, not only to safeguard the canal but also to protect the entire Atlantic coast, is a satisfactory naval base as near as possible to the salient of the right angle formed by the Greater Antilles and the Lesser Antilles.

To wage effective war against the United States, a great European power must send troops to seize the Panama canal or make a landing on the Atlantic seaboard. A powerful fleet must convoy the transports carrying the troops. The whole enemy force, military and naval, must establish a base from which to operate.

Best Site in West Indies.

If possible this base will be established before the enemy fleet seeks out the American fleet. After the strain of a 3,000 mile transatlantic trip the enemy fleet will reach the American coast only 80 per cent efficient. The enemy commander will seek to refit ships and rest crews before tackling the theoretically 100 per cent efficient American squadron.

This necessitates a base. It will be dangerous to attempt to establish such a base on the continental United States before the American fleet has been disposed of, and it is an axiom that no great military undertaking can depend on any avoidable risk. The best sites for such a base are found in the West Indies.

Obviously, then, the best site for an American naval base is as near as possible to the West Indian salient stretching out into the Atlantic. From such a base the American fleet will be able to sally forth and engage the enemy as he approaches the coast, his ships racked, his crews worn by the 3,500 mile voyage. Under ordinary circumstances he will hardly dare to pass by, leaving the American fleet on his line of communications. Even if he is overwhelmingly superior in strength and dares to pass, he will be menaced constantly by submarine raids so long as the American forces keep their base.

Two Desirable Locations.

Navy experts regard St. Thomas and St. John together and Samana bay in the Dominican republic as the two best potential naval bases for the American fleet. Being right at the salient, St. Thomas and St. John are the better site strategically, while Samana bay, 300 miles west, is preferable tactically. Which has the better combined qualifications is a matter of argument in the navy war college.

Unfortunately, St. Thomas and St. John are dominated by the British island of Tortola; and while war with Great Britain has never recently been considered within the range of probabilities by the navy war college, still some officers hesitate to risk the national defense on the friendship of a single power. It is reported in St. Thomas that the United States has been making efforts to purchase Tortola, but this report is ridiculed by American officials.

Although Samana bay is theoretically the property of the Dominican republic, so-called, that nation in turn is the property of the United States, which rules it by a military government. In the settlement of the Dominican tangle the United States will have no difficulty in retaining possession of Samana bay, which the Dominicans have no hopes of keeping.

SON OF BATTLE

Chicago Youth, Eighth of His Name, Which Has Been Represented in Every U. S. War, Goes to the Front.

Robert Hill Bolling

In every war in which this country has participated since the revolution until and including the Spanish-American war of 1808 there has been a Robert Hill Bolling, and among the first arrivals on the European front since the declaration of a "state of war against Germany" by the United States will be Robert Hill Bolling, son of George W. Bolling, editor of the Daily Calumet. The family is a branch of the same to which Mrs. Edith Bolling Wilson, wife of the president, belongs.

He has enlisted in the American ambulance corps for service in France. He will sail some time this week.

The young man is a graduate of the Hyde Park High school, was a student of the University of Illinois for two years, and has recently been a student at the University of Chicago.

Naval Recruits Treated Ill on Diner, Says Traveler

Declaring that fourteen naval recruits from Nebraska had been unfairly treated by a dining car steward, Joseph H. Isaacs of New York City yesterday complained to THE TRIBUNE.

"These fine looking boys boarded Burlington train No. 2 in Omaha Friday," he said. "The steward collected 70 cents from each this morning in return for a very small amount of meat, extremely rare, a spoonful of cold stuff, and a cup of coffee. I protested, but the steward said that that was all 70 cents entitled them to."

Mr. Isaacs then bought the boys more food himself.

General Passenger Agent John Francis said the stewards are instructed to serve army and navy recruits with substantial food whether they have money or not.

"If I thought the charges were true," he said, "the entire force on the dining car would be discharged immediately."

Bread and Butter!

"And he took butter and milk . . . and set it before them; and he stood by them under the tree, and they did eat." Genesis 18:8

The patriarchs of the Old Testament were shepherds and herdsmen. They lived to wonderful ripe old ages.

And they did so because they lived simply, and on plain, substantial foods. Being herdsmen, their diet was chiefly a Dairy Diet. They drank much milk; they consumed quantities of rich cheeses, and they ate butter, plenty of it, crisp and golden. It was a staple food with them.

"Butter and milk he set before them . . . and they did eat."

THAT WAS SIX THOUSAND YEARS AGO!

These forebears of ours, living chiefly on a Dairy diet, were strong men and strong women. They had to be. All life was based on physical endurance. In the sweat of their brows did they maintain their existence.

"Races which avail themselves extensively of Dairy Products are the strongest and most enduring the world has known."

So says Professor Nathaniel S. Shaler in his book "Domesticated Animals," page 110.

Dairy Products—Milk, Butter and Cheese—make for health, strength and long life.

Now, as then, they are man's best, most wholesome, most nourishing foods, and among the very cheapest.

One quart of Milk is equal in food value to 9 ounces of bread, or 8 eggs, or 11 ounces of steak, or 8 average-sized potatoes.

And it requires the fat of 8 to 10 quarts of Milk to produce 1 pound of Butter. Hence Butter stands supreme as a food in health-value and low cost.

A piece of bread thickly spread with pure creamery Butter and a glass or two of Milk is the most nourishing, most strengthening, most digestible and cheapest meal alike for young and old.

It is the ideal food for growing children. Give them all they want. For their own health's sake teach them to prefer it to all else.

Butter is the best cooking fat. Expert cooks will use nothing else. You have never eaten a luscious steak, a delectable chop, a savory fowl, or a delicious bass or trout, if you have not cooked them in butter.

Food cooked in Butter is tempting, appetizing, nourishing, and full of health.

And then remember:

"There Is No Substitute for Butter!"

Because there is no substitute for Butterfat. There is no fat which in purity, healthfulness and digestibility compares with Butter.

Butter, and Butter alone, melts in the mouth and is completely absorbed by the body—all but 2 per cent.

All this is fully explained in the literature which is yours for the asking, if you cut out the coupon at the bottom of this page.

"There Is No Substitute for Butter!"

Cut that line out and paste it up in your kitchen.

Remember it when you telephone your grocer or go to the market. When he suggests "something just as good," say to him just this—and say it firmly:

"There Is No Substitute for Butter!"

For there isn't.

Wives and Mothers—Read This!

Mothers, here is a thought for you:

John R. Thompson, the largest individual restaurateur of America, has a standing offer of $1,000 to any man, woman or child who can prove that he uses anything but real creamery BUTTER in any of his 97 restaurants or kitchens.

He feeds 200,000 men and women in one day.

He uses and serves BUTTER—nothing but pure creamery BUTTER—in all his kitchens and on all his tables.

A Famous Cook's Secret

You can always spot the expert cook. She cooks with Butter.

Billy the Oysterman of New York City, famous throughout the country for his glorious fish dinners, when asked the secret of his supply of fish, answered:

"I buy fine fish, but it isn't the fish. It's the way I cook them. I make them literally SWIM in BUTTER—GOOD BUTTER. The best steak, chop or fish is ruined unless you use plenty of good, fresh butter."

A noted guide and camp-cook of the North Woods, whose fish dinners were culinary classics, divulged his secret once.

"I put a lot of good butter in my frying pan first," he said, "and I put it on the fire; and when I have that butter just sizzling hot I drop my fish into it and let it swim around in that panful of hot butter a while, and when it comes out—Oh, MAN!"

And your family will smack their lips and exclaim, Oh, Man! if you cook your fish in Butter. Cook your steaks in butter, too. The more butter you use in cooking, the better your cooking.

Fry your eggs and your potatoes in butter. They will taste much better and be ever so much more nourishing then.

The wise, thoughtful wife and mother will do well to remember these SIX WORDS:

This Council is composed of 280,000 dairymen, dairy cattle breeders and representatives of all allied dairy interests. Its purposes are to build a greater and better American dairy agriculture—resulting in improved soil-fertility and better farm life—to encourage every American consumer to have a keener appreciation (like European nations) of the high food value of dairy products. The Council believes its mission is patriotic.

A wider use of dairy products on the tables and in the kitchens of our American homes will mean a healthier and cheaper feeding nation. Our slogans are: "Drink and use more milk." "Eat and cook with more butter." "Ice cream is not alone an excellent dessert, but a real food." "Cheese is the staff of life of many nations; why not in U. S. A.?" "Dairy products—palatable, nourishing, economical—are Nature's best food."

MAROONS TAKE 4 MILE RELAY AT PENN MEET

East Earns Slight Shade Over Stars of West—Two Records Fall.

BY T. D. RICHTER.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 28.—[Special.] The twenty-third annual relay carnival of the University of Pennsylvania, on Franklin field this afternoon, sounding as it did the virtual taps to college track athletics for an indeterminate period, was appropriately productive of some of the most notable struggles ever staged on any track.

West and east staged their annual clash, and athletes from east of the Allegheny mountains gained a bare margin of superiority in the eleven college events from which a comparison could be drawn.

Five Events Won by West.

West won five first places, the 120 yard hurdle, high jump, discus throw, broad jump, and four mile relay. The east's triumphs came in the javelin, shotput, pole vault, 100 yard dash, and one and two mile relay races.

Two records fell by the board. In the high jump Larsen of Brigham Young university of Utah leaped 6 feet 5¾ inches, bettering the college record by ¾ inch. In the one mile college freshman championship Pennsylvania's quarter won in 3:22, cutting 3 4-5 seconds off its record.

Maroons Take Four Mile Relay.

The west's big victory in relay competition came in the four mile college championship. Chicago's well balanced combination won by seventy-five yards. From the outset the result was never in doubt. Powers led off for Chicago and opened up a gap of forty yards. His second Chicagoan increased this advantage by ten yards, but Halfacre, the star miler of Massachusetts Tech, came through with a wonderful mile and cut down Otis' lead in the third relay to twenty-five yards.

Tinney, Coach Stagg's brilliant miler, started at a rapid clip and gradually increased his advantage until, with a superb final sprint, he finished seventy yards ahead.

Utah Jumper Breaks Record.

One of the most brilliant individual feats was the record breaking leap of C. Larsen of Brigham Young university of Salt Lake City, Utah, in the high jump. Larsen cleared the bar in the regular competition at 6 feet 5¾ inches, which displaced the record college and relay mark of 6 feet 5 inches, held by Allen Richards of Cornell, formerly of Larsen's college.

Larsen then tried to break the world's record of 6 feet 7 5-16 inches by placing the bar at 6 feet 7⅛. Three times he cleared the leap, but each time after getting his body clear over the bar he knocked it with his arm.

The feat of the Utah athlete was all the more noteworthy because the high jumping pit had been moved into the sun to speed up the event. This prevented Larsen getting the proper footing for his leaps. The west also gained second place in this event when Rice of Kansas cleared the bar at 6 feet.

Penn Takes 2 Mile Race.

Pennsylvania university's team furnished the biggest surprise of the Penn relay meet by winning the two mile relay, which had been practically conceded to Notre Dame and the west. Notre Dame was forced to accept place honors in this event, and the University of Chicago squad took third.

The Quakers won by a yard in the most brilliant finish seen in a relay carnival in several years. The pace was so strenuous that Chicago's team was sixty-seven yards in the rear. Chicago looked to be the winner when Otis led at the end of the first half mile. Walker of Penn was second and Shaw of Notre Dame third.

Berry Gives Penn Lead.

In the second relay Otis of Chicago got out at the start and appeared likely to open a big lead, but he figured against the brilliant Berry, Penn's versatile athlete, who flashed a wonderful half mile, caught Otis in the stretch, and came home 10 yards ahead of Notre Dame. Otis was third.

In the third relay Dorsey of Penn managed to hold a lead of one foot over Shaw of Notre Dame. Swett of Chicago had dropped back forty yards, with Chicago out of the race, Meehan, the brilliant Notre Dame runner, and Terry Scudder of Penn began a desperate struggle for the lead. They battled down the stretch, the lead alternating. Scudder had the stamina to finish first by a yard, finishing his half mile in 1:57.

Quakers Also Win Mile.

Penn furnished another surprise when it annexed the one mile college relay championship from Missouri and Illinois. The Quakers had two men on the team, Dorsey and Scudder—who a short time previously had run brilliant races in the two mile relay. Despite this the Penn quartet scored a victory for Penn.

C. O. Higgins, the gigantic weight thrower from the University of Chicago, who missed place for his team in the

THE DAYS OF REAL SPORT

COLLEGES DROP EASTERN MEET; PLAN FIELD DAY

Philadelphia, Pa., April 28.—For the first time in more than forty years there will be no intercollegiate track and field championship meet for eastern colleges this season. This was resolved by the executive committee of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America at a special meeting here today in connection with the University of Pennsylvania relay carnival.

As a substitute for the annual intercollegiate it was suggested Saturday, May 26, be set aside for a special patriotic and athletic demonstration by the athletes of the various colleges and universities in the association, subject to approval of the secretary of war. The proposed field day would be held at Franklin field stadium and the receipts donated to the American Red Cross.

Under War Department Control.

The committee has already outlined a tentative program for the May 26 gathering of competitions among college athletes in various sports, special military drills, and other exhibitions in keeping with the patriotic spirit of the times. Further action will not be taken until formal approval of the project has been received from Secretary of War Baker. It is expected that a majority of the athletes will be under the control of the war department before the end of May, through enlistment and otherwise.

Request No Entries Be Filed.

The committee also prepared a resolution requesting all college athletes with the army or navy to assist in every way in the fostering of healthful sports, exercises, and amusements in accordance with the expressed plans in this direction of both arms of the service.

Owing to the fact that the executive committee has not the power to cancel the annual track games of the I. C. A. A. A. the move to abandon the meet next month was put in the form of a resolution requesting that no entries for the games be filed with the secretary.

Refuses to Race Negro; Prep Track Games Off

Refusal of southern students at the Lake Forest academy to compete against a Negro led to the calling off of the track meet scheduled yesterday afternoon between that institution and New Trier High school. The colored athlete is Kelly of New Trier, who was entered in the dashes. At the suggestion of Lake Forest the meet was called off, according to Coach Hyatt of New Trier.

Snodgrass Gets Release from the Boston Braves

Boston, Mass., April 28.—Fred Snodgrass, outfielder of the Boston Nationals, has been given his unconditional release. Snodgrass came to the Braves from the New York National Giants in 1915. His contract, which called for $6,000 a year, it is said, expired this year, and rather than sign at a lower figure he decided to go into the automobile business in Los Angeles, Cal.

CRAZY KENNEDY, DETECTIVE

Words AND Pictures

BY RING W. LARDNER

CHAPTER 1.

"OLD FRIEND," I said to Crazy Kennedy one morning, "you have no wives or children or canaries dependent on you. I should think you would enlist."

I said this in jest, realizing that Kennedy was doing more good in his work here at home than he could possibly accomplish as a soldier. But his serious reply surprised me, as I had had no idea of the struggle that had been going on in his mind.

"Morrison," said he, "I have thought the thing all out and have decided that it is my duty to devote my peculiar skill to the government secret service. I have offered myself to the local officers and they have welcomed me with open arms. Already I have been assigned on a case that promises more than ordinary interest."

"Tell me about it," I urged, and went to sleep.

"The janitor of the High building," related Kennedy, "is under suspicion. Though his real name is Patrick Cahill, though he talks with a rich Irish brogue, and is decidedly Celtic in appearance, tenants of the building believe him a German spy. And it is up to me to prove or disprove it."

"Why do they believe he's a spy?" I snored.

"Why do they believe he's a spy?" I snored.

"From remarks he has made," replied my friend.

"What were they?" I uttered.

"Well," answered Kennedy, "he was talking to the elevator starter and suddenly looked at his watch and said: 'I must blow up the stairs.' The elevator starter was very much alarmed and called a policeman to watch him. But on that day he made no effort to carry out his threat, and it is believed he was frightened off. On another occasion he was heard to say: 'I'll wreck that train,' and they followed him for a week, but he didn't go near a railroad."

"How," I grumbled, "do you propose to get at the truth?"

"If you'll come with me I'll show you," said Kennedy. "It's ten minutes to 6 now and we'll just have time to catch him before he starts home."

CHAPTER 2.

Five minutes later we were cautiously descending the basement steps of the High building. Near the furnace sat Cahill with his back toward us. Kennedy nudged me and showed me a queer looking instrument.

"This," he whispered, "is the latest invention of science. It is a mouth organ. Watch our suspect closely while I test it."

The silence was suddenly broken by the strains of "O, say, can you see." Kennedy played the air through to its conclusion, showing a perfect mastery of the new fangled musical instrument.

"He's guilty!" cried my friend, placing the mouth organ back in his pocket. "He didn't stand up."

And raising his voice he cried:

"Cahill, you're a traitor!"

The suspected janitor did not budge. Crazy rushed forward and grasped his shoulder.

"Come with me, you spy!" he commanded.

The other smiled.

"No use talking to me," he said. "I'm stone deef."

"And you didn't hear the tune I played?"

The janitor paid no heed.

"I must blow up the stairs and go home," he said calmly. "Tonight I'm to be best man at a wedding, and I'm worried to death for fear I'll step on the bride's train and wreck it."

CHAPTER 3.

"I knew all along he was innocent," said Kennedy when we were back in the laboratory a few minutes later.

"Pat Cahill was a misunderstood man. His inordinate use of slang and his deafness caused all his trouble."

And my friend took out his mouth organ and played "A Perfect Day."

Ohio State defeated Chicago, 8 to 6, on Stagg field yesterday, proving better students in the college of swatting. Three triples and four home runs were among the twenty hits rung up by the two teams. Two freak double plays ruined the chances of the Maroons when runs looked certain for Pat Page's men.

The Buckeyes started after Marum hard in the first round and batted two runs across. A triple by Ash with the bases loaded scored three more in the third. The Maroons rose up and swatted Hussey's delivery for four runs in their half, home run drives by Rudolph and Hart coming in succession. Staudt scooped Curtiss' drive in left and forced men at second and third, stopping the rally. The Maroon runners thought the fly was caught.

Cahn's triple drove in two runs in the fifth, tying the score, but home runs by Norton and Wright won for the Columbus boys. Hussey weakened towards the end and was relieved by Putnam, who stopped the Maroon fuss when Norton pulled a weird double play after dropping a popup. Umpire Goeckel put Third Baseman Skelly of Ohio off the field in the sixth and pulled his watch before the visitors would continue, after Norton was called out for knocking a throw out of Hart's glove. ## DOWDING STAR OF PEORIA MEET

Peoria, Ill., April 28.—Athletes representing Peoria High school won the thirteenth annual Bradley institute interscholastic meet today, scoring 27 points. Bowen High school of Chicago and Peoria Manual tied for second with 26 points each.

Dowding, the Illinois A. C. youth, running under the colors of Bowen High, was the individual star, carrying away first places in five events, the 50, 100, 220, and 440 yard dashes, and running broad jump. The Chicago boy scored more points than ever before were made by an individual contestant at the annual Bradley meets.

Despite the heavy track, Harman of Peoria High shattered the record in the second 440 yard race with a mark of :55 2-5.

Points were divided as follows:

Peoria High, 27; Bowen High, 26; Peoria Manual, 26; Bradley Academy, 10; Washington, 8; Eureka, 5½; Delavan, 5½; Grand Prairie Seminary, 5; Bradford, 4; Normal University High, 3; Penn, 2.

RED CROSS CUP EVENTS URGED FOR GOLF CLUB

E. C. Brown Wants Entry Fee for Such Contests for War Fund.

BY JOE DAVIS.

The South Shore Country club has adopted a new plan to govern golf competition during war times. It will request all members who in past years presented cups for competition to offer cups for the benefit of Red Cross competition. Members who enter these competitions will be required to pay an entry fee of 50 cents. This fund will be known as the South Shore Country club Red Cross fund and at the end of the year the money will be given to the National Red Cross society.

President Everett C. Brown, who made this suggestion to the golf committee, states that eighteen or weny different cups have been donated each year for male competition and that in his opinion the entry fees for the Red Cross cups will amount to $700 or $800.

President Brown has requested the members to limit their expenditures on cups to $25 per cup for first prize. The same entry fee will be charged in the women's events. He believes if this plan is adopted all over the United States hundreds of thousands of dollars will be turned over to the Red Cross.

The opening event of the season will be a sweepstakes cup event May 19.

Beverly to Aid Red Cross.

Keeping step with many of the local clubs, the Beverly Country club will aid the American Red Cross, drill those of its caddies who are of sufficient age and size, and give the boys a chance to raise vegetables for use at their homes. At a meeting of the board of governors it was voted to donate the entire $500 appropriation made the sports and pastimes committee to the Red Cross and to request the women's committee, which has an appropriation of $250, to do likewise.

In place of prizes a "roll of honor" will be established, giving the name of the winners in each event, indicating the cost of the usual prize has been donated to the Red Cross fund.

Drill Master for Caddies.

The preparedness campaign includes the hiring of a drillmaster to take charge of the caddies during the year and instruct the older boys in regular army tactics. The boys will be provided with uniforms at the expense of the club. Also a tract of land approximating twenty acres will be set apart for raising vegetables, the seeds to be furnished by the club.

The produce can be used by the boys in their homes or sold by the boys at reasonable prices. Each boy will be given a small plot and a gardener will be engaged at the expense of the club to instruct juvenile farmers.

Ridge Club to Hold Benefit.

The Ridge Country club will combine a benefit for the American Red Cross with the opening of its new course on Decoration day. An eighteen hole match will be staged, in which every stroke will cost the player 1 cent. All the money will be given to the fund. Other Red Cross events will be held later.

The new clubhouse is almost ready for occupancy, and the course is rounding into shape as fast as the weather will permit. Par for the new course is 72, and as there is a forty foot roll it does not lack for variety. The entrance fee is $100 and the annual dues $65.

ARMY TO EXEMPT PLAYERS OF A. L.?

New York, April 28.—President Johnson of the American league, who is here, today said that while he had no assurances from government or army officials, he has reason to believe that if the proposed conscription law becomes operative it will not be applied to the players on his circuit until the season ends in October.

"All the American league teams," said the league executive, "with the exception of the Boston Red Sox, have become proficient in military tactics, and President Frazee intends to push the drilling of his team vigorously. Gen. Barry knows all about the efficiency of our earnest and patriotic players who want to become real soldiers, so that they can ably fight for the United States army.

"The players, who are great athletes, will make splendid soldiers. I expect to see all the unmarried ones in Uncle Sam's army next fall, as they will be kept at work drilling under the command of army sergeants until autumn."

Herrmann Holds Same View.

Cincinnati, O., April 28.—[Special.]—August Herrmann, chairman of the National Baseball commission, discussing the report that the national war conscription bill, passed today, would likely interfere seriously with baseball this year, said: "I don't believe the draft will reach many professional baseball players until next fall. Nearly all the big league players are married, and I believe nearly all the earlier drafts will take young unmarried men."

Notes

Detroit again today.

Rowland shook up his batting order, elevating Weaver to second place and dropping Risberg to seventh. It broke the jinx.

Faber started the fourteenth by passing Cobb, who was advanced to second on Veach's suicide. Heilman soaked a liner toward right. Eddie Collins used two hands and pinched it for an easy double play.

John Collins might have won the game on a strikeout in the eleventh. He fanned on a wild pitch that hit the ground and went to the stand, letting him reach second. Weaver sacrificed him to third, but Eddie Collins struck out, and on the third strike John was picked off third.

Schalk tripled over Veach's head in the thirteenth, with only one out. Leibold was sent up in Danforth's place to squeeze in the run, and delivered a bunt on which Schalk apparently scored ahead of C. Jones' toss, but Evans called the runner out. Possibly he had some dust in his eyes.

Weaver reached third with only one out in the ninth on a hit, a sacrifice, and a passed ball, then was trapped half way home on Jackson's soft bump to Crawford. In trying to get out of the mess Weaver was hit by Stanage's relay to third, but Umpire Nallin ruled him out for intentional interference with the peg.

The Woodlawn commandery marched to the game from the Thirty-fifth street L station to the music of a drum corps, which attempted to keep itself warm by furnishing noise during the interesting portions of the scrap. As that sort of thing has been ruled out since the "Royal Rooters" of Boston overdid it during world's series games, Umpire Evans stopped the game until word was sent to the drummers to desist while the ball was in play.

CUB MANAGER TO KEEP ZEIDER AT SHORT AND TRY HUNTER ON THIRD

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

St. Louis, Mo., April 28.—[Special.]—Fred Mitchell and his Cubs were in a mood to battle the Cardinals today, but the weather man would not permit, for he hadn't finished his job of sending gentle rain over the land in these parts, and after a steady downpour which lasted all night and made the ball park like a lake the combat was postponed. Conditions are none too bright for a game tomorrow.

While sitting around the hotel looking at the rain Mitchell found time to talk with young Herbert Hunter, who aspires to be a regular big leaguer, and he learned that the boy is a natural right handed hitter, but turned around to the other side thinking it would be to his advantage. Now Mitchell proposes to give the boy a chance as the regular third base man of the team and let him hit right handed.

Zeider Stays at Short.

Rollie Zeider, who is expected to rejoin the team tomorrow or Monday, will be kept at shortstop as long as he continues to play the fiery brand of baseball he has been showing for the last two weeks. The playing of Hunter on the regulars is one step toward the building of a new Cub machine and may be followed by other steps of a similar nature during the season.

Jim Sheckard already is studying the box scores of the minor leagues and checking off the live appearing youngsters for inspection later. When the Cubs start on the first eastern trip week after next Jim will slip around in that locality and glance at the live ones.

Dillhoefer to Get Trial.

Another recruit on the team is to have a chance in the game before long, for Manager Mitchell wants to see Pickles Dillhoefer behind the bat. During the spring training trip the young backstop didn't show quite enough speed in his pegging to suit the boss, but since then he seems to have grown stronger and appears fit now for a whirl at the big stuff.

DETROIT ERROR SPELLS DEFEAT IN LONG CLASH

Ivory Work on Bases and Risberg's Muff Nearly Cost Game for Hose.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Chicago and Detroit fought each other to a standstill for thirteen rounds yesterday in the opening game of their current series; then a timely Tiger boot in the last half of the fourteenth gave the White Sox the one run that meant victory by a score of 2 to 1.

The prolonged combat was staged under conditions better suited to ice hockey than baseball, as the temperature was below the sweater limit and a stiff gale off the lake made it next to impossible to hit the ball in the air safely. Consequently it was a pitchers' duel all the way.

Scott Weakens in Ninth.

Jim Scott and Harry Coveleskie were hooked up at the start of it, but Faber and C. Jones finished on the slab. Scott pitched a perfect game for eight innings, during which the White Sox were able to give him a margain of only one run off Coveleskie's stuff. But in the ninth, with victory in sight, Scott weakened and passed two batsmen. Still he would have escaped from that hole if Risberg had not attempted to make a cinch double play with one hand instead of two, giving Detroit the run which extended the contest until after dinner.

Scott lasted until there was a chance for a run in the local tenth, then gave way to a pinch hitter and Danforth took up the job. Dave held the enemy for three rounds, then was dismissed in favor of another pinch sticker, and Faber completed the task. Coveleskie lasted seven rounds, during which the White Sox earned a tally off him, then disappeared in front of a flock of reserves trotted out by Jennings in the eighth without producing any change in the score.

Sox Stupid on Bases.

The Rowlands were guilty of some of the worst baserunning ever perpetrated by a major league outfit, otherwise they might have copped a lot sooner. But the conditions were enough to benumb the brains as well as the muscles of the hardiest athletes. It apparently affected the think tank of Umpire Evans, for we always shall believe the game ended in the thirtseenth, when Leibold squeezed Schalk home from third base. But the arbiter called Schalk out and precipitated a kick that resulted in the banishment of Boss Rowland.

The Sox scored their first run in the sixth on a two bagger by John Collins, followed by bunts by Weaver and E. Collins, on which Shano completed the circuit.

The Tigers did not get a man as far as second base and only one to first base in seven innings. They came close to scoring in the eighth, but Scott dug himself out of a tough looking spot by tossing out one runner at the plate and whiffing Burns in the pinch.

Tigers Tie in Ninth.

Scott started the ninth by passing Bush. Young sacrificed and Cobb walked. Veach hit a line fly to short and a double play was ready made, but Risberg reached for the ball with one hand, muffed it, and could not recover in time to get anybody. That filled the bases. Heilman filed to right so far that Bush counted.

In spite of good openings neither team could break the tie until the home half of the fourteenth. J. Collins, first up, drew the first pass issued to the home team. Weaver sacrificed him to second and Eddie Collins pulled a bounder to Young, who booted it squarely, letting John Collins home from second.

BASEBALL GETS CROWDS DESPITE ADVENT OF WAR

Attendance Up to Average Considering the Weather.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

War's ultimate effect on professional baseball still is a matter of conjecture, as is everything else concerning war at present.

The immediate effects of the entrance of the United States into the European conflict have been inconsiderable, as far as the major leagues of baseball are concerned. Attendance figures at the early games have been as large as could be expected normally under the weather conditions that prevailed. Where conditions were good, as in Detroit, for instance, previous attendance figures have been exceeded.

In general the climatic handicap has been more severe than usual this spring, as a great deal of cold weather has prevailed. Consequently, whatever diminution of receipts may have been shown up to date can be laid to other causes than war.

No Increase in Prices.

That does not furnish any dope on what is going to happen, however. As yet the net results of war seem to have been an opportunity for an increase in the price of everything except possibly a few luxuries of which there has been a surplus produced. Among those luxuries is baseball, the cost of which has not increased so far as the ultimate consumer is concerned. A single exception to this rule is Philadelphia, where the National league club long has considered a revision of price schedules so as to reduce the quantity of two bit seats. That has been done, but was not due to the war.

Active participation by the United States, in war or actual invasion of the country by land or water will naturally have greater effect on baseball than what already has occurred. That, of course, would call for rapid development of the country's land defenses and would also entail casualties that might be serious enough to make it poor taste to continue playing baseball. As nearly as can be gathered from the opinion of men who have the best sources of information, that condition is not in the immediate horizon.

Acts as Safety Valve.

Until such catastrophe comes it is safe to guess that professional baseball will continue to offer the public a safety valve for its surplus love of excitement.

It would be wise for the powers that control baseball to do all in their authority to continue the sport in popular favor. It is pretty certain the government will impose a war tax on the receipts of the game, and at present it looks as if that tax would be so heavy that the club owners could not bear all of it but would be compelled to ask the patrons to share it.

The suggestion now being considered by the government is to tax admission to amusements of all kinds 10 per cent. That would reduce the bleacher seats to 22½ cents and $1 box seats to 90 cents net to the club owners, or would make bleacher seats cost 28 cents and box seats $1.10, according to whether the club owner or the patron paid the government tax.

Increase to Offset Loss.

If the club owner bears the cost it will be necessary to increase the attendance enough to offset the loss through the war tax. If the fans are asked to pay it there still will be the need of increasing interest in baseball to offset the natural tendency to reduce attendance figures by adding to the cost of admissions.

Early indications of the championship season are that the games will be less interesting than in the past. The supremacy of the pitcher is more evident with each spring, and nothing has been done to offset it. Already the low hit games are becoming frequent, and that is not the rule in the early weeks of a campaign before the pitchers have reached top form.

More Pitchers' Battles Later.

Air tight pitchers' battles will increase as warmer weather comes, and there is no doubt the public will tire of such games if given too many of them. A fan likes to boast of having been present at a game in which a pitcher allowed no hits, because that feat is unusual at present, but if it becomes a monthly performance it will lose its novelty, and there is no real interest in a no hit scrap because there is almost no action. The fan wants action.

The American league, through the foresight of President Johnson, is in position to add a new and compelling interest to its ball games by the fact that it has its players drilled to lend a military coloring to the entertainment. In these days when the sight of an army uniform sends a thrill through the blood of any real citizen, it is both good citizenship and good business sense to produce all the thrills possible.

Military Drill Popular.

The military drill in connection with baseball games has proved popular everywhere. It has not been used to its full power of entertainment, having been made a prominent feature only of the opening games, so far. It should be made part of the entertainment at every major league game, and at a time when a large part of the patrons are on hand to see it. That can be done by splitting the preliminary practice in some way so as not to interfere with the game and still afford a view of the drill to the largest possible number.

OFF TO WAR

New Trier High School Furnishes Four Athletes for War Service.

Rogers Weld, Thomas Pope, James Patterson.

WITH two youngsters on their way to the French battlefields and two others in training for probable future warfare, New Trier High school boys "are doing their bit." The two boys who left for the front Wednesday are Thomas Pope and James Patterson. Both will drive ambulances, one the donation of Glencoe citizens, and the other from the Kenilworth populace.

Rogers Weld is in training at a South Carolina port with the marines, while Francis Allen, last year's student, but this year at Dartmouth, has joined the aviation corps. Several other youngsters made application for various forms of service, but were rejected because they haven't lived long enough. Most of the latter group will join the farming contingent, and some may watch the wheat field in action as far north as Canada.

Pope was last year's captain of the swimming team and was regarded as one of the best water stars ever turned out by Coach Hyatt. Patterson was captain of the basketball team, which finished second to Evanston in the Suburban league, and also swam in the forty yard sprint and relay. Weld was chosen captain of the tank team for this season, but resigned when he quit for marine service. Allen was last year's Suburban league diving champion.

Coach Hyatt with his championship water team offer their services to the naval authorities to teach recruits the art of paddling through the water.

SIX BASEBALL GAMES IN CHICAGO LEAGUE OPEN SEASON TODAY

The new Chicago Baseball league will start its first pennant race at six parks this afternoon, proceedings of considerable pomp preceding each contest.

President A. F. Sheahan and his associates have many former big nine and Fed performers on their rosters, in addition to many leading semi-pros of Chicago and vicinity. The park clubs include the most successful plants in this section. The travelers are called on a par with the stationary outfits. Three champion teams are enrolled in the league—Normals, 1916 City league flag winners; Romeos, Sweitzer cup victors, and South Chicago, Litzinger cup champs.

Big League Trimmings.

A motor bus parade of Mohawk club members from their rooms in West Randolph street to South Chicago is part of the opening day program. Julius F. Smietanka, internal revenue collector; Robert M. Sweitzer, county clerk, and Ald. Woodhall will be in the party.

President Sheahan and Judge Crowe will form the honorary "battery" at Garden City park, while Jake Stahl, former Red Sox manager, will start things properly at Normal Park. The presentation of a flag to the home club by Senator Hurley and a drill by the Polish alliance will feature the inaugural at Logan Square.

The schedule follows:

Magnets at Garden City.
Mohawks at South Chicago.
Romeos at Logan square.
Rogers Parks at Normal.
Ragens at Joliet.
Gunthers at Beloit.

Games in City League.

The second round of the City league schedule will be played this afternoon as follows:

Merrimacs and Ciceros at Forty-eighth and Twelfth.
White Giants at Normal Park.
Galligans at Albany Park.
Jake Stahls and Rex Tigers at Chicago and Forty-second.
Mutuals at Grand Crossing.
Ideals at Cragin.
Roseland Eclipse at Michigan City.
Murleys at Hammond.

Among the Independents.

The tardiness of the warm weather is keeping the free lance and prairie teams from hitting their regular stride, but independent games today are:

Chicago Giants and Felix Colts at De Paul field.
West Ends at American Giants' park.
Sagamores and Parkwyns at Harlem and Twelfth.
Wabadis A. C. and Blums at Fortieth and Twelfth.
Fuwema Indians and Red Clovers at California and Roscoe.
Lexington A. C. and Clippers at Harrison and Washtenaw.
Lincolns and Montrose A. C. at Wells Park.
Blue Jays and Gladiators at Washtenaw and Grand.
Monitors and Sterling A. C. at Winnemac and Rebey.
Cusacks and McCarthy Tigers at Polonia Park.
Rein Colts and Ragen A. C. at Drake and Belmont.
Merigolds and Bronders at Douglas park.

BRAVES, 8; SPRING VALLEY, 2.

The Braves defeated Spring Valley at Spring Valley yesterday, 8 to 2. The Braves meet the Athletic A. C. at Lincoln park tomorrow. Score:

MENDING WHITE SOX

Chick Gandil and Swede Risberg Are Filling the Holes in Rowland's Defense to Which Was Attributed the Loss of the 1916 Pennant.

"Swede" Risberg

"Chick" Gandil

WHAT Chick Gandil and Swede Risberg have meant to Chicago's White Sox this spring can be gathered from their position in the race and the fact they have had only three pitchers in shape. First base and shortstop were the weak spots both defensively and offensively last year. Gandil has inspired confidence in the whole infield by his ability to handle with ease wild throws that would have gone through Fournier or Ness. At bat Chick has proved a game pinch hitter. Risberg, although wholly unfamiliar with the work of a shortstop, has caught on fast and fields the spot almost imperviously. He is not a strong batsman, but if he hits .200 he will strengthen the team by permitting Weaver to play third constantly.

Bowlers Start State Meet; Kennedy Shoots 278 Game

The twentieth annual tournament of the Illinois Bowling association opened last night at the Randolph alleys with 492 five men teams entered. The schedule calls for competition every day until May 22.

Pin experts were startled on the second shift when a 278 score appeared, D. Kennedy of the McCormick Reapers getting the high mark. His performance was considered remarkable for the early hours of a tournament. He lost a chance for a good average by following it with 124.

The Reapers took the lead with the night's high count of 2,614. The Continental and Commercial National Bank five had second high with 2,599 on the first shift. E. Bruhn and H. Gritzbach had high count in doubles, 1,077, and were followed by E. Sundlof and F. Johnson with 1,058. W. Schick of the Chicago Surface Lines league rolled 580 for temporary lead in singles. Scores:

C. W. Higgins Takes Issue with Ex-Prexy S. H. Strawn

Crafts W. Higgins, assistant secretary of the Western Golf association, takes issue with Silas H. Strawn, former president of the United States Golf association, in the statement made by the latter that the allied clubs never have made application to the national organization for voting power.

Mr. Higgins does not recall seeing Mr. Strawn at the annual meeting in 1904, at which he presented a petition signed by fourteen allied clubs, asking for a revision of the constitution so as to give all clubs, members of the U. S. G. A., some measure of voting power. This is a matter of record.

Mr. Higgins also was present at the next annual meeting held at New York, when the report of the revision committee was made, and this did not give the allied clubs any voting rights.

Mr. Higgins has no desire to enter into a controversy, but believes Mr. Strawn's memory was at fault, and so desires to correct him.

Downstaters May Drop Golf and Tennis Meets

Decatur, Ill., April 28.—Sentiment is strongly in favor of calling off the annual Central Illinois Country club golf and Tennis tournaments scheduled here in July, according to Dr. Will Barnes of the Decatur club. He recently wrote to the other members of the association asking them whether they thought the war situation would make it inadvisable to carry out the usual week's play and extensive entertainment program. Danville, Galesburg, and Decatur favor the postponement, and it is understood that Quincy and Bloomington will take the same position.

MAROONS WIN 4 MILE PENN RELAY

shotput. Sinclair of Princeton was victor. Higgins hurled the sixteen pound missile a distance of 44 feet 3¼ inches.

The weather was a vast improvement over yesterday, the sun beaming brightly from a clear sky. The air was considerably warmer than at any time during the season, and there was not enough wind stirring to make any great difference either for or against the athletes.

It was an athletic competition marked by all the panoply of war. Flags, not of the colleges but of the nation, fluttered from every point of the grounds and from the stands.

Two bands discoursed patriotic airs rather than college melodies, and the soldier battalions of University of Pennsylvania students mounted guard over all portions of the field and at its approaches, nattily uniformed in regular service garb and bearing businesslike looking rifles in their hands.

At intervals the various college military companies drilled in the infield and performed evolutions in a manner to draw applause.

There are twenty municipal golf courses in this country of the eighteen hole variety, eighteen of the nine hole kind, and three of six holes. They are situated in thirty-four states, and aggregated would cover nearly 3,300 acres, with eighty-eight acres as an average. St. Louis has 286 acres devoted to public golf. Denver has the longest course, one of 6,900 yards, and Danville, Ill., the shortest, 1,257 yards. Twenty-nine of the courses are free.

Maroon Net Team Bests Ohio in "Big 9" Opener

Columbus, O., April 28.—Ohio State university's tennis team lost to Chicago this afternoon in the first "Big Nine" match, the Maroons taking the doubles and splitting the singles. Lindauer, the western conference champion, won his match from Capt. Maxon of Ohio in straight sets, 6—4 and 6—3. Summary:

Singles—Lindauer, Chicago, defeated Maxon, Ohio State, 6—4, 6—3; Zuck, Ohio State, defeated Littman, Chicago, 4—6, 7—5, 6—4.

Doubles—Lindauer and Littman, Chicago, defeated Maxon and Zuck, Ohio State, 2—6, 6—4, 6—1.

WAR TO DISSOLVE PURPLE-MICHIGAN SPORTS ENTENTE

BY EVAN STONE.

Two months ago the entry of Michigan into the conference would have aroused wide interest on the Purple campus because by a general understanding the last date of the season for Capt. Driscoll's men was to be filled by the Maize and Blue. But war has dampened athletic affairs.

Whether Northwestern will engage in athletics next year at all is doubtful. Should the authorities decide to make no ruling on the matter, football may be played, but the Purple strength will be sadly weakened. Already Ellingwood and Putnam, regulars in the respective positions of half back and tackle, have joined the colors, and by June it is likely that most of the veterans will have enlisted.

War Darkens Athletic Horizon.

Northwestern students and alumni are pleased to have Michigan back, but the pleasant thoughts are of what may be sometime "somewhere in the future."

Wee Willie McGill's baseball machine, which, with two conference victories, gave promise of a successful season, is slightly out of gear, because of war and sickness. Capt. Ellingwood will leave this week for England as a member of the Y. M. C. A. corps, while Crissman, hurling mainstay, is on the sick list.

Pattie's Hurling Success Pleases.

Purple rooters were tickled with their victory over the Maroons, not alone because they copped the long end of the score, but more especially because they won with Pattie Driscoll pitching. Pattie was known to be a wonder in the infield, and with the bat, but twirling is a new venture.

Sinai Club to Hold Hike.

The Sinai Hiking club, composed of young men and women from the Sinai center gymnasium classes, has reorganized and under the leadership of Morris Berk, will hold its first preparedness hike today to La Grange, starting from Sinai at 8:30 o'clock.

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST

By A. R. Metcalfe

THE Deschapelles coup is of the first importance in auction and at the same time one of the most difficult plays for the declarer to interpret correctly. A splendid example occurs in the deal which follows:

Score, 0-0, rubber game. West dealt and bid two no-trump, south three spades, and west three no-trump, which closed the bidding. North had the opening lead.

At trick six north realized that the game could not be saved unless south could get in with his winning spades. The only chance to make a re-entry for south was in the heart suit and north, therefore, sacrificed his king with that end in view.

West never doubted that north held the queen of hearts and did not dare refuse the king, lest north should switch to clubs and eventually make the queen of hearts as well as the king.

At trick eleven west naturally played as he supposed through the queen of hearts in order to make the jack good in the dummy before giving up command of the diamond suit, and in the last three tricks south reaped the benefits of his partner's astuteness.

The number of points which the average player loses in, say, half a dozen rubbers, is very large, but not many of them would believe it. The next deal illustrates a common variety of leakage.

West secured eleven tricks.

After the deal was completed west exclaimed, "Well, I got all there was out of that," and nobody at the table contradicted him. He should have made a small slam, with careful play, which would have made a material difference in the size of the rubber.

The nine of diamonds should have been led from dummy at trick two and by playing the remainder of the deal exactly as it was played in the diagram above he would have secured three leads of diamonds from dummy and been able to discard the last club in the east hand, thus securing every trick but the ace of diamonds.

BADGERS' STARS GIVE UP SPORTS FOR 'MAN'S WORK

Madison, Wis., April 28.—[Special.]—With the calling off of intercollegiate athletics at the University of Wisconsin by the athletic council and the conference of the university regents, activities in every branch of sport have suspended, the government call to various branches of service. All athletic work has been stopped around the campus with the exception of the intermural contests of freshmen and sophomores.

Coach Tom Jones surrendered many men from his famous track squad to the any other Badger mentor. Capt. Chapman Smith, Schardt, Albright, Captain Donaldson, Cruthers, Dams, Gregory, Wilder, and Gatton have been drilling for the last week as members of the officers reserve corps. Jones' star pole vaulters, Hill and Endres, already have left Madison, Hill going to Culver military academy, and Enders taking guard duty at Superior with the Crosse company of the Third Wisconsin infantry.

From the baseball squad Dorgan, Boulware, and Reese have joined the Officers Reserve corps, along with Pfeffer does and Garnsey of the football team.

Other football players have considered they are well fitted to help along economic preparation, and as a result Kelley and Capt. Hancock have gone to farms. Hancock has taken over the direction of a number of farms in the and bean growing counties of Wisconsin and Kelley has left for Canada, where he will conduct the planting and ripping of potatoes, along the lines suggested by faculty members in the Wisconsin agricultural college.

Two Extra-Fine Cars

Built by John W. Bate—In a Bate-Built Plant With Many Unique Attractions

The Mitchell Six this year comes in two sizes—Mitchell and Mitchell Junior. But both belong to a single type, developed by John W. Bate.

This is the 19th model. It is the final result of 700 improvements. It represents his ultimate conception.

The factory which builds it is a mammoth, model plant. It covers 45 acres, and now includes a modern body plant.

It was built and equipped by John W. Bate to build this one type economically. His efficiency methods on this year's output will save about $4,000,000.

We urge you to see what extra values these savings have made possible.

The Greatest Extra Means a Lifetime Car

In the past three years Mr. Bate has doubled the margins of safety in Mitchells. The former standard was 50 per cent over-strength. It is now 100 per cent.

Over 440 parts are built of toughened steel. All safety parts are vastly oversize. The most important parts are built of Chrome-Vanadium steel.

Several Bate-built Mitchells have already run 200,000 miles each. So this new standard, we believe, insures a lifetime car.

It has been two years since we applied that standard to Bate cantilever springs. In all that time, not a single spring has broken.

31 Extra Features—24% Added Luxury

The latest Mitchell has 31 features which nearly all cars omit. Things like a power tire pump, reversible headlights, ball-bearing steering gear, dashboard engine primer.

On this year's Mitchells we add 24 per cent to the cost of finish, upholstery and trimming. That makes the Mitchell the luxury car of its class.

TWO SIZES

Mitchell—a roomy, 7-passenger Six, with 127-inch wheelbase and a highly-developed 48-horsepower motor.
Price $1460, f. o. b. Racine.

Mitchell Junior—a 5-passenger Six on similar lines, with 120-inch wheelbase and a 40-horsepower motor—¼-inch smaller bore.
Price $1150, f. o. b. Racine.

Also six styles of enclosed and convertible bodies. Also new Club Roadster.

Our new body-plant savings pay all this extra cost.

The All-Nation Car

The Mitchell commands a world-wide sale. In 1913, Mr. Bate spent an entire year in Europe to study foreign standards.

All over the world the Mitchell is recognized as a superior car. It is known as "The Engineers' Car," because every detail of construction appeals to engineers.

See How It Differs

We ask you to see how the Mitchell differs from other cars in this class. See the many extra values, in beauty, in strength, in equipment.

See what Mitchell Junior—our smaller six—offers for $1150 at factory. You have never seen such value in a high-grade car.

See these results of factory efficiency, and of John W. Bate's high standards. After that, the cars which lack the Mitchell extras will not seem in this class.

Our bodies are all exclusive—designed by our artists and built by our craftsmen, in our own body plant. See the various styles. This exhibit will reveal many new attractions.

SEES LEONARD AS SUCCESSOR TO FRED WELSH

Benny, with His Brains and Punch, Has the Best Chance, Says Pearson.

BY RAY PEARSON.

It's hats off to Benny Leonard.

From gay Broadway to the west this young fistic person came to show and convince those in this part of the country that he is to be reckoned with in terms that enlist the word champion. Leonard more than convinced—he made a host of boosters for himself—for any one who can knock out as good a boxer as Richie Mitchell of Milwaukee must of necessity be given the credit that is due. The length of time that it took this brilliant young man from Gotham to accomplish the trick makes little difference in this case. Leonard stopped Mitchell in seven rounds, but he might have done it in any round after the first.

In knocking out the pride of Brewery town Leonard exhibited everything that a scrapper possibly could possess and something that few of them do possess, and that is fighting brains. He boxed brilliantly and he hit with terrific force, but even with the ability to perform so capably he might not have scored his great victory had he not used the think tank just as capably.

Sneers at His Foe.

Leonard was just as self-possessed when he entered the ring to battle as if he were entering a parlor in his home. He maintained his poise all the time he was exchanging punches with Mitchell, and when it was over, with his opponent gripping the ropes and helpless, Benny turned and walked to his corner without the slightest trace of nervousness. His face didn't even show a sign of jubilation. There was in the corners of his mouth a twist resembling a sneer, for all the world like that which used to adorn the map of Kid McCoy of other days.

The gong at the end of the first round, which was an even session, gave plenty of evidence of the thinking ability of Leonard. He passed Richie as they went to their corners and he certainly gave the Milwaukeean the "once over" for fair. He looked Mitchell squarely in the eye and sneered at him. That was where he started the goat getting, and at the end of every round until the knockout he pulled this play.

Mitchell Fights Nervously.

Whether these tactics affected the boxing of Mitchell nobody ever will know, but a statement that requires no contradiction is that Richie never fought in a more nervous manner than against Leonard. He was under tension when he started the bout and he never came out of it. Then to make things worse, Leonard outguessed him at every turn.

But, going back to the business of the knockout, the writer has said Leonard might have finished the bout much quicker than he did, and, as a matter of fact, he nearly did stop the Brewery City boy in the second round, when he upset him with a right cross to the head. But Leonard was thinking for himself and wasn't ready to bring an end to the battle so quickly. He knew that Mitchell was still strong, and he also knew that when a fellow uncorks a knockout right he is taking a chance himself if he misses with it.

Works Foe Into Position for K. O.

So Benny simply went along thinking and jabbing his left to Mitchell's face. Round after round he tried by various ways to bring Mitchell in close with left jaw open, so that he could shoot his accurate right cross for a knockout. He worked coolly and as if he believed it only a matter of time until Mitchell would be in position for the jolt. That time came in the seventh round, and, like a flash, Leonard shot over that right and it was lights out for the Milwaukee boy.

Leonard certainly has some peachy right hand, and it would be hard to imagine any boxer who could shoot it more accurately. The writer, watching the battle closely, failed to see a single Leonard punch go wild. Benny has a right which he uses in a different way from other boxers. It is not a long swing, in fact, it doesn't travel more than twelve or fifteen inches, but when it lands it is a crusher. The small distance the blow travels explains in a measure why Benny is such an accurate shot.

Benny Never Flustered.

As showing how cool is this Leonard person, there was a little happening before the bout which would have affected many boxers. Leonard was in his dressing room and nearly dressed for battle when a fuse in the lighting system blew out, leaving the room in darkness. But this occurrence didn't bother the New Yorker in the least. He simply sat in his chair chatting with one of his seconds and said the crowd could wait until they fixed the lights so that he could finish getting ready for action.

It looks as if Benny Leonard would be the next world's lightweight champion. He must take the title away from Freddie Welsh, but he appears to be the boy with the best chance to turn that trick. And when they do meet it will be a battle of brains on both sides as well as fists, for there isn't a brainier scrapper in the game than the champion. Leonard runs a mighty close second.

Mitchell Brothers, Boxers, Ready to Join the Colors

Milwaukee, Wis., April 28.—[Special.]—Richie Mitchell, lightweight star, intends to apply for permission to enter the training school for reserve officers at Fort Sheridan, Ill., and take up work at once. Richie is a high school graduate and expects to pass at the fort. His brother, Pinkey Mitchell, an amateur boxer, will join the aviation corps as one of the United States training fields.

Four Heavyweight Bouts at Milwaukee on May 11

Milwaukee, Wis., April 28.—[Special.]—The Cream City Athletic club of Milwaukee will stage a heavyweight boxing tournament on May 11 in which Fred Fulton, challenger of Willard, will be featured against some eastern heavy, probably Bob Devere, who recently fought Sam McVey and Sam Langford; also Al Palzer, New York heavy and former contender for the title, with another big fellow, and two more bouts between heavies. Nearly a ton of fighting material will compete in the bouts.

Ad Santel Throws Stanton.

San Francisco, Cal., April 28.—Ad Santel defended his title as champion heavyweight wrestler of the Pacific coast by defeating Tuesday.

Bikers Make Good Time in Motor Paced Races

Motor paced races at Riverview roller rink proved excellent sport last night, and although it was the first time such races were ever held on an indoor flat track, good time was made. There were three two mile events, and the best time was made by Allen Halverson, who followed his motor around in 4:50. Pete Becker made the distance in 4:50 4-5 and Nick Becker in 4:59 2-5. Tonight there will be a special five mile motor paced race between Bach Miller and Hank Schumacher.

The St. Louis boxing commission will take charge of the distribution of complimentary tickets, thus checking the free pass enthusiast.

OLIN AND LEWIS MEET IN FIRST OF TITLE SERIES

Victor, Stecher, and Earl Caddock Will Settle the Mat Championship.

BY HARVEY WOODRUFF.

John Olin, the Finnish wrestler, who secured a referee's decision over Joe Stecher in Springfield, Mass., last December, and Ed (Strangler) Lewis, who twice has tugged to long distance draws with the Stecher person, will meet at the Coliseum Wednesday night in the first of an elimination series to determine the undisputed heavyweight champion. Frank Gotch, one time champion, is billed as arbiter.

Promoters of the bout plan to match the winner against Joe Stecher, with the winner of that tussle in turn meeting Earl Caddock, who recently upset the mat dope by securing a victory over Stecher despite a twenty-five pound handicap in weight.

Think Stecher Can Come Back.

Such a field of heavyweight aspirants with partisans flaunting their title claims has not been before the public for years. When Gotch retired and Stecher began sweeping all before him it seemed unlikely that his championship claims would be seriously disturbed for some time and the handsome young Nebraskan, who strips to wrestling togs like a well groomed collegian, became immensely popular. Despite his reverses by Olin and Caddock, many good judges think Stecher again will get his famous scissors clipping and regain his laurels.

Of this championship quartet, Caddock is the lightest. He notched 179¾ pounds against Stecher, who weighed 205. Olin scales around 220 pounds, and Lewis about 230. Caddock is perhaps the most versatile of the lot and maps out his tactics against each opponent in advance, but he is conceding chunks of weight to any of the others.

He came to Chicago from Anita, Ia., as an amateur and was picked up by Martin Delaney of the Chicago Athletic association, whose Cherry Circle he wore to victory in the National A. A. U. events at San Francisco in 1915. He received his first practical lessons from Benny Rubens and Ernst Kartje at Hebrew institute.

Olin a Greco-Roman Star.

In the elimination bout Wednesday night, spectators will see in Olin a wrestler better versed in Greco-Roman than in finished catch-as-catch can, but his tremendous strength enabled him to break the famous Stecher scissors. Ordinarily he would be expected to "bull" as long as possible if Lewis permitted, on account of his familiarity with the Greco-Roman code, but Lewis looks even more powerful than Olin and is noted as a great defensive tactician. His seven hours without a fall with Stecher proved this.

Both men, however, promise an offensive battle, and Lewis hopes to get an opportunity to work from behind and clamp on one of his favorite crotch and half-nelson holds shown in the accompanying photograph.

Several preliminaries will precede the main event, which is scheduled to start at 9:30 o'clock.

Gopher Grid Receipts $79,648.

University of Minnesota reports receipts footing up over $79,648 for seven football games last fall.

THE TRUTH ABOUT FLY RODS.

A FINE fly rod is probably the best beloved piece of equipment in the outdoor man's kit, but that doesn't mean that it must, necessarily, cost a barrel of money, as some angling writers assume.

A fine handmade fly rod of good make is worth all it costs, but the man who cannot afford to sink from $30 to $40 in a rod should not give up the fly fishing idea for that reason—not by a long shot. The statement that you cannot buy a decently good fly rod for less than $25 should be taken with a few grains of the stuff we were once told to put on the birdie's tail.

In making a good bamboo rod the wood is very carefully selected, many pieces being rejected before the ones coming up to the maker's standard are found. The soundness, resiliency, the grain, the taper are all considered. Then it must be matched, glued, and cured.

Obviously a manufacturer cannot afford to pay a good workman to use much time in selecting wood for a cheap rod. Equally obvious is the fact that no machine can do it, although the modern machine does wonders considering the good, bad, and indifferent cane it has to work with. In other words, a good handmade rod is a very "select" proposition, and your chances of getting a poor one, even if you are not a good judge of rods, is materially reduced.

Let's settle the price question now.

We would say, off hand, not to pay less than $5 for a fly rod. This will get a smile out of some fishermen of our acquaintance who would never consider a rod costing less than $30. But a friend of ours, who is a better caster and a better fisherman than most of the men owning $85 Leonards, says it is criminal extravagance to pay more than $6 for any fly rod. Seven dollars and a half is a safer minimum. For this price one can get a rod—this will be heresy to the high brows—that will give a good account of itself on the stream for several seasons, providing (and this is important) that it is a good $7.50 rod in the first place.

For $10 you get a still better tool with the added refinement of German silver mountings. At $15 you can get a fly rod good enough for the father of his country, and when you get into the $20 class you are approaching the major leagues.

It is not our intention to "slam" the tackle man when we say that in buying anything but the very best of rods the buyer's motto should be "Beware." This is due to the fact that there is a world of difference between the best and poorest rod in a lot costing the same money.

The first thing a buyer should consider is balance or "feel." We once wasted several reams of good paper trying to explain balance in a fly rod. Balance, like love, cannot be described but can be felt and recognized even by the inexperienced. When the prospective rod buyer, having decided upon the length and weight, takes up a dozen rods, one after the other, and whips them about he will undoubtedly come to one that "feels right"—that's the one to examine further.

Hold the rod out straight and squint along its length, as though you were aiming a rifle, then roll it over slowly. The bend or droop at the tip should be the same during this rolling stunt. If at any time while you are rolling it the tip seems inclined to point to one side stiffly, like a sore thumb, it has a "set" and should be rejected.

If the rod passes the rolling over test, rig it up with reel and line and see how it feels then. Run the line through the guides and attach the end to some heavy object and put enough strain on it to make it bend sharply. This bend should be fairly uniform from butt to tip. Turn the rod one-quarter turn and repeat the bending process from every angle. After each test the tip should spring back to normal with ginger and life.

The real test for a fly rod is a season's use on the stream, but since the tackle dealer may object to you trying it out that long, take your time in buying your rod. Don't let the salesman hurry you. He is not going to use the rod, remember; besides, if you will glance at his sales book when he lays it on the counter, note that his sales of $5 or more are greatly in the minority.

Ordinarily a man will rush in and buy a medium priced fly rod in ten minutes and stall around a week in buying a $30 one. It ought to be the other way—you can buy a fine rod by mail and be reasonably sure of getting a good one.

GREET CADDOCK LIKE A CHAMPION AT C. A. A. SHOW

Former Cherry Circle Boy Throws an Easy Foe—Three Boxing Bouts.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

In the presence of 700 members and their guests, Earl Caddock, a product of the Chicago Athletic association, who defeated Joe Stecher at Omaha on April 9, and now has just as much claim to the world's heavyweight championship as John Olin, showed his wares to the club members last night in the final wrestling show of the season.

In a one fall match Caddock threw Billy Schoberg, who claims the middleweight title. The former Cherry Circle grappler, who was holder of the light-heavy and heavyweight championships in the A. A. U., won the fall in 5:05 with a body scissors. He then demonstrated the holds with which he beat Stecher. He came into the ring with a Cherry Circle emblem on his sweater and received a great hand.

Young Shea Flops Bessing.

In the opening bout Young Shea won from Charles Bessing in straight falls. He won the opening bout in 4:05 with a body scissors and wristlock, and the second in 4:40 with a body lock. In the second bout Tom Rolowicz won from Oscar Jensen in straight falls. Rolowicz won the first fall in 12:14 with a head lock and the second in 6:35 with a body scissors.

In a one fall match Lou Tallaber beat Walter Evans, wrestling instructor at the University of Illinois, in 14:12. Evans gave up the fall after his opponent had secured a double wristlock and he was hopelessly beaten. Leo Pardello won from Marty Cutler in straight falls in the other bout. Pardello won the first fall in 9:21 with a body lock and the second in 5:14 by means of the same hold.

Three Boxing Events.

In the boxing events Young Reddy and Jack Loftus went three interesting rounds. Bryan Downey and Young Rudolph then exchanged blows for three sessions. The closing bout was between Lee McMahan and Frankie O'Leary. It was the best show of the year.

"If your tires are flat, or if they are designed to create suction, you reduce your speed—too much traction surface. That's why I say 'Speed,' when Simon Sure says 'Safety,' about the Batavia Indented Tread. They reduce the traction surface to a minimum. Less rubber touches the ground—and yet there's more rubber in them—but that's Hi Quality's story. He will tell it later in this paper, but still better if you put him to work on your car."

"Has the performance of your car justified the purchase of another Haynes?"

This was one of eleven questions propounded to a list of Haynes owners. 1,232 post cards returned bore the following testimony:

76 Omitted to Reply, 24 Said "No," 1,132 Answered "YES!"

764 or 62%—of these Haynes owners had previously owned cars! 17 had bought Haynes "Light Sixes" in 1917, 381 in 1916, 509 in 1915, others in 1914.

Almost any car gives satisfaction when new. But note that over two-thirds of the above Haynes cars were well above the one year mark in length of service. That their owners are not novices.

Doctors, other professional men, bankers, manufacturers, retailers, wholesalers, brokers, salesmen, farmers, politicians, retired capitalists, etc., etc., replied. Forty-six states and Canada were heard from.

Recall to mind the tendency of motorists to experiment—to try one make of car, then another. Recall that an automobile is a mechanism of many parts. That much depends upon the way it is used—or abused.

What unusual satisfaction a car must be giving when 95% of 1,232 owners selected at random—more than two-thirds after driving their cars at least one, two or three years—write the car manufacturer that their next cars will be the same make!

Wheat prices had a violent upturn early in the session yesterday, but broke sharply on news that the Winnipeg exchange had taken radical steps to curb speculation there. Resting spots showed May 6@6½c higher, while July showed a net gain of 1½c and September was 1@2c lower. The low points represented reactions of 12@15c from the high figures. At the outset the pit was filled with buying orders and prices were bid up sharply without any intervening trades. Most of the buying of May wheat was by shorts.

As soon as word was flashed that new trading in grain futures at Winnipeg would be practically prohibited, there was a rush to sell and heavy liquidation followed. The trade was extremely nervous and price changes were severe. There was little talk of export business and no sales were reported. Local shipping sales of wheat were 10,000 bu.

Some improvement in the weather northwest was noted, but there were showers at scattered points and higher temperatures would have been desirable. The winter wheat crop was favored by the cool and wet weather. Clearances of wheat and flour for the day were 361,000 bu, against 960,000 bu a year ago. Primary receipts totaled 757,000 bu, compared with 715,000 bu a year ago.

Corn Follows Wheat Moves.

Corn followed the movements of wheat. Prices advanced sharply at the outset and broke when the news from Winnipeg was received. Final quotations showed May corn ½@⅝c lower and deferred deliveries ¼@⅜c higher. Volume of trade was larger, with commission houses active on both sides of the market. Early buying by Block-Maloney was a feature. There was considerable May corn for sale in exchange for July at 6c premium for the former.

Country offerings of corn were liberal and one of the local industries bought considerable corn to arrive. Cash corn was 1c higher early, but later was 4@5c lower. Local shipping sales were 65,000 bu. Clearances of corn for the day were 121,000 bu. Primary receipts totaled 587,000 bu, against 776,000 bu a year ago.

Oats Have Late Reaction.

Oats were again active and suffered late reactions, along with other grains, during the latter part of the session. Resting spots showed prices unchanged to 1½c lower, May being relatively weakest. There was good outside buying of oats early and excellent support from cash and seaboard houses. Smaller shorts covered, but the larger ones increased their risks. Cash oats were 1½@2c higher early and 4c lower later. Local shipping sales, 155,000 bu. Clearances for the day were 34,000 bu. Primary receipts totaled 687,000 bu, against 1,007,000 bu a year ago.

Good commission house buying of provisions caused material advances in this market early, but there was a reaction later, when grains weakened. Longs did considerable realizing. Western markets received 500,100 hogs for the week, against 452,200 last week, and 506,200 a year ago. Local meat shipments for the week totaled 15,803,000 lbs, against 17,424,000 lbs a year ago, with lard shipments 7,808,000 lbs, against 7,780,000 lbs last year.

Rye Prices Drop Sharply.

Rye was 4c lower. No. 2 sold at $2.00. Receipts were 10 cars.

Barley ruled 2c higher. Malting was quoted $1.40@1.62 and sold $1.52@1.62; feed and mixing quotable $1.25@1.35, and screenings 80c@$1.05, with latter selling 97c@$1.05; skimmings were quoted 90c@92c. Receipts, 28 cars.

Timothy seed was strong, with September selling $8.95. Cash lots sold $6.00@7.00. Cloverseed was firm. Cash quoted $12.00@17.00, and spot prime $18.00 nominal.

Flax seed closed 5c higher. Cash quoted $3.33@3.39 nominal. Duluth and Minneapolis as well were 5c lower and Winnipeg ruled 1½@2½c off.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF BOARD OF TRADE

Officials of the Winnipeg exchange, presumably under the direction of the government, have prohibited the trading in futures of wheat and oats for speculative account. Old trades will be permitted to be closed out and trading against actual cash trades will also be allowed. The president of the Winnipeg exchange was authority for the statement the government has not been buying futures for some time, and that the needs had been filled for the present. Spreading transactions between different markets will be checked.

The action of the Winnipeg exchange officials in limiting trading was a bearish factor in the trade here and was mainly responsible for the late weakness. The shorts were free buyers early. The news from Winnipeg was received here following a break of 15c in Winnipeg May. The July wheat at one time at Winnipeg was practically 25c under the hight point of the day there. The market here was temporarily overbought and when longs tried to unload there was little demand.

Cash wheat prices were lower yesterday. Local mills bought No. 2 northern at May price, which was relatively about 10c lower than the previous day, and one mill was offered 20,000 bu red wheat grading about No. 4 at $2.40 from Pennsylvania. Friday that grade of wheat sold at $2.80. Local cash sales were 10,000 bu. Offerings of Canadian wheat are expected to be larger. Country sales in the southwest were moderate.

Offerings of Canadian wheat to come here were at about the same differences as the previous day. The unsettled condition of the markets made it difficult to do business. It was reported here that eastern mills were trying to resell wheat in order to take advantage of the big premiums prevailing. There was said also to have been some effort to resell wheat in store.

Minneapolis wheat stocks decreased 100,000 bu for one day.

Inglis sent the following report to Logan-Bryan: "Wheat acreage north of Springfield, Ill., is light. About 50 per cent will be abandoned and the remainder may make half a crop. South from Springfield I think fully 25 per cent will be put into corn. Much already seeded to oats. Oats acreage large and crop has a good start."

Trade in cash corn was moderate. Sales were 65,000 bu. Oats sales were 155,000 bu. Country offerings of oats were reported larger. The shipping demand was fair. Shipments of oats posted yesterday were $1,127,000 bu. The car supply is still limited.

Sincere & Co. had reports from Champaign, Ill., saying there was a great surplus of corn all through that section in the elevators, with quite an amount in farmers' hands. Car situation is not so good as it was a short time ago.

Local mills are offering to sell flour for September and October delivery at $2.50 per barrel less than present prices, indicating that consumers who are loading up with supplies of flour are paying much more than necessary.

"The hog quality is disappointing and the manufacture of lard per hog is of small volume," said W. L. Gregson. "Prices for products are now nearer in line with live hogs than they have been for weeks."

Receipts inspected Saturday: Wheat, 52 cars; corn, 47 cars; oats, 118 cars; rye, 10 cars; barley, 28 cars. Hogs estimated for Monday, 42,000 head, and for all next week, 140,000 head.

All orders now executed on the Winnipeg exchange will be first censored and no purely speculative orders will be accepted.

Charters were made for 100,000 bu wheat to Buffalo at 1⅜c.

Farm Bonds Tax Exempt.

The federal farm loan board says the farmers of the nation so fully appreciate the urgent demand for food and the high prices obtainable for it, that they are preparing to cultivate their land more intensively than ever before. The indication of this is found in demands for $125,000,000 of 5 per cent loans, much of the money to be used in the purchase of implements.

This great loan will be in effect a $125,000,000 bond issue by the farmers of the country to finance the purchase of machinery which will enable them to increase their output and take advantage of war prices for crops. This is "good business" on the part of the farmers.

The only extraordinary element in the transaction is the fact that the loan has been made tax free, so that the bonds will sell on a basis to yield only a little more than government obligations. If a corporation, owned by small investors, wishes to obtain a loan to increase its facilities, its bonds are subject to the income tax and heavy supertax which causes them to sell at a lower price, thus forcing the corporation to pay a higher rate for the money. Farmers, however, can issue bonds not only free of the income tax, but exempt from local taxation.

Thus far most of the burden of financing the war has been laid on investors. Farmers evidently are in the way of profiting by war prices, more than people of any other occupation, yet instead of paying extra taxes they are enabled to borrow capital on tax exempt bonds.

American Water Works & Electric.

W. W. R., Neenah, Wis.—The American Water Works and Electric company's report for the fiscal year ended June 30 last indicated that 7 per cent was earned on the $5,000,000 of first preferred stock and about 3 per cent on the $10,000,000 of 6 per cent participating preferred. A report for the three months ended Sept. 30 showed increased earnings. No later reports are available. At a meeting last month the question of starting dividends was discussed, but no action was taken. Apparently it is deemed prudent to keep cash in the treasury for use in financing subsidiaries. The first preferred stock is quoted nominally at 84 bid, participating preferred at 31, and common at 9½.

Brief Answers.

H. G. H., Green Bay, Wis.—The Colorado and Southern 4s of 1929 are secured by first mortgages on more than 1,000 miles of the system on which they are outstanding to the amount of about $19,000 a mile. There is a total bonded debt of $61,424,000 and the interest was fully earned in the trying year of the miners' strike and the dull period following it. The first mortgage bonds are a conservative investment.

E. S.—The Kansas City Northwestern first mortgage 5s receive 100 per cent of preferred stock in the reorganized Missouri Pacific railway. This stock is now quoted "when issued" at about 58. This would give a value of about $290 to your $500 bond.

S. B.—Good real estate mortgages are one of the safest investments and less likely to be affected by the war than almost any other security.

RAIL MEN SEE NO NEED FOR DRASTIC STEPS AS ABROAD

Operating officials of Chicago railroads think it will not be necessary to adopt such drastic measures to control the country's railroads during the war, as was necessary in European countries. No such advances in passenger rates as were made in England are expected here.

The American railway system, under the direction of the railway commission of the national council of defense, is thoroughly organized and prepared to meet at a moment's notice the transportation requirements of the government. The car shortage will not hamper the government to any extent, as military shipments will be accorded the right of way.

In the matter of eliminating duplication of service by competitive roads, the passenger service will be the most noticeably affected. But these changes, while they may inconvenience the traveling public, are such as would be welcomed by railroad officials, even in times of peace, for by this plan much expensive competition may be avoided.

The directors of the Pennsylvania adopted a resolution empowering its president to take any action necessary to make the company's facilities of the greatest possible service to the government in the war.

The coöperation of the country's shippers was pledged to the national council of defense after a conference at Washington. The shippers agreed to assist by loading cars as nearly full and as rapidly as possible, by unloading promptly and by timing their orders when there is a return movement of cars.

An agreement was reached yesterday between the chief shippers and representatives of the railroads, whereby an increase of 100 per cent in demurrage charges will be put into effect on May 1. The higher rates, by placing a heavier penalty on the holding of cars by receivers of shipments, is expected to be an incentive to the rapid return of the cars and to alleviate the present shortage.

NEW YORK BANK REPORT SHOWS LITTLE CHANGE

Government Financing Is Not Reflected in Operation Figures.

The New York bank statement made a normal exhibit, with relatively small changes in any account. There was a loss reduction of but little more than $200,000, and the decrease in deposits was something over $14,000,000. Cash increased $12,029,000, leaving the excess reserve at $11,642,220, a decrease of $6,336,000, compared with the previous week.

The exchange of checks between the clearing house, the federal reserve banks, and the agent of the allies, totaling $3,867,054,000, did not show in the net results of the week's operations. The figures follow:

ACTUAL STATEMENT.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 28.—Total resources of federal reserve banks increased approximately $37,600,000 since the last weekly statement and have passed the $1,000,000,000 mark, reaching $1,021,-$39,000.

NEWS OF THE FINANCIAL WORLD

William Pearson Hamilton, a member of J. P. Morgan & Co., was elected a director of the Utah Copper company at the annual meeting of the stockholders. Mr. Hamilton is also a director and vice president of the Kennecott Copper corporation and his election to the Utah board is regarded as being in line with the close affiliation which has been established between these two companies.

Owing to a typographical error in the balance sheet of the Safety Car Heating and Lighting company, published in THE TRIBUNE yesterday, the bills and accounts receivable were shown as $126,754, when they should have been $1,126,754, and material and supplies should have been $1,262,503, instead of $262,503.

President S. P. T. Dodge of the International Paper company, in a statement issued after a meeting of the board of directors, warned against what he called alluring statements from sources other than the company as to the ability of the company now to pay in cash the full back dividends amounting to 33 1-3 per cent.

The copper market is reported firm and prices advancing, since it has become understood there is a probability of the United States government paying more than 20 cents a pound for its future needs. Leading producers and sellers are asking 29c for July and 28½c for third quarter deliveries.

The report of the Minneapolis, St. Paul and Sault Ste. Marie Railway company for the fiscal year ended Dec. 31, 1916, shows gross earnings of $34,472,084.31, an increase of $3,610,717 over last year, and a surplus of $7,771,058.28, an increase of $2,616,020. Operating expenses totaled $19,241,581.67.

SALES OF LEADERS.

New York, April 28.—The market was nervous and somewhat unsettled during the greater part of today's brief trading period, buying of certain issues being more than neutralized by concerted selling of the leaders, including U. S. Steel and rails.

First quotations showed trivial declines, prices soon hardening, however, under the impetus of a sharp demand for coppers, particularly Utah, and a spirited rise in fertilizers, Atlantic Gulf and West Indies, and industrial alcohol. Strength of coppers was in response to latest trade advices, an advance of one half to a full cent being reported in the refined metal for midyear delivery.

Early Gains Forced Back.

Heavy selling of United States Steel and related industrials, the leathers, motors and oils forced the list back to initial prices, declines becoming more abrupt later on general offerings of rails. Coalers were the first to yield. Pacifics and St. Paul also receded, together with low priced issues, notably New Haven and Missouri Pacific.

Short covering effected partial recoveries, Steel making up more ground than most industrials and closing at a ½ point less. Atlantic Gulf and West Indies recorded a net decline after its early gain of 2¾ points, and Utah retained only a fraction of its extreme rise of 2⅝ points. Rails made little or no recovery, pressure in that quarter continuing to the end.

Railroad bonds tended lower with stocks, but internationals were more steady. United States coupon 3s declined 1½ per cent, the registered 4s 1 per cent, and the coupon 4s one-half of 1 per cent on call during the week.

PRICES ON HOGS HOLDING STEADY TO SLIGHT GAIN

Receipts Only 10,000, of Which 5,000 Are Direct to the Packers.

Hog receipts were posted at only 10,000 and packers had 5,000 of these direct from outside points. With 7,462 hogs left from Friday the supply about matched requirements and market held at the previous day's price level. Shippers bought 1,000 head. Top sales were made at $18.00 and the bulk at $15.80@18.90. Quality was poor.

Final prices made hogs largely 5@10c higher than a week ago, while pigs showed gains of 25@30c for the week. The average price of all receipts here this week was placed at $15.70, against $15.80 last week. Receipts for the week were 137,400, against 115,200 last week and 136,100 a year ago. Shipments decreased 2,000 head and totaled 12,862, against 12,896 a year ago.

CATTLE.

Starting lower, the cattle market at Chicago this week finished strong with best steers 15@25c higher than a week ago. As compared with the low spot touched on Monday, final values showed even greater gains. Receipts for the week showed a decrease, while shipments were larger. Improved buying by eastern houses lent strength to the trade in final sessions, when local killers were disposed to hold back. Cows and heifers sold and closed higher with steers, while bulls, canners, and cutters also showed appreciations.

Cattle at seven western markets for the week, 129,900, against 158,300 the preceding week, 120,200 a year ago, and 136,300 two years ago. Total for 1917 to date, 2,725,000, against 2,865,000 the same period in 1916.

SHEEP.

Sheep and lamb values at Chicago this week continued to climb into new territory, establishing marks never before equaled in the history of the trade here. Trade was largely local, as decreased receipts and sharply advanced prices gave outsiders little opportunity to trade. Lambs topped the week at $16.75 for a record mark and aged sheep sold up to $13.00. All offerings were closely taken at the prices and the market closed in a strong position at the week's best level. Clipped lambs topped at $13.60.

ARMY ENGINEER, FOUND GUILTY IN SCANDAL, BROKE

Uniform and Sword Both Listed Among His Assets.

Oberlin M. Carter, former captain in the United States army engineering corps, who served four and one-half years in the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kas., following scandals connected with the government's harbor project at Savannah, Ga., yesterday filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the United States District court.

Attorney Francis J. Houlihan, who filed the petition for Carter, estimated the liabilities at from $120,000 to $150,000.

Owes U. S. $74,000.

The United States is a creditor of Carter to the extent of $74,619, as shown in the bankruptcy schedules. This is the amount of a judgment obtained by the government against Carter in the United States Circuit court on June 10, 1910, after years of litigation. The amount was awarded the government as money due from Carter for "graft" alleged to have been obtained in connection with the construction of the Savannah harbor.

Green & Gaynor were the contractors who built the harbor improvement, and Carter was the engineer of the United States army in charge for the government. Carter is said to have entered into an agreement whereby he obtained, with others, hundreds of thousands of dollars. Much of this was paid back to the government.

Now Lives in Seclusion.

Carter's attorney said that the former captain now is living in Chicago with his second wife. Because of his financial woes, trailing the disgrace of court-martial and imprisonment, and the long fight for what he maintained were his rights in the legal controversy, the former army engineer, who now is about 60 years old, is living in seclusion.

The only personal property scheduled by Carter as not exempt are a captain's uniform and a sword which he wore as an officer in the United States army engineers corps. He is uncertain of its value. No valuation, either, is put upon the other assest scheduled. Carter's interest in irrigation projects in Jordan valley, Oregon, and Burns, Ore.

NORTHCLIFFE TO OFFER PAPER TO U. S. NEWSPAPERS

Washington, D. C., April 28.—An adequate supply of news print paper for every American publisher was predicted by the federal trade commission today in announcing that Lord Northcliffe, the noted English publisher, probably would turn over to the American Newspaper Publishers' association for distribution the entire output of his Newfoundland paper mills.

The addition of the 68,000 tons of paper produced annually by the Northcliffe mills, it was said, will break the print paper market and assure small publishers an adequate supply at lower prices.

The paper will be distributed by the publishers' association under supervision of the trade commission.

Road Charged by Electric Current Fatal to Horse

A horse driven by William Hamilton of Finkle's livery dropped dead in its tracks when it passed over a piece of roadway in Portsmouth that had been charged with electricity as a result of a broken electric wire. Mr. Hamilton jumped off to see what the trouble was, and in touching the horse received quite a shock, but his life was saved owing to the fact that he wore rubbers.

STATE CAPITAL DRY AS A BONE MIDNIGHT, MAY 3

Springfield, Ill., April 28.—Saloons of Springfield will close their doors at midnight of May 3. In a lengthy decision County Judge J. B. Weaver today sustained the demurrer of the "drys" to the "wet" contest opinion.

The demurrer was sustained in every particular and though the "wets" were granted leave to file an amended petition, it is generally believed the sustaining of the demurrer will end the case.

The decision puts over 200 saloons out of business.

PERRY PRODUCTS TRUST

Combining the

PERRY AUTO LOCK COMPANY

and the

LAKESIDE MOTOR TRUCK COMPANY

An Opportunity for Large and Small Investors

In order to raise additional working capital and for the purpose of filling present orders, which upon completion would show net earnings of over $500,000, we offer the unsold portion of 100,000 shares of the Perry Products Trust.

The subscription price of these shares (no par value and non-assessable) is—

$10 Per Share

It is conservatively estimated that they will pay a dividend of from 20% to 30% in 1917, and increase rapidly.

The Perry Products Trust owns the entire assets of the Perry Auto Lock Company and the Lakeside Motor Truck Company, and conducts the business of both companies under one management.

The Perry Auto Lock

The Perry Auto Lock is a device which sets securely in the steering wheel of any automobile and protects it from theft. When locked, the car can't be driven or towed. The lock cannot be picked or broken.

Perry Auto Locks are indorsed by leading police departments and Underwriters' Laboratories. Many of the large insurance companies have offered from 15% to 30% reductions on theft insurance premiums where Perry Auto Locks are used.

The Locks are made in two styles—one for Ford cars, retailing at $5; one for all other standard automobiles, selling at $15.

Since the Perry Auto Lock was put on the market last October the demand has been tremendous. Over twenty-one thousand locks were shipped during the first four months.

For cars other than Fords.

This business was done with practically no sales or distributing organization. We have this organization now established and it is being rapidly enlarged.

Dealer's orders now on the books of the company will net over $500,000 profit. Practically 50% of the business is done on a cash or C. O. D. basis; the balance on thirty days.

For Ford Cars.

It is doubtful whether any other automobile accessory manufactured up to date has shown such a wonderful growth in so short a time.

Our factory produces one thousand locks a day. We can sell more than double the present output. The earnings for the month of March were greatly in excess of those for any previous month and the demand is increasing daily. Few commercial enterprises have been more successful than practical and necessary accessories for automobiles.

Lakeside Motor Truck Company

The motor truck business is in its infancy, and money-saving popular-priced trucks are today considered a necessity.

The Lakeside Motor Truck Attachment converts low-priced cars into one-ton trucks. It sells for the price asked for similar attachments on the market, and has proved itself to be far superior to others.

A great advantage of the Lakeside Motor Truck Attachment lies in the fact that it displaces the chain drive, used on most light trucks. It has a direct drive and a rear axle of special construction and extraordinary strength.

We have many unfilled orders for Lakeside Truck Attachments, and have received applications for agencies from over two hundred dealers.

Present capacity of plant is twenty Attachments per day. This is not sufficient to take care of present business. It is desirable immediately to increase capacity to at least fifty Attachments per day.

The growing daily demand indicates a very large business and profit for the first year, with every assurance of a tremendous increase in 1918.

The Time to Invest Is Now

Shares of the Perry Products Trust should prove highly profitable to present investors. In our opinion the price will double within a few months. Present earnings and business in sight for the future fully warrant this belief.

Now is the time to act. The continually increasing earnings will undoubtedly send the value of this stock to double the price at which you can purchase it to-day.

To-day $100 buys ten shares; $500 buys fifty shares; $1,000 buys one hundred shares.

Keep your morning freshness through the day

SPRING at last! A time for activity. More work in a day. More joy in your work.

Don't let any of your natural burst of new life this Spring be cut down by a bad start in the morning.

Has your breakfast seemed rather matter-of-fact lately? Every man knows the success of his breakfast depends on whether or not his coffee is good. Does your coffee seem insipid, flat, characterless? Try Yuban. See what a difference it will make in your breakfast. See why its popularity grew and grew until even the men behind it were amazed.

If you think your coffee is good now, see how much better Yuban is. You will say you never knew before what coffee could be. It has just the flavor and strength you like.

Have Yuban for breakfast tomorrow. See for yourself why it was chosen from all the coffees of the world.

He walked with Kings

He could not know, standing there in his bare feet and his rough clothes, with his little schooling that kings would do him honor when he died, and that all men who read would mourn a friend.

He could not dream that one day his work would stand in Chinese, in Russian, in Hebrew, in Hungarian, in Polish, in French, in many languages he could not read—and from humble doorman to proudest emperor, all would be gladdened at his coming.

He could not know that through it all he would remain as simple, as democratic, as he was that day as a boy on the Mississippi.

MARK TWAIN

He made us laugh, so that we had no time to see that his style was sublime, that he was biblical in simplicity, that he was to America another Lincoln in spirit.

To us, to every one in the United States, he was just Mark Twain—well-beloved, one of ourselves, one to laugh with, one to go to for cheer, one to go to for sane, pointed views. Now he is gone, the trenchant pen is still. But his joyous spirit is still with us. Mark Twain's smile will live forever. His laughter is eternal.

He Was a Great Man; So His Works Are Great

The road ahead of that boy on the river bank was a hard one. Before "Mark Twain," a distinguished, white-haired man, and the King of England walked and talked together, his path was set with troubles that would have broken a weaker spirit. It was a truly American Story—a small beginning—little schooling—hard work—disaster—good humor—and final, shining, astounding success.

He fought with poverty, he fought with disaster, he lost those dearest to him. But he won. And then at the height of his fame he lost all his money, and found himself heavily in debt, for he was no business man. He went back to the hated drudgery of the lecture platform until he had paid every cent.

Because he was of high and brave intellect, because he had a humor as deep and as true as the human heart, and because he had struggled with life, he was a great man. So his works are great.

As Children We Loved Him

They say that children know the inwardness of things. A child knows the heart of a man. A child knows the heart of a book. We as children instinctively knew Mark Twain was so much greater, so much truer than anybody else that there was no one to compare with him.

Now, grown up, we know the reason why. He had the heart of a child; he had the style of a master, so simple that neither art nor technique was even suspected for a moment; a character so splendid that the reading of him was clear and fine.

We had to be told first by English writers that Mark Twain was incomparably great; that in the last half of the nineteenth and in the twentieth century he was not only the greatest of American writers, but he was the greatest prose writer that lived in any part of the world. He was so far ahead of his time that he surprised the people by views that seemed to them radical. Today we have come around to his thinking, and he has been proven right.

The Great American

He was American. He had the idealism of America—the humor, the kindliness, the reaching toward a bigger thing, the simplicity. In his work we find all things, from the ridiculous in "Huckleberry Finn" to the sublime of "Joan of Arc"—the most spiritual book that was ever written in the English language, of serene and lovely beauty as lofty as Joan herself A man who could write two such books as "Huckleberry Finn" and "Joan of Arc" was sublime in power. His youth and his laughter are eternal; his genius will never die.

Why This Half Price Sale Has to Stop

Mark Twain knew what hard times meant, and he knew what shortage of money meant—and he wanted everyone in America to own a set of his books. So one of the last things he asked us was that we make a set at so low a price that everyone might own it.

He said, "Don't make fine editions. Don't make editions to sell for $200 and $300 and $1,000. Make good books, books good to look at and easy to read, and make their price low."

So we have made this set. And up to now we were able to sell it at this low price. But a thing has happened that Mark Twain could not foresee.

Paper and Ink Go Up

Before the war we had a contract price for paper, so we could sell the set of Mark Twain at this present price. But now the price of paper has gone up. It has almost doubled in price. Even the price of ink has gone up. So it is impossible to make any more sets and to sell them at this low price.

The last of the edition is in sight. There will never again be a set of Mark Twain at the present price.

This is the first announcement of the close of this sale. Take advantage of it while you can. Remember that it is because Mark Twain sacrificed some of his royalties that you can have a set at this price at all. Take advantage of that kindness that was so characteristic of him.

Add ten years to your life

Walking Is the Best and Most Healthful Exercise in the World

A few months ago The Department of Health of New York City issued a health bulletin urging city people to add ten years to life by walking a mile in the open twice a day.

Among city people walking is the most neglected exercise.

Today not only do the hard pavements take all the pleasure out of walking—they tend to make it absolutely dangerous to health.

Walking on such pavements saps your energy and drains your vitality—if you wear leather heels.

Nature provided you with perfect shock absorbers in the form of soft, springy cushions on your heels. They were meant to keep the jars from the spinal nervous system.

But you cover this protective device with a hard, nail-studded heel.

Leather heels doomed

The leather heel has outlived its usefulness. It was well suited to walking on dirt streets and sidewalks of a century or more ago, but it is no better suited to our modern streets than the sandals of ancient days would be.

It has been superseded by the O'Sullivan Heel, which absorbs the jolts and jars of our everyday life and restores to us the light brisk step of youth.

The best heels for city wear

The heels best suited to modern city streets and floors are O'Sullivan's Heels.

They are guaranteed to outlast any other heels on the market. They last two or three times longer than leather heels.

Because of our special process, O'Sullivan's Heels combine the greatest durability with the greatest resiliency. They are made of perfect heel material.

Buy your new shoes O'Sullivanized. Good dealers sell the latest style shoes with these Heels already attached. Have O'Sullivans put on all your shoes at once. Every day you delay putting them on you are wasting your most valuable asset—Energy.

In black, white or tan; for men, women and children. Insist on O'Sullivan's; avoid the disappointment of substitutes.

VENICE, CAL., HAS A GOOD PRESS AGENT—At least so we judge from the quality of pictures sent out from there. Here, for instance, we have a picture of what we are informed is a new school established on the beach. At this school, we are told, the pupils and teacher attend in bathing costume. That the unusually trim teacher is leading a class in responsive reading, and the responses are from various books and magazines, is another startling feature.

A GUEST OF RAIDING U-BOAT—The little daughter of Capt. Isaak Jacobson, a Norwegian skipper whose bark was sunk by a German submarine, was taken aboard the submarine with her father and mother when the bark was sunk and was kept there eight days while the vessel was conducting raids. The child captured the hearts of the crew, and when she was transferred to a surface cruising boat she was presented with an armful of souvenirs.

Keep floors free from infectious dirt

As a housewife, you use every precaution to destroy the menace of disease that dust from the street brings into your home. In the cracks of the floors and woodwork, street-dust leaves contagion to breed. You know that mere soap or cleaning preparations make floors and woodwork clean only to the eye.

Do not expose children who play on the floor to the contagion that lurks in cracks and crannies.

If an oily skin is your bugbear, make this lather treatment a nightly habit.

Whatever condition is keeping your skin from being beautiful, it can be changed. Try the treatment given here.

Powder by day as often as you like—

but do let your skin breathe by night

Make your powder box your constant companion, if you wish, use it as often as you like—but don't go to bed a single night with the tiny powder flakes still lodged in the delicate pores. They clog the breathing spaces of the skin and cause them to grow coarse and large.

And a dry rubbing or grease cleanser merely serves to force the powder flakes, mingled with dirt and oil, deeper into the pores, causing blackheads and blemishes. Instead—

Spend five minutes this way tonight:

Dip a cloth in warm water and hold it to the face until the skin is softened and damp. Now, take a cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap and go over your face with the cake itself, just as a man does with a shaving stick. Then dip your finger tips in warm water and work up a lather from the soap left on your face. Rub this cleansing, antiseptic lather thoroughly but gently into the pores of your skin. Rinse with warm water, then with cold. If possible, finish by rubbing the face for a few minutes with a piece of ice.

Use this treatment persistently and your complexion cannot help taking on the freshness and charm which the regular use of Woodbury's always brings. A 25c cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap is sufficient for a month or six weeks of this treatment. Get your cake today and begin tonight to let your skin really breathe.

Write today for week's size cake

For 4c we will send you this booklet of the most famous skin treatments ever formulated, and a cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap large enough for a week of any Woodbury treatment. For 10c, samples of Woodbury's Facial Soap, Facial Cream and Powder. Write today! Address The Andrew Jergens Co., 5010 Spring Grove Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.

If you live in Canada, address The Andrew Jergens Co., Ltd., 5010 Sherbrooke St., Perth, Ontario, Canada.

Does your silk underwear stay pretty?

Or is your joy in it spoiled by its first laundering? Do your snowy combinations turn a dull yellow? Do your very nicest stockings grow thin and break easily at the side of the ankle and at the heel?

You need not have your prettiest silkwear ruined.

The things that hurt the delicate fabric—the alkali that turns it yellow—the rubbing that breaks the fine threads—have now been banished by the new product for fine laundering—Lux.

This way keeps it lovely!

Silk underwear washed with Lux stays white because Lux has absolutely no free alkali—stays sheer and silky because it never has to be rubbed. The fragile, pearly Lux flakes melt the instant they touch the water and dissolve the dirt in a few minutes. A few dippings up and down—and without the slightest friction the dirt is gone. Your fluffiest, laciest nightgown, your sheerest camisole, come from their Lux dip as lovely as the day you bought them.

Use Lux on anything that pure water alone will not harm.

Don't have even one more garment ruined by ordinary soap. Order Lux today from your grocer or any department store. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

How to wash silk underwear

Whisk a handful of Lux into a thick lather in very hot water. Add cold water till lukewarm. Dip your things through the foamy lather many times—work them about in the suds—do not rub. Rinse in three waters, the first lukewarm, the second cooler, the last cold. Squeeze the water out—do not wring. Dry in the shade. When nearly dry, press with a warm iron—never a hot one. Italian silk should be gently shaped as you iron.

THE HOLY CITY—The successes of the allies on the Mesopotamian front indicate that Jerusalem, after nearly seven centuries, will again be wrested from the hands of the Moslems. The Mohammedans held Jerusalem from 637 A. D. until 1099, when it was taken by the crusaders under Godfrey de Bouillon. Saladin reconquered it in 1187, and since that time, except from 1229 to 1239 and from 1243 to 1244, it has been held by the Mohammedans. Above is a picture of Jerusalem from a distance, and below is the famous Damascus Gate to the city.

"An IDYLL"

by Maurice Greiffenhagen

By LOUISE JAMES BARGELT.

"An Idyll," by Maurice Greiffenhagen. In the Walker Art gallery, Liverpool.

HALF real and half of fancy born is this lover's tryst in the autumn fields. There is virility here and passion, but it is tempered with the poetry of idealism and of sentiment. An autumn red prevades the picture. It has touched the flowers in the dark green grasses, it has given a ruddy glow to the firm flesh of the man, it has brightened the lips and hair of the girl, and lurks inconspicuously in the masses of foliage in the background. The only touch of white in the painting is the white of the girl's face and neck and arms.

The man is a shepherd lad and the girl a lassie of the peasant class. But since the Greeks first decorated their vases with pastoral scenes of love and lovers the romance of the woods and the open has been the inspirer of art and artists. Nor is the way of a man with a maid ever of such interest as when the sky is their canopy and the trees and the grasses their treasured drawing room.

Greiffenhagen is best known as an illustrator in black and white, although he has done some notable pieces in other lines. For this "Idyll" he was awarded a gold medal at Munich, while his "Judgment of Paris" which was highly commended both here and in London, now hangs in the gallery of New South Wales. He has also done some charming portraits of women. His portrait of "Mrs. G" was purchased by the Carnegie gallery a number of years after having been exhibited by the Royal Society of Portrait Painters at the Grafton galleries in London.

Although of German extraction Greiffenhagen is an Englishman by birth and instinct and was educated at University college. His paintings are decidedly British in spirit and technique.

This painting was reproduced at the special request of Mrs. H. L. M. of Springfield, Ill.

Another famous painting will be reproduced next Sunday.

"I'm glad, David," she whispered.

ROMANCE REGULAR LODGER No. 4

by Berton Braley

In Which the Star Boarder Finds Some More of the Romance He Had Not Suspected Was All Around Him.

"YOU'RE a writer, in search of romance, I suppose—or at least if you're a real writer you ought to be in search of it—and I've been roving the world most of my life on the same quest," Graham said.

"I've sought for it filibustering in South America; I sought for it in the Philippines fighting Gu-Gus; I've wandered all the seven seas Kipling writes about; I've touched at most of the ports around those seas, and I've gone inland to China and India and even Thibet. Sometimes I was just looking for adventure and sometimes I was making my daily bread, but always I was on the gaze for romance."

"And did you find it?" asked O'Neill.

"That," said Graham, "is the story."

He sat bemused and silent for awhile, moving his glass in little circles on the table.

"I hit the trail early and I loved it both for what I hoped it would lead to and for itself. And there wasn't much I didn't see or many jobs I didn't do. I've been plain bum and day laborer. I've been hobo and gay cat, deckhand and dock walloper, coal passer and oiler, book agent and miner.

"So by the time I was 25 I'd seen more of the world than Ulysses did in all his life—there's more of it to see—and being a fairly personable young fellow I'd philandered about a lot, too. So when I dropped off a freight one day into a little Iowa place called Cedarton I'd seen a heap of places and done a heap of things. So when I happened into this town and got a job driving team for a man who was building the water works, and began to take a look around at the girls in the place, I figured on having a little advantage over the local talent.

"One day I saw the girl. I just sat up on the seat of that wagon and stared and stared, forgetful of everything and everybody else, and I drove my team into the front window of one of the stores and it cost me ten dollars later on to have it replaced.

"I met her that night at a church sociable—I'd gone to it for that purpose—and I found her as sweet and as lovely as she looked. There was a little wistful tenderness in her eyes and her voice that enveloped me—a kind of emanation of maidenhood, womanhood, potential motherhood. She was the most feminine creature I have ever known—she drew me, body and heart and soul. And exactly as she had taken me by storm, I had taken her. The man who had brought her stood about and glowered—we both of us forgot he was there. We sat in a corner and talked—or I talked and she listened, her eyes wide, her lips parted, her breath coming and going irregularly with interest and excitement as I told her—like Othello—of my wanderings and my triumphs.

"And when it came time to go home I put her arm through mine, calmly brushed the other chap aside, and saw her home myself. At her door I took her in my arms and kissed her. She clung to me for a moment and I whispered 'I love you'; then she reached up and kissed me again and ran into the house. And I went back to my boarding house treading on clouds.

"Now it may seem queer to you, but that little girl had the heart of a gypsy in her soft breast. My stories of the long trail, of the great loving, toiling, fighting world were dreams and fairy tales come true to her—for always she had longed to wander, not in palace cars and first cabin on ships, but as I had, adventuring by whatever means availed. And since she knew that a woman alone might not make journeys of that kind, she had always pictured a dream mate with whom she might wander. And here was I—in answer to her dream.

"Her parents didn't like me; that was evident from the first. They were doubtful and suspicious of me—and, all things considered, I can't blame them. For I had been only a sort of a tramp and my life was full of things which wouldn't have made them less hostile. Only, they couldn't realize how my love for their daughter had wiped my heart clean of evil. But even love couldn't drive the wanderlust out, and when I found that Mary was as hungry for roving as I, I tried to get her to marry me and go away on the trail at once. But she wouldn't—she was an only child and she thought that to marry and run away thus would break her parents' hearts.

"'Just wait, just wait a little while, dear,' she would say, 'and they will see how fine you are, and they will love you as much as I do. And then we can go away together, happily.'

"But they didn't see how fine I was, though I waited for six months or more. They didn't want her to marry me, a wanderer and a wastrel; they wanted her to marry a nice, humdrum, steady young fellow in town there and settle down in a white cottage and live like everybody else. So finally, because I was getting impatient and Mary herself was almost persuaded to marry me and run away, her people proposed that I should go away for six months. They said, frankly, they thought I'd put sort of a glamour over Mary, and that if I left she'd come out from under my spell.

"'And you'll forget her when you get out in the world again,' the old man told me. 'If you don't—and come back—we'll know you're worthy of her and if she still wants you you can have her.'

"And because I was so sure of my love and Mary was so sure of mine and of hers, I listened to the old man and his wife and consented to go.

"Therefore I went to California, to a camp I knew where I thought I'd find work, and I got a job as shift boss in a mine. It was good pay and every day of it brought me that much nearer to Mary, for if I came back with a roll I knew her parents would be that much more impressed.

"I wrote every day, but the mails only went out twice a week. For about a month I got letters regularly from Mary, and then gradually they stopped. After two months I got none at all. Frantically I wrote and wrote, but there was no answer. I stood it for two months more, thinking there must be some mistake, even writing to her parents to inquire, and then I threw up my job and got ready to return to the little town. Just before I started the mail came and in it was an announcement of Mary's marriage to Henry Hurlburt, who was the man I'd supplanted at the church sociable.

"I went on a two weeks' spree and when I came to I was shanghaied on a ship bound around the Horn for London."

Graham picked up his glass and drained it at a gulp. O'Neill signaled the bartender to refill the glasses.

"And that was how you lost your romance?" he said. "Didn't you ever hear of her again?"

"Yes," said Graham. "Twenty-five years afterward—just five years ago—I thought I would drop off at that little town and see if she was there. I couldn't help it. I wanted to see if the reality of her could hold me as the memory had; to see how the years had dealt with her, what fate or fortune or destiny or whatever you call it had done with her life. I wore a beard and spectacles—and a slouch hat that I believed would disguise me.

"But as I walked up the main street of the little town, out of an auto standing against the curb came a little gasp, and a voice the memory of which had thrilled me for twenty-five years said, 'Dave.' Time had made her a little careworn and tired looking, but otherwise—she was Mary, every poise, every line, every move of her.

"Yes, it was the old story, but it had taken us twenty-five years to find it out. Her parents had intercepted the letters, mine and hers, but they had done it cunningly, so that apparently they ceased gradually. And at last they convinced her that I was only a plausible scoundrel and that I had forgotten her. Once they made her doubt me it was not very hard to persuade her to marry the other man.

"'So they condemned me to twenty-five lonely years and a bitter memory which wasn't true,' I said.

"'And me to a life with a man I didn't love—and don't love,' she said, 'though I've been a good wife to him. But you've been on the long trail, at least, and I—I'm still in Cedarton—and a gypsy only in my dreams. My boy and girl are grown—and both married, and now I'm an old woman who has lost her romance.'

"'Lost it!' I cried, 'lost it! Mary, you haven't lost it, we'll have it still. You've got the heart of youth and so have I. We've been cheated of twenty-five years, but we won't be cheated of the rest. Come with me—come with me on the trail at last. I can bring you the dreams of wandering you've always cherished. I can show you the roads and the ways you've always wanted to go. Why, we're not old, we're just boy and girl together—and the whole wide world is before us. Come."

Graham paused a moment and a wonderful smile spread over his features.

"Man! Man!" said he. "That was a woman for you. She got out of the automobile and put her arm in mine. 'All right, David,' she said. And we went away.

"Wrong? Maybe. Immoral? Perhaps—I don't know. I only know we'd been robbed for twenty-five years and we decided to take what was left of life for ourselves. Glory, man, but we gypsied it over the world. Sometimes first cabin and sometimes third, sometimes passengers and sometimes crew. We've slept under the stars and trudged over deserts together, and hardships and hunger and all we met like a couple of happy children. And what Cedarton may think or do about it we never knew or cared much. Henry had had twenty-five years of her—years that should have been mine—and I that had her at last refused to fret about Henry or Cedarton.

"A year ago, when we were on an island in the south seas, she died in my arms. Tropical fever took her away. But she whispered as she died, 'I'm glad, glad of these four years, David, for I have lived. The rest doesn't matter. I love you.'

"The rest doesn't matter, I love you," Graham repeated, "and that's a text for lovers everywhere."

He rose from his chair and they walked together back to the boarding house.

"I say," O'Neill demanded of the landlady, who came into the dining room to finish her dessert, which had been interrupted while she interviewed a possible new boarder, "where's the romance in a couple of old bores like Beacon and his wife—specially the wife? I'll admit I've found it in nearly all the others, but I can't see where anything could ever have happened to those two. Because, of course, that society dope of hers is all bunk."

The landlady smiled.

"Different people have different ideas of romance," she said. "To the Beacons this is romance."

"This?" O'Neill looked about in bewilderment. "This what?"

"This boarding house, this life they are leading. The society business is a bluff, all right, but it's part of the vision to them, part of the dream come true. And if you can make a dream come true—it doesn't matter much how commonplace the dream is—you've found your romance."

"I still don't get you," said O'Neill.

"This Beacon story is the shortest of them all," said Mrs. Harrison, "though it covers the most time. They've been married forty years, those two, and they've lived practically all of it, until now, in a Harlem flat. They were both born and brought up in the neighborhod; they saw it build up from goat covered rocks to great blocks of apartment buildings. He was a clerk of some kind downtown and never earned much money.

"Being a loyal wife, she never told hubby one great obsessing fact in her life—she hated housework. And yet she'd done it for forty years—hating it worse all the time. And he didn't tell her the great basic fact in his existence either—that he hated the subway and Harlem with a hate which grew daily and yearly.

"So Mrs. Beacon cherished a dream—a dream of living in a brown stone fronted boarding house, with no housework to do—and a chance to throw a bluff of once high estate in society with no one who'd known her all her life to call her. And Mr. Beacon cherished a dream—to live downtown and not to have to walk up four figihts of stairs when he got home. Also he cherished a desire—a secret desire—to eat some one else's cooking besides that of Mrs. Beacon for awhile.

"But they both kept their dreams hidden from each other, because to express them would be disloyalty to the best woman and the best man in the world. For these two humdrum folks loved each other, Mr. O'Neill, and do still—a heap—more than plenty of your more interesting and clever people would think possible to love anybody.

"They'd never been able to save much of anything. Mr. Beacon kept up his insurance, but the advance in the cost of living ruined every other plan he had of laying aside anything. So they both were pretty definitely resigned to living exactly as they had until they finished up the job, when a cousin died and left Beacon $10,000 invested in 5 per cent bonds.

"That $500 a year, with what the old man earned on his job, meant that they could move out of Harlem. And then, in their joy, they told each other their secret. And they cried and laughed together to find how beautifully his dream and hers would dovetail.

"That's about all. They sold their furniture and moved out of a Harlem flat and into the parlor floor down here. And the old man is near enough to work to walk it—and he doesn't have to climb stairs. Nor does he have to eat his wife's cooking, which was good enough—he explained to me—but he needed a change. While Mrs. Beacon can loaf in bed as late as she pleases, knowing that hubby can get his breakfast without any effort of hers.

"I like that story," said O'Neill, "it's so plumb plain human and natural. And I'm not going to try and call the old lady's bluff any more. I'll make her think I actually believe her."

"There's one other thing you can do for them," suggested the landlady, "though I suppose I shouldn't ask you to do it."

"What is it?"

"The old man has always thought he'd like, just once, to get full. But he's been afraid of the old lady. And the old lady has always thought that the old man was at heart a devil of a fellow, and that he was keeping straight through her influence. And she's sort of longed to have him come home, slightly—er—er—elaborated—just once. She told me she thought it would be interesting and—different. Couldn't you, perhaps——"

O'Neill grinned widely. "It oughtn't to take much," he said; "I'll see what I can do some time."

"And now," he challenged, "you've given me the brave adventure of Mrs. Musser, the unfinished story of Pink Necktie Nelson, and the fulfilled dream of Mr. and Mrs. Beacon. What's the glamorous tale of Barton, the egregious floor walker, and the purple romance of Miss Parks, pedagoguess to public school No. 40?"

The landlady threw up her hands. "Search me," she said slangily. "They're both 40 if they're a day, but I don't think anything has ever really happened to either of them. There's a chance for you to show what kind of a romance hunter you are, Mr. O'Neill. Find theirs; or make one."

"I'm trying to make one for myself, Mrs. Harrison," responded O'Neill, glancing at his watch, "and the task is quite sufficient without taking on any others. Will you excuse me now—I've got to get into my soup and fish for the opera."

by H.R.R.Hertzberg

One Overcomes a Handicap in Nickname.

THERE is in the otherwise badly neglected campo santo of the small Mexican town of Ayutla one well kept grave with a tall cross and a broad gravestone of white marble. The gravestone's Spanish inscription informs those who care to read it that "here lies Juan Salvador Cruz, entitled to the name of Juan y Medio because, measured by the just standard of truly noble manhood, loyalty, and courage, he was a giant indeed." Now, the peculiar part of the matter is that this same Juan Salvador Cruz was only a peon and only a dwarf.

Juan Salvador Cruz and Juan Trinidad Martinez—such were the real, baptismal names of the two Mexican house servants of the young American couple living on the more distant outskirts of Ayutla. But Juan Salvador Cruz and Juan Trinidad Martinez were commonly—almost exclusively—known as Medio Juan, which means Half-a-John, and Juan y Medio, which means John-and-a-half. And if ever nicknames had a valid claim to existence, these nicknames did not lack it. For Juan Salvador Cruz, Half-a-John, stood barely 5 feet 4 inches in the high heeled boots he wore to mass or to a fiesta, while Juan Trinidad Martinez, John-and-a-half, towered 6 feet 2 in his everyday, heelless sandals.

It must have been that Half-a-John's slender strain of Castilian blood came to him—through many generations of humble peons—from an ancestor who was one of the most knightly among the conquistadores, the companions of Cortez. Because Medio Juan undoubtedly, and quite unconsciously, owned some of the tastes and qualities of the caballero, the gentleman of fine pride and ideals. Owing to the presence of this element of chivalry in his nature he worshiped—with a reverence akin and second only to the homage which he gave Our Lady of Guadalupe, the patroness of his country and his soul—the graciously, spotlessly beautiful wife of his master, the American señora who unfailingly called him Juan instead of Medio Juan, thus bidding him understand that she considered him a man and not but a moiety of one. So great and sincere was this worship of his that Medio Juan, one might say, felt a prayer every time he thought of young Mrs. Waring—in which event he was much more prayerful than the most of mankind.

SO far Ayutla had not been molested by the soldier-bandits—Carranza's, Zapata's, and Villa's "patriots." Therefore Harry Waring did not fear to leave his wife at home, with only the two Juans by way of bodyguard, when he rode out to the farther one of his company's mines, quite early in the morning while the sun was still cool and good natured from its nightly bath in the sea.

Not long after Waring's departure with his train of miners John-and-a-half effected a disappearance. This was not strange in the least, for Juan y Medio and work or responsibility of any kind never stayed in one and the same place, unless the tall one was so closely watched that he absolutely could not manage to divorce himself from labor. Thus it happened that Half-a-John remained on the place as Grace Waring's sole protector, and was proudly pleased with the rôle and almost wished for the advent of trouble, serious trouble, that he might prove his worthiness in time of need.

The almost wish was wholly granted.

From the veranda of the Warings' dwelling, where he was lingeringly polishing Mrs. Waring's little walking boots, Medio Juan saw a number of horsemen advancing along the narrow road which led to the house. Though they were still the bigger part of a mile away, Half-a-John's keen eyes perceived that the troop's leader wore a uniform of a sort and that he was being guided by Juan y Medio.

Carranzistas perhaps, Villistas perhaps, Zapatistas perhaps—who could say? Robbers, murderers—and worse, unquestionably! They were all that, all of them!

Half-a-John acted—at once, with exceedingly un-Mexican dispatch. In a few brief words he warned the señora. Then he ran out into the stable yard and there set the great haystack afire. Returning to the house, he barricaded all the doors and all the windows save only one small round opening half way up the stairs to the attic. And it was at this loophole that he stationed himself, when—with the manner of a commanding general who is also a gentleman—he had respectfully ordered Mrs. Waring into the attic and she had obeyed.

By his side were a loaded rifle and three loaded pistols, five-shooters—all the weapons and ammunition in the place, as it happened. He was horribly afraid, was Medio Juan. Horribly afraid—and gloriously determined to fight to the last, the very ultimate last. Fortunately, he thought, he was not a bad shot, for a Mexican.

CALL it a miracle if you will; he kept those thirty-odd bandits at a distance nearly three hours—shooting his straightest, and then shaking with fear, and then again calling out—yes, with a voice he contrived to make cheerfully confident, bravely hopeful—reassuring messages to the señora in the attic. Had he succeeded in killing the officer, as he did kill the traitor John-and-a-half and three or four of the bandits, he might have caused the enemy to flee in a panic. But he failed to disable the uniformed one, and finally this infuriated leader cursed his men into daring a charge. And none of Half-a-John's firearms contained another load. The little peon grasped the empty rifle by the barrel and, forsaking his position at the loophole, went down the stairs and faced the door which the assailants were battering down. His lips moved silently in swift Our Fathers and Hail Mary's—which he said, everyone of them, not for himself but for the señora, as a matter of course.

The door was down. In rushed the bandits. Half-a-John fell under the steeled bite of a machete and the leaden blow of a bullet.

Nevertheless, the patriots did not prevail sufficiently to do their worst. Half-a-John's haystack signal fire had successfully performed its duty. The smoke that rose like a pillar in the calm, dry air was seen by Waring and his dozen armed miners on their way to the mine. Wherefore they, rode—their fastest—back to the house, which they reached just in time to rout the istas and save the woman.

BUT there was no saving the life of Half-a-John Ayutla's one and foremost doctor did his best. This, however, was a case for the priest. Padre Ignacio came from the town, and Medio Juan received the sacraments and was peacefully ready to die.

As he lay on his death bed the señona addressed him.

"Juan y Medio," said she.

Wonderingly, the dying man protested:

"Ah, señora! It is Medio Juan that you mean!"

"No, it is not," she declared. "I mean exactly what I say, when I call you Juan y Medio. Because it is surely yourself who are indeed a Juan y Medio, a very big man." And she told him that which was, a few days later, inscribed on his gravestone.

According to the one and foremost doctor of Ayutla, the dying man's face was "as proudly happy as that of a bridegroom marrying an heiress endowed with beauty and a sweet disposition no less than with millions of pesos."

The Genial Envoy to the Court of Love Scores a Diplomatic Triumph.

MISS BESSIE VAUX of Baltimore paid a visit to her aunt, the wife of the commandant at old Fort Starbuck, Mont. She had at her small feet all the garrison and some two dozen young ranch owners, the flower of the younger sons of the best society of New York, Boston, and Philadelphia. Thirty-seven notches in the long handle of her parasol told the story of her three months' stay. The thirty-seventh was final. She accepted a measly second lieutenant, and left all the bachelors for thirty miles around the fort to mourn her and to curse the United States army. This is the proem.

. . . . . .

Mr. John Winfield, proprietor of the Winfield ranch, set a-straddle a chair in front of the fire in his big living room and tugged at his handsome black beard as he discussed the situation with his foreman, who was also his confidant, his best friend, and his old college mate. Mr. Richard Cutter stood with his back to the fire, twirled a very blonde mustache, and smoked cigarets continually while he ministered to his suffering friend, who was sore wounded in his vanity, having been notch No. 36 on Miss Vaux's parasol. Dick had been notch No. 1; but Dick was used to that sort of thing.

"Dick had been notch No. 1; but Dick was used to that sort of thing."

HERBERT PASTON STOOPS

"By thunder," said Mr. Winfield, "I'm going to get married this year if I have to marry a widow with six children. And I guess I'll have to. I've been ten years in this girliess wilderness and I never did know any girls to speak of at home. Now you, you always everlastingly knew girls. What's that place you lived at in New York state—where there were so many girls?"

"Tusculum," replied Mr. Cutter, in a tone of complacent reminiscence. "Nice old town, plastered so thick with mortgages that you can't grow flowers in the front yard. All the fellows strike for New York as soon as they begin to shave. The crop of girls remains, and they wither on the stem. Why, one winter they had a humpbacked man for their sole society star in the male line. Nice girls, too. Old families. Pretty, lots of them. Good form, too, for provincials."

"Gad!" said Jack Winfield, "I'd like to live in Tusculum for a year or so."

"No, you wouldn't. It's powerful dull. But the girls were nice. Now, there were the nine cent-girls."

"The nine-cent girls?"

"No, the nine cent-girls. Catch the difference? They were the daughters of old Bailey, the civil engineer. Nine of 'em, ranging from 22, when I was there—that's ten years ago—down to—O I don't know—a kid in a pinafore. All looked just alike, barring age, and every one had the face of the Indian lady on the little red cent. Do you remember the Indian lady on the little red cent?"

"Hold on," suggested Jack, rising; "I've got one; I've had it ever since I came." He unlocked his desk, rummaged about in its depths, and produced a specimen of the neatest and most artistic coin that the United States government has ever struck.

"That's it!" said Dick, holding the coppery disk in his palm. "It would do for a picture of any one of 'em—only the Bailey girls didn't wear feathers in their hair. But there they were, nine of 'em, nice girls, every way, and the whole lot named out of the classics. Old Bailey was strong on the classics. His great-grandfather named Tusculum, and Bailey's own name was Mr. Cicero Bailey. So he called all his girls by heathen names and had a row with the parson every christening. Let me see—there was Euphrosyne, and Clelia, and Lydia, and Flor, and Aurora—those were the twins—I was sweet on one of the twins—and Una—and—O, I can't remember them all. But they were mighty nice girls."

"Probably all married by this time," Jack groaned. "Let me look at that cent." He held it in the light of the fire and gazed thoughtfully upon it.

"Not a one," Dick assured him.

"And how old did you say they were? How old was the youngest?"

"O, I don't know," replied Dick, with a bachelor's vagueness on the question of a child's age, "five—six—seven, may be. Ten years ago, you know."

. . . . . .

Two months after the evening on which this conversation took place Mr. Richard Cutter walked up one of the quietest and most eminently respectable of the streets of Tusculum.

Mr. Cutter was nervous. He was, for the second time, making up his mind to attempt a difficult and delicate task. He had made up his mind to it, or had it made up for him; but now he felt himself obliged to go over the whole process in his memory in order to assure himself that the mind was really made up.

The suggestion had come from Winfield. He remembered with what a dazed incomprehension he had heard his chum's proposition to induce Mr. Bailey and all his family to migrate to Montana and settle at Starbuck.

With a clearer remembrance of eastern conventionalities than Mr. Winfield, Dick Cutter had suggested various obstacles in the way of this apparently simple scheme. But Winfield would hear of no opposition, and he joined with him eight other young ranchmen, who entered into the idea with wild western enthusiasm and an Arcadian simplicity that could see no chance of failure. These energetic youths subscribed a generous fund to defray the expenses of Mr. Cutter as a missionary to Tusculum, and Mr. Cutter had found himself committed to the venture before he knew it.

Now, what seemed quite feasible in Starbuck's wilds wore a different face in prim and proper Tusculum. It dawned on Mr. Cutter that he was about to make a most radical and somewhat impudent proposition to a conservative old gentleman. The atmosphere of Tusculum weighed heavy on his spirits, which were light and careless enough in his adopted home in Montana.

Therefore Mr. Cutter found his voice very uncertain as he introduced himself to the young lady who opened, at his ring, the front door of one of the most respectable houses in that respectable street of Tusculum.

"Good morning," he said, wondering which one of the nine cent-girls he saw before him; and then, noting a few threads of gray in her hair, he ventured:

"It's Miss—Miss Euphrosyne, isn't it? You don't remember me—Mr. Cutter—Dick Cutter! Used to live on Ovid street. Can I see your father?"

"My father!" repeated Miss Euphrosyne, looking a little frightened.

"Yes—I just want——"

"Why, Mr. Cutter—I do remember you now—didn't you know that papa died nine years ago—the year after you left Tusculum?"

Dick Cutter leaned against the door-jamb and stared speechlessly at Euphrosyne. He noted vaguely that she looked much the same as when he had seen her last, except that she looked tired and a shade sad. When he was able to think he said that he begged her pardon. Then she smiled, faintly.

"We couldn't expect you to know," she said simply. "Won't you come in?"

"N—N—No——" stuttered Dick. "I—I—I'll call later—this evening, if you don't mind. Ah—ah—good day." And he fled to his hotel to pull himself together, leaving Miss Euphrosyne smiling.

He sat alone in his room all the afternoon, pondering over the shipwreck of his scheme. What should he tell the boys? What would the boys say? Why had he not thought to write before he came? Why on earth had Bailey taken it into his head to die?

After supper he resolved to call as he had promised. Mrs. Bailey, he knew, had died a year after the appearance of her ninth daughter. But, he thought, with reviving hope, there might be a male head to the family—an uncle, perhaps.

The door was opened by Clytie, the youngest of the nine. She ushered him at once into a bright little parlor, hung around with dainty things in artistic needlework and decorative painting. A big lamp glowed on a center table, and around it sat seven of the sisters, each one engaged in some sort of work, sewing, embroidering or designing. Nearest the lamp sat Euphrosyne reading Macaulay aloud. She stopped as he entered and welcomed him in a half timid but wholly friendly fashion.

Dick sat down, very much embarrassed, in spite of the greeting. It was many years since he had talked with nine ladies at once. And, in truth, a much less embarrassed man might have found himself more or less troubled to carry on a conversation with nine young women who looked exactly like each other, except for the delicate distinctions in age which a masculine stranger might well be afraid to note. Dick looked from one to the other of the placid classic faces, and could not help having an uneasy idea that each new girl that he addressed was only the last one who had slipped around the table and made herself look a year or two older or younger.

But after a while the pleasant, genial, social atmosphere of the room, sweet with a delicate, winning virginity, thawed out his awkward reserve and Dick began to talk of the west and western life until the nine pairs of blue eyes, stretched to their widest, fixed upon him as a common focus. It was 11 when he left, with many apologies for his long call. He found the night and the street uncommonly dark, empty and depressing.

"Just the outfit!" he observed to himself. "And old Bailey dead and the whole scheme busted."

For he had learned that the nine cent-girls had not a relative in the world. Under these circumstances it was clearly his duty to take the morning train for the west. And yet, the next evening he presented himself, shamefaced and apologetic, at the Bailey door.

He thought that he wanted to make some sort of explanation to Miss Euphrosyne. But what explanation could he make? There was no earthly reason for his appearance in Tusculum. He talked of the west until 11 o'clock, and then he took a hesitating leave.

The next day he made a weak pretense of casually passing by when he knew that Miss Euphrosyne was working in the garden, but he found it no easier to explain across the front fence. The explanation never would have been made if it had not been for Miss Euphrosyne. A curious nervousness had come over her, too, and suddenly she spoke out.

"Mr. Cutter—excuse me—but what has brought you here? I mean, is it anything that concerns us—or—or—papa's affairs? I thought everything settled—I had hoped——"

There was nothing for it now but to tell the whole story, and Dick told it.

"I suppose you'll think we're a pack of barbarians," he said when he had come to an end, "and, of course, it's all impracticable now."

But Miss Euphrosyne did not seem to be offended—only thoughtful.

"Can you call here tomorrow at this time, Mr. Cutter?" she inquired.

. . . . . .

Miss Euphrosyne blushed faintly when Dick presented himself to hear judgment pronounced.

"I suppose you will think it strange," she said, "but if your plan is feasible, I should wish to carry it out. Frankly, I do want to see the girls married. Clelia and Lydia and I are past the time when women think about such things—but Clytie—and the rest. And you know, I remember how papa and mamma lived together, and sometimes it seems cruelly hard that those dear girls should lose all that happiness—I'm sure it's the best happiness in the world. And it can never be, here. Now it

Her voice was choked when she recommenced.

"It seems awful for me to talk to you in this cold blooded way about such a thing; but what can we do, Mr. Cutter? You don't know how poor we are. There's nothing for little Clytie to do but to be a dressmaker—and you know what that means in Tusculum. Do you think I could teach school out in Star-Starbuck?"

Miss Euphrosyne was crying.

Dick's census of possible pupils in the neighborhood of Starbuck satisfied Miss Euphrosyne. It troubled Dick's conscience a bit as he walked back to the hotel. "But they'll be married off before she finds out, so I guess it's all right," he reflected.

. . . . . .

The next week Dick went to New York. It was in pursuance of an idea which he had confided to Winfield on the eve of his departure.

"Why," Winfield had said to him, "you haven't left out of this deal, aren't you?"

"Of course I am," said Dick. "How am I going to marry a poor girl on $100 a month?"

"I might set you up for yourself——" began the employer.

"Hold on!" broke in Dick Cutter, with emphasis. "You wouldn't talk that way if you'd ever been hungry yourself. I 'most wished that last time I tried for myself, and there'll be more next trip, sure. You've been a good friend to me, Jack Winfield. Don't you make a fool of yourself and spoil it all."

"No," he added, after a pause, "I have a little racket of my own. There's a widow down in New York who smiled on yours affectionately once, ere she wed Mammon. I'm going to see if she feels inclined to divide the late lamented's pile with a blonde husband."

So, the business at Tusculum being determined, and preparations for the hegira well under way, Dick went to look after his own speculation.

He reached New York on Tuesday morning and called on the lady of his hopes that afternoon. She was out. He wrote her in the evening, asking when he might see her. On Thursday her wedding cards came to his hotel by special messenger. He cursed his luck and went cheerfully about attending to a commission which Miss Euphrosyne, after much urging, had given, trembling at her own audacity. The size of it had somewhat staggered him. She asked him to take an order to a certain large dry goods house for nine traveling ulsters (ladies, medium weight, measurements inclosed), for which he was to select the material.

"Men have so much taste," said Miss Euphrosyne. "Papa always knew when we were well dressed."

Dick had to wait while another customer was served. He stared at her in humble admiration. It was a British actress, recently imported.

. . . . . .

When Mr. Richard Cutter sat on the platform of Tusculum station and saw his nine charges approach, ready for the long trip to the far west, it struck him that the pinky-dun ulsters with the six inch square checks of pale red and blue did not look, on these nine virgins, as they looked on the British actress. He had his misgivings; but he handed them gallantly into the train—it was not a vestibule express, for economy forbade—and they began their journey.

He had an uneasy feeling that they were noticed, that the nine ladies in the ulsters of one pattern—and of the pattern of his choosing—were attracting more attention than any women not thus uniformed would have attracted; but he was not seriously disturbed until a loquacious countryman sat down beside him.

"Runnin' a lady baseball nine, be ye?" he inquired. "I seen one, wanst, in Ne' York. They can't play ball not to speak of; but it's kinder fun lookin' at 'em. Couldn't ye interdooce me to the pitcher?"

Mr. Cutter made a dignified reply and withdrew to the smoking car. There a fat and affable stranger tapped him on the back and talked in his ear from the seat behind.

"It don't pay, young man," he said; "I've handled 'em. Female minstrels sounds first rate, but they don't give the show that catches the people. You've gotter have reel talent kinder mixed in with them if you want to draw."

. . . . . .

They had arrived at Buffalo. They had gone to one hotel and had been told there were no rooms for them; and to another where there were no rooms, and to another, where every room was occupied. Finally they had found quarters in a queer hotel, where the clerk, as he dealt out the keys, said:

"One for Lily, and one for Daisy, and one for Rosie—here, boss, sort out the flower bed yourself," as he handed over the bunch.

Dick was taking a drink in the dingy barroom and trying to forget the queer looks that had been cast at his innocent caravan all the day, when the solitary hallboy brought a message summoning him to Miss Euphrosyne's room. He went, with his moral tail between his mental legs.

"Mr. Cutter," said Miss Euphrosyne, firmly, "we have made a mistake."

"It looks that way," replied Dick, feebly, "but may be it's only—the ulsters."

"No," said Miss Euphrosyne. "The ulsters are a part of it, but the whole thing is wrong, Mr. Cutter, and I see it all now. I didn't realize what it meant, but my eyes are opened. Nine young unmarried women cannot go west with a young man—if you had heard what people are saying all around us in the cars—you don't know. We've got to give up the idea.—O, but it was awful!"

Miss Euphrosyne, trembling, hid her face in her hands. Her tears trickled out through her thin fingers.

"And the old house is sold! What shall we do? Where shall we go?" she cried, forgetting Dick utterly, lost and helpless.

Dick was stalking up and down the room.

"It would be all right," she demanded, "if there was a married woman to lead the gang, and if—if—if we caught on to something new in the ulster line."

"It might be different," Miss Euphrosyne admitted, with a sob. Speaking came hard to her. She was tired; well night worn out.

"Then," said Dick, with tremulous emphasis, "what's the matter with my marrying one of you?"

"Why, Mr. Cutter!" Miss Euphrosyne cried, "I had no idea that you—you ever thought of it—is it Clytie?"

"No," said Mr. Cutter, "it isn't Clytie."

"Is it—is it——" Miss Euphrosyne's eyes lit up with hope long since extinguished, "is it Aurora?"

"No!"

Dick Cutter could have been heard three rooms off.

"No!" he said, with all his lungs. "It ain't Clytie, nor it ain't Aurora, nor it ain't Flora, nor Melpomane, nor Cybele, nor Alveolar Aureole, nor none of 'em. It's you—y-o-u! I want to marry you, and what's more, I'm going to!"

"O! O! O! O!" said poor Miss Euphrosyne, and hid her face in her hands. She had never thought to be happy, and now she was happy for one moment. That seemed quite enough for her modest soul. And yet more was to come.

For once in his life Dick Cutter seized the right moment to do the right thing. One hour later Miss Euphrosyne Bailey was Mrs. Richard Cutter. She did not know quite how it happened. Clytie told her she had been bullied into it. But, O! such sweet bullying!

. . . . . .

"No," said Mr. Richard Cutter one morning in September of the next year, to Mr. Jack Winfield and his wife (Miss Aurora Bailey that was), "I can't stop a minute. We're too busy up at the ranch. The wife has just bought out Wilkinson, and I've got to round up all his stock. I'll see you next month, at Clytie's wedding. Queer, she should have gone off the last, ain't it? Euphrosyne and I are going down to Butte City Monday to buy her a present. Know anybody who wants to pay 6 per cent for a thousand?"

CAPTIVATING MARY CARSTAIRS

SYNOPSIS.

Elbert Carstairs, estranged from his wife and longing for the sight of his daughter, Mary, engages Larry Varney and Peter Maginnis to take the Carstairs yacht, the Cypriani, to Hunston-on-the-Hudson, there to kidnap Mary. On arrival in Hunston, Varney and Maginnis as a blind enlist with the reform element to throw out the political grafters who are running the town. By accident, Varney learns that Mary Carstairs is not a 12 year old girl, but a beautiful young woman. Varney's close resemblance to Ferris Stanhope, an author of pink tea literature, who has got himself into bad grace in Hunston through affairs with girls, makes Varney's presence in the town hazardous. The political gang, working under the direction of Boss Ryan and through Coligny Smith, editor of the Hunston Gazette, use the lever of Varney's resemblance to Stanhope to balk Varney's help in the reform movement. A scurrilous article about Stanhope and a picture finish Varney in the eyes of the townspeople, and cause Mary to break an engagement she had to have tea with Varney on the yacht. Hammerton, a local reporter who is correspondent for the New York Press, by a ruse learns that Varney's real mission to Hunston is to kidnap Mary. He tries to escape with the news from the yacht to add to the already too wide publicity given to Varney's presence in Hunston, but is kept prisoner on the yacht. Maginnis buys out the Gazette and thus steals a march on Ryan, who retaliates by getting Jim Hackley drunk in order to beat up Varney and Maginnis.

Escape and Capture.

"WELL?" he called impatiently.

"You, Larry?" asked a familiar voice.

"Yes. What's the matter?"

"Matter enough," said Peter in a guarded undertone. "Hammerton's loose."

"What!"

"It's a fact. God knows how he did it; but he's just phoned in here from a house a long way down the road. Wanted to let the city editor know he was flying in with the one best bet of the year. Luckily he gave no details."

Varney's lips tightened; he spoke in a low voice. "He mustn't arrive—not till I've seen him first. Did you find out how he's coming—river or road?"

"Trust Uncle Dudley. He's borrowed a bicycle and is burning up the river road with it."

"Good. How soon will you be through?"

"About three minutes."

"You've hired a motor, you said? Get it and run back here as soon as you can, will you?"

He rapidly explained the situation, though making no mention of Higginson: how somebody had plotted to get them together in the darkness of Main street, how Miss Carstairs and her friend had kindly stopped to warn them, and how he had humored her by promising to take all sorts of precautions.

"Right-O," said Peter. "I'll be in the alley at the back in no time. Come quick when I honk three times."

Varney came back into the little office where Mary Carstairs waited, fresh from more cheap plotting in which she was the innocent central figure, and faced her, uncomfortable, ill at ease, disquieted inwardly as a conspirator taken redhanded.

"It was Maginnis—upstairs," he explained awkwardly.

"Yes?" she said indifferently, and resumed the buttoning of her glove. "And will you tell me something now? It has been on my mind since last night."

"Certainly."

"Who was it that spoke of me to you and made you think that I was a little girl?"

He was entirely taken aback by the question; but he could have parried it easily, and he knew it. However, he was heartily sick of subterfuge for that night.

"It was your father," he said bluntly.

"My father!" She stood silent a moment, slim hands interlocked before her, heavily fringed eyes lowered. "So you know them both—my mother and my father. Then—the mistake—about my age," she added with something of an effort, "was natural enough. I have not seen my father for many years."

"I see him," said he, "constantly. Your father and I are great chums." A sudden insane hope overwhelmed him, and he went on with a rush: "You know, or rather probably you don't know, that he and my mother were old friends; and I am proud to have fallen heir to the friendship. You say that you have not seen him for some time? He is growing older very fast this last year or two; he is much changed of late. And then, Miss Carstairs, he is desperately lonely, all by himself in that great house of his—"

"Stop!" cried Mary Carstairs, with quick passionateness. "Stop! You are trying to make me feel sorry for my father."

"Well," he said, as stormy as she, "you ought to. But your friends are waiting. I must not detain you any longer."

At the curtness of his speech a very faint wave of color ran up her cheek; and when he saw this he was sorry and glad in a single breath. At least, she could not say afterward that he had ever tried to make himself falsely civil and lyingly agreeable.

"Yes, I have stayed very much too long already. You've promised that you will be careful, haven't you? I'm really too sorry," she said, from the door, "that your visit to Hunston should have been made disagreeable in all these ways."

"In the name of heaven," he said, stung into momentary recklessness, "you don't suppose that I came here expecting any fun!"

"Why—I had understood that it was purely a pleasure trip that brought you here!"

He made no answer to this, but stepped forward and swung open the door for her.

"Maginnis," he said, "is to call for me immediately in a motor. We shall leave by the unobtrusive back alley. Two men, a motor, and a dark rear exit. You will scarcely imagine that there is any danger now. But may I thank you again for giving us warning when there was, perhaps, some danger?"

"So you think there is a 'perhaps'? If you take precautions, it is only to humor a—"

"I withdraw that 'perhaps,'" he broke out in a rush. "I blot it out, annihilate it. Who am I to catch at tatters of self-respect? Are you blind? Can't you see that every fiber of me is tingling with the knowledge that there was real danger, and that you saved me from it?"

The quick bitterness in his voice, which there was no missing, was the last straw, breaking through her reserve, demolishing her dainty aloofness. She shook the swinging gray veil back out of her eyes and looked up at him, openly and frankly bewildered, looking very young and immeasurably alluring.

"Will you tell me why you speak in that way? Will you tell me why it is the worst thing that has happened to you in Hunston to have been helped a little by me?"

They faced each other at the open door, not an arm's length between them, and the moment of his reckoning for the quarter of an hour he had spent with her that night was suddenly upon him. He met her eyes, which were darkly blue, stared down into them, and as he did so the spell of her beauty treacherously closed around him, piping away his self-control, deadening him to the iron fact of who she was and who he was, shutting out all knowledge except that of her fragrant nearness.

"It is absurd," he answered her suddenly, "but to save my life I can't decide whether you are tall or short."

The front door came open with a bang; the noise brought him sharply to himself; and the next moment a pleasant, impatient masculine voice called out:

"I say, Miss Carstairs! Er—everything all right?"

"O!—yes, Mr. Richards!" she called penitently. "I'm coming this minute. No, please don't go out with me, Mr. Varney. Don't let anybody see that you are here."

"Certainly not," said he, struggling for a poise which he could not quite recapture. "Then will you be good enough to convey my gratitude to Mr. Higginson and say that I hope to have the opportunity of thanking him personally tomorrow?"

"Yes, of course. Good night once more—and good luck!"

But he detained her long enough to put the plain business question which had been torturing his soul for the last twenty-four hours.

"We shall see you at luncheon tomorrow?"

He strove to give his remark the air of a mere commonplace of farewell; but at it, he saw her look break away from his and the warm color stream into her face.

"Why—I—I'll come with pleasure. We don't get the chance to lunch on yachts every day in Hunston. O, but please," she exclaimed, her embarrassment suddenly melting in a very natural and charming smile—"never let my mother dream that we've not been introduced!"

He bowed low so that she might not see the burlesque of polite pleasure on his face.

The back alley exit proved all that the most timorous could have desired. Peter approached it by an elusive detour; Varney appeared promptly at the sound of his three honks; and the rendezvous was effected in a black darkness which they seemed to have entirely to themselves. Not a hand was raised to them, not a threatening figure sprang up to dispute their going, not a fierce curse cursed them. The would-be assassins, if such there were, presumably still lurked in some Main street cranny, patiently and stupidly waiting, entirely unaware that they had been neatly outwitted by the clever strategics of Miss Mary Cairstairs.

The car roiled noiselessly out of the alley, skimmed off through the southern quarter of the town and bowled into the rough and rutty River road toward the yacht. Once there, since a sharp lookout for the reporter was necessary, they slowed down and down until the smooth little car, with all lights out, crawled along no faster than a vigorous man will walk.

"What're you going to do when we catch him?" asked Peter. "Want to haul him on back to the yacht?"

"No. I'm—only going to talk to him a little. Go on with the story."

"Well," resumed Peter, taking one hand from the driving wheel to remove a genuine Connecticut Havana, "the first thing was a wire from the Daily firing Hammerton. That assisted a little, of course. Then they asked us to give them a new, good man at once, and meantime to push along all the story we had. We answered with a wire that was a beauty, if I do mention it myself, telling them exactly how they'd been sold a second hand gold brick by a corrupt paper which was trying to play politics. It simply knocked the pins from under them. It took 'em quite a while to come back with inquiries about the name of the yacht, Varney's air of mystery, and all that line of slush. My response was vigorous, yet gentlemanly, straining the truth for all she'd stand, and even bu'sting her open here and there, I gravely fear. However, it was a clincher. It crimped them right. Not a peep have we had from 'em since."

"I suppose they'll run four lines on the thirteenth page tomorrow explaining it was all a mistake."

"But that wasn't the serious part of the thing—not by a mile walk," continued Peter, the shine of victory in his honest eyes. "Am I still in the road? Sing out if you see me taking to the woods, will you? The more I think of what you and I have missed by a shave, the more I'm likely to feel sick in the stomach. You know those rascals had already begun asking for orders all over the country—they were so sure they'd have a hot story to send out. Not only that, but a lot of papers wired for it without being asked. It looked as if every newspaper office in America that had got a glimpse at the Daily this morning instantly got dead stuck on that story. I stood at the telegraph desk and watched the accursed things come in, like this: '500 words story involving Stanhope, Rochester Tribune.' 'No. 3.—' That was the number of our story on the query list.—'No. 3.—Full details, Chicago Ledger.' 'No. 3—1,000 words, Philadelphia Journal.' And so on and on. It looked uncanny, I tell you—all those far away people calling for information about our affairs just like old friends. Will you kindly let your mind play about that a minute, Laurence? Will you kindly think of a situation like that with Ryan and Coligny Smith handling it as their little whimseys dictated?"

"I'd rather not. You wired those papers that the story was a canard and all that, I suppose?"

"No!" roared Peter, "I did something a whole lot better than that. I had one of the men write a hot political story about the Gazette and the change of management and the sudden rise of reform. There's news in that, don't you see?—and it was the Stanhope-Varney story, too—the real one. When I left the office they were selling it like hot cakes all over the country—all over the world—"

"Hold on!" said Varney, sharply. "Here's Hammerton, I think—bringing in a whole lot better story than yours!"

The road here was straight as a string stretched tight. Far down it, they saw a single small light, dancing toward them a foot or two above the ground.

Peter threw off his clutch, clapped on his brakes and stopped short. Varney slid out of the seat and stood waiting in the black inkiness beside the unlighted car. In the sudden stillness they could hear the rattle of the bicycle chain and even the crunch of the hard blown tires, spinning rapidly over the road. Now the light was perhaps a hundred yards away.

"Blow!" whispered Varney.

The horn's honk cut the silent air hoarsely. Instantly the speed of the oncoming light was checked. It advanced steadily, but much more slowly, as though the rider sensed that his road might be blocked, but could not yet determine where the hidden obstacle might be.

"Hello!" called a lusty young voice suddenly. "Who's there?"

There was no answer. The light came on more slowly still. Now it was fifty yards away, now twenty, now ten. Varney stepped out of the blackness, directly in front of it, and seized both handle bars in fingers that gripped like a vise. The shock of the sudden stopping all but cost the rider his seat.

"May I detain you one moment, please, Mr Hammerton?"

The little light of the bicycle lamp was all concentrated downward. Above that round yellow ray faces were unrecognizable in the pitchy blackness. The voice, however, was unmistakable. Hammerton was off the back of his wheel in the wink of an eye, on a sudden desperate bolt for the woods.

Peter, still on the driver's seat, and seeing neither his friend nor his enemy, saw the light with the bicycle behind it go over with a crash. That was when Varney's hands let go of the handle bars. The next instant they fell upon Hammerton's withdrawing figure and brought it up with a sharp jerk.

Peter heard the ensuing struggle, but saw nothing. He paid Varney the tribute of sitting still in his seat and saying not a word. The contest was bitter, but brief. Hammerton fought wildly, but Varney's arms presently closed round him, squeezing the life out of him. Locked fast in each other's arms, they fell heavily, Hammerton underneath. Varney freed his legs with a swift wrench, swung round, and came up riding upon the other's chest.

Charlie Hammerton was beaten and knew it. His body lay along the rocky road, inert and unresisting. He breathed in convulsive gasps, but apart from that, now that he was down, he never moved. He was as tired as a man well could be. Varney sitting closely upon him, holding him fast, felt that the reporter's clothes were wringing wet. However, he had him, and the Cypriani's great secret was once more in captivity.

The eyes of the two men, strained into the dark where each other's faces must be, but they saw nothing.

"It's all up with you, Hammerton," said Varney presently. "The Daily fired you an hour ago."

"Thanks to you," said Hammerton doggedly. "But if you think that lets you out you're a bigger fool than I thought."

"That is not all," said Varney slowly. "The Gazette has fired you, too."

The reporter swore bitterly beneath his breath; curiously enough, he did not seem to question the statement for a moment. "What of it?" he cried. "You don't think that'll stop my mouth, do you—you devil!"

"There is still something more. Maginnis has bought the Gazette. He and I own the news of this town now. Coligny Smith is fired, too. The Gazette starts an honest life tomorrow, and the old dirty régime is over forever."

"Liar!" cried Hammerton, hoarsely. "Liar!" but there was no conviction in the mad resentment of his voice.

"No," said Varney, without anger. "I am telling you the truth and you know it."

"Well—there are other papers—other towns," cried Hammerton passionately. "What I've got on you will sell anywhere. Why, damn you, damn you, damn you—don't you know you'll have to kill me to hush this up?"

"No," said Varney, "I'm going to do better than that. I'm going to make a friend of you. I'm going to make you editor of the Gazette in Smith's place with double your present salary and an interest in the paper."

There was black silence, more thrilling than any speech.

"Will you take it?" asked Varney.

Then the boy's overstrained self-command snapped like a bow string and his breast shook with sudden hysteria. "Will I take it?" he cried with a gasping laugh that was rather more like a sob. "Will I take the court of St. James? Will I take money from home? O, my God, will I take it!"

by Henry Sydnor Harrison

"Horray!" rang Peter's great voice out of the gloom. "Hip, hip, hooray for Editor Hammerton!"

Peter's tribute, in reality, was not so much for Hammerton's acceptance as for the astonishing neatness with which Varney had disposed of the editorship of his paper. But to Varney, rising limply from Hammerton's chest at the edge of the dark road ,that cheer meant only that he had kicked the last obstacle out of his path and that he and Mary were going to New York tomorrow.

. . . . . .

The expectation appeared thoroughly conservative; not a cloud so large as a man's hand any longer darkened the horizon. At 2 o'clock next day Mr. Carstairs' Cypriani rode gayly at her old anchorage. At the rail stood Varney and Maginnis, hosts of pleasant and guileless mien, their eyes upon the trim gig which came dancing over the water toward them. In the gig sat J. Pinkney Hare and his sister, Mrs. Marne, blithely coming to lunch aboard with their two new friends.

The yacht's return to Hunston had been most benumbing abashment.

The two good friends parted with a handshake, enforced by the young man—a unique ceremonial which filled the small breast of Thomas with a conflict of strange emotions; and Varney, having dispatched a telegram to Mr. O'Hara and another to Mrs. Marie Duval, who had the home with no boys in it on One Hundred and Seventeenth street, had at once turned his face back to the yacht. He chose the woodland path for his walk, which struck straight down from the handsome residence street and skirted the river at a point near the Cypriani's anchorage; and here an incident of interest befell him. As he sauntered down the path, conscious of a sudden curious loss of spirits, his attention was caught by the blurred sound of voices from the street, some fifty yards behind him, and presently the vague rumble crystallized into something like this:

". . . Infernal absence of livery. . . . Far . . . station master fellow say it was, Henry?"

The voice was masculine, carefully modulated, decidedly elegant. A different sort of voice gave answer:

The contest was bitter but brief.

"'E said, sir . . . mile, but knowing the hodd way they count distances away from the cities, sir, I'm 'ardly 'oping to see it under two mile—hif that."

Varney idly turned. The woods were thick just ahead of him, cutting off all view of the street; but farther on, to the north, there was a break in the leafy wall, revealing a small slit of patent cement sidewalk. Soon, as he watched, two pedestrians stepped into view within this frame of foliage—a tall, immaculate looking man swinging a trim cane, and behind him a stocky, middle sized, black garbed fellow struggling along under two suitcases and a roll of umbrellas. In three steps they had passed across the little open space and were again lost behind the trees, their voices running once more into an indistinguishable rumble.

Varney, halting in the path, had little doubt who the tall man was. It was Ferris Stanhope, returning to the home of his boyhood and sublimely unaware of the nature of the reception which awaited him.

Cordially as Varney loathed the great author, he had no wish to see him taken by surprise and beaten to a pulp by mob law. Moreover, if anything like that happened he and Peter would be largely responsible, since the present excitement of feeling had been largely worked up for their benefit. He had half a mind to go straight after the insouciant visitor now and give him the fair warning he was entitled to. But he dismissed the impulse as plainly overdoing his duty; the man was in no possible danger in broad daylight, and Peter had already promised that he would attend to the warning business himself.

Now, as they stood calmly chatting at the rail under the brilliant sky, he told Peter of the author's arrival and dutifully reminded him of that promise. Peter renewed it without enthusiasm. His eyes rested on the approaching gig with a kind of fascination and Varney followed his gaze.

"Isn't Hare dressy, though! Frock coat and all that . . ."

"Yes . . . He'll add a needed touch of elegance to the somber setting of the drama."

"By the way," said Varney, presently, "how did Hammerton get away last night? I believe Ferguson's been dodging me all day, but the fact is I've never given it a thought."

Peter laughed.

"He's sharp as a tack, that boy is. He played dead till old Ferguson got first interested, then nervous, and lastly careless. Lay there two hours without moving, breathed as little as he could do with, and at long intervals fluttered one eyelid and took a peep how the land lay. After a while there came a time when the door was left wide open and only one deckhand in sight. Hammerton floored him with a chair from behind and jumped over the rail. She happened to be moving close inshore at the time and he was in the woods before the fatheads even got a boat down."

Varney echoed his laugh absently. All morning since his return from Hunston he had felt himself enfolded by a mysterious despondency which he had seemed unable either to account for or to shake off. But now, as the final climax of his business drew near to summon him, he felt his spirits inexplicably rising again. A certain excitement possessed him; he was glad that at last his hour had come.

Hardly listening to Peter, he was running over in the most business like way the little scheme, mapped out and rehearsed together that morning, by which the two superfluous guests, the mere "sleepers" in the orchestra, were to be detached at the proper moment. Yes, certainly; it was sound and would hold water. So would everything else. Peter's things had gone ashore two hours before, for he was to remain in Hunston. Everything had been provided for; the last detail systematically arranged. A surer scheme and a clearer coast could not possibly have been contrived or desired.

"At breakfast," continued Peter, "Hammerton suddenly blurted out that, while he wasn't crazed with conscientiousness as a rule, one thing had kept him awake last night. Demanded whether we had the nerve to think that we had simply bought him off with a job. 'Perish the thought, Charlie,' said I, looking kind of hurt at the bare suggestion. 'Thank you, Maginnis,' said he, dignified as the president. 'It's an honest fact that I gave up the chase because I felt all along that you two fellows couldn't possibly be mixed up in anything underhanded.' Aha! thinks me to myself . . . Eh, Laurence?"

"Just exactly."

"Well, cheer up. It's done every day by our best families. And speaking of doing underhanded things," said Peter, "our guests approach rapidly. Up, guards, and at them!"

He took off his terrible Panama and waved it in a friendly manner.

"Howdedo, Mrs. Marne! Morning, candidate! Welcome aboard."

The sister and brother came up the stair and were cordially greeted by their hosts.

"Ashore again!" ordered Varney, over the side. "There is another guest."

"So we have not kept you waiting at all," cried Mrs. Marne, flashing a triumphant eye upon her brother. "Mary is not here yet—the prinker!"

She was dark, vivacious for a chaperon, easily on the correct side of 30, and arrayed in very light mourning indeed. She had a will, for it was she who had baited J. Pinkney Hare with sociology and politics to abandon the law in New York, at which he was doing rather well, and follow her to Hunston. This was when her husband, a member of Hunston's oldest family—for there was aristocracy in the town—had left her widowed the year of their marriage.

"Three times," Hare elucidated to Varney, "did she tell me, 'I'll be ready in a minute.' And a ten minute interval elapsed each time by my grandfather's trusted chronometer."

"Oh, well," said Varney, "who'd put any trust in a woman who was ready when she said she'd be? Let's get into the shade."

"Pinky," said Mrs. Marne, sister-wise, as she turned with Varney, "gets his ideas about women from the comic weeklies."

They sauntered aft, Peter and Hare in the rear.

"Committee meeting at 5:30?"

"Precisely. And by the bye," began Hare. . . .

The candidate in his tiny frock coat with pale gray spats and scarf to match looked overdressed in the brilliant sunshine. Yet probably Peter, whose purple tie blossomed too gorgeously above a blue silk "fancy vest" of a cut a good deal affected in the early nineties, looked the more striking of the two.

"He's a fool," declared Peter presently. "The chances are that Ryan has a barrel of votes salted down where we'll have the devil's own time tapping them. You can't smoke out a skunk in a minute, I tell you."

Mrs. Marne, in a cushioned chair, was being markedly agreeable to her host.

"It's my début on a yacht," she was rattling away. "Is there any special etiquette? Coach me from time to time when you see me fumbling, won't you? And if there is a code, there is one thing that I move shall go into it here and now. Politics is—or are—barred for the day! Will you make it a rule that whoever mentions it—or them—forfeits butter, Mr. Varney?"

Varney laughed. "A rank outsider myself," said he, "I'm absolutely willing. But I fear that in a division the nays would have it."

"You and I," she said, "against Mr. Maginnis and Pinky. A tie. Mary would have the deciding vote."

"Then you'd lose out," said her brother, whose social manner, it was developing, differed somewhat from that of his official moments.

"I know women," said Mrs. Marne. "I could lobby Mary over in exactly two minutes, Mr. Varney. Besides, she is absent at roll call, you know."

"The point is well taken," said Varney, to whom the thought was anything but a novelty.

"There she is now," said Peter over their shoulders.

Varney turned and looked ashore at the point where the gig was patiently waiting. There was no sign of anybody there.

"Upstream," added Peter, and the sudden honk of a motor horn punctuated the observation like a full stop.

Two hundred yards above them, a narrow driveway circled down to the river to an ancient boathouse, and here the gaze of the little party turned. Where the road curved at the water's edge, there stood a great white touring car, shining in the sun like a new pin. Upon the driver's seat sat a bare headed young man with a brown face and light sunburned hair, brushed back. On the farther side of him, gloved hand holding to the seat back, stood a young girl in a blue linen dress and a rather conspiciously large hat, also of blue. Both of them were looking off toward the Cypriani. Now the horn tooted again in salutation; and the girl, catching their eyes waved her hand and smiled, making a little gesture indicative of her lack of equipment to navigate the intervening stretch of water.

Mrs. Marne answered the salute in kind. Reassuring gesticulations were duly wafted ashore.

"Who's the new swain, Pinky," demanded Mrs. Marne, thoughtfully.

Pinky did not know. The sailing master, at a word from Varney, hurled an order to the gig ashore. Then he swept his megaphone upstream, pointing it straight at the motor:

"The gig is on the way to you now, Miss."

"That's an awfully sweet hat she's wearing," said Mrs. Marne. "I wonder where she found that shape."

Miss Carstairs nodded her thanks to the sailing master. The bare headed young man sprang down, assisted her to descend, waited with her at the water's edge, assisted her most thoroughly into the Cypriani's gig. He was a handsome boy. He stood on the shore looking after the departing boat, laughing and calling out something.

"We wanted to have luncheon on deck," said Varney, abruptly, to Mrs. Marne, "as the day is so uncommonly fine. But about noon there came up a little cloud no larger than a man's hand—it took a telescope to see it—and the steward, a pronounced conservative, begged us not to trifle with our luck. It seems too bad to go indoors on such a glorious day."

"But if we were to stay outdoors," she laughed, "would it have been such a glorious day? These are the questions that make cynics of us all. I am unhappy, Mr. Varney, because I have to fly the moment luncheon is over. The Married Women's Culture club meets at 4 o'clock. Only fancy! I am to read a paper on Immanuel Kant."

Peter, who had known no women in his life and was oppressed with the thought that Hare's sister was his personal responsibility for the day, was strolling moodily about the deck, hands thrust deep in his trousers pocket. Hare hung at the rail, his neat glasses turned upstream.

in all ways different from her going. She had slipped away like the hunted thing she was, running to cover with a hold full of fears, shying at every craft that passed, and yelled after from the shore by a stoutish young man with inimical opinions in his eye. She had steamed back early this morning not merely without fear but proudly, her whistle screaming for the limelight, her foretruck flying, so to say, the burgee of vindication; and the stoutish and inimical young man had come aboard for breakfast with his new employer at 9 o'clock sharp. Such was the measure of the whitewashing work accomplished by three columns in Mr. Maginnis' Gazette that morning.

Of the "news value" of those astonishing columns "the author's double" (as the Gazette's converted reporters felicitously dubbed him) had had abundant evidence in the many glances that followed him upon the streets of Hunston that morning. Varney's errand in town had had to do with Tommy Orrick. Some search was needed to find the transient tenant of Kerrigan's loft, but when he was finally located the matter of homes in New York was discussed and settled in the most satisfactory way in the world. It was decided that Tommy should remove his Penates to the city that very evening, where he was to be met at Forty-second street by a Mr. Horace O'Hara, an interesting personage who had once been a burglar but was now in the fish and vegetable way at Fulton market. Together they would make their way to the home. Future plans had to do with an educative course at the graded schools and other matters so strange and exalted that one could not hear them mentioned without experiencing the most benumbing abashment.

DUNCE GOT JUST WHAT HE DESERVED.

By WM. DONAHEY.

EVERY Sunday afternoon the Teenie Weenies always took a long walk, for it was very healthful to walk in the fresh air, and besides it made them good and hungry for the fine dinner which the Cook always prepared.

One Sunday during their walk the little people stopped to pay a short call on an old hen and her chickens who lived some little distance from the shoe house. After chatting with the hen and her children for some time the little people continued their walk through a big open field where they finally sat down to rest on a soft, mossy bank.

"Where's the Dunce?" asked the General, as he sat down beside the Lady of Fashion.

"I haven't seen him since we left the old hen," answered the little lady.

"He's back there teasing those chickens," announced Gogo. "I told him he'd better look out, or the first thing he knew he'd get a powerful good peckin', for one of them fuzzy chickens looked mighty mad, that's what she did."

"It would just serve him right," laughed the General. "And maybe it would teach him a lesson ——"

"H-e-l-p! H-e-l-p!" came a voice from over a bank of ground, and suddenly the Dunce dashed into view followed by a very angry young chicken. The frightened Dunce was covering the ground in great leaps, and just as he ran into the midst of the startled Teenie Weenies the chicken overtook him.

"There, you little rascal!" shouted the chicken, giving the Dunce a peck with her beak which sent the little chap sprawling in the dirt.

"What's the trouble?" asked the General, jumping to his feet.

"He was callin' me 'fuzzy-wuzzy' and throwing things at me—that's what he was," said the chicken, "and I stood it just as long as I could and I chased him, that's what I did, and I'll do it again, too, if he ever teases me again."

"You did exactly the right thing," said the General, "and I hope this will be a lesson to him."

"I suppose I shouldn't have lost my temper, but I couldn't stand it another minute," said the chicken as she trotted away in the direction of her home.

"J-j-j-jimminie C-c-c-christmas!" exclaimed the Dunce, rubbing his back, "but that fool chicken did give me an awful wallop."

That night there was a big black and blue spot on the Dunce's back and the Doctor had to rub it with salve, but it really did the foolish fellow a lot of good, for he has done no teasing since.

DRESSED in SILVER COMES the BRIDE

by Corinne Lowe

FASHION'S BLUE BOOK

Silver cloth foundation—cape and drapery of silver tissue, peg-top skirt and girdle of blue taffeta—surely in this wedding gown the great French designer proves that no bride may be quarantined from fashion! The bridesmaid's frock at the left is of white embroidered muslin with a quaint cape and silk rosebuds as outstanding features and the frock at the right says via its lavender and plaited folds of mousseline de soie, its trimming of Valenciennes, and its smashing sash of light blue taffeta that all bridesmaids do not have to be made over the pink recipe.

NEW YORK.—(Special correspondence.)—So far no tucks have been taken in the Lohengrin March. Everything else, however, about the wedding procession has changed. The bride who used to walk up the aisle in her ivory tinted satin under the shower bath veil is now attended by Dame Fashion. And with Dame Fashion as matron of honor, what astounding things have been done to the pure and joy profile of the wedding gown. For one change, there is the touch of gold and silver embroidery. Often the train is the ambassador of this splendor, and a long majestic fold of white satin sparkling with its metallic brocade will be hung from the shoulders of chiffon or tulle gown. Sometimes gold or silver is traced on the satin gown itself, and particularly lovely it is, too, when this tracery describes the moyen age waist—always a beautiful and stately fashion for the bride to select.

But the most startling revelation of the degree to which fashion may meddle with the classical white of the bride's costume is the gown which is composed entirely of silver cloth. Such is the fashion offered by Beer, the Paris designer, in the bridal gown shown today. The foundation of this gown is of silver cloth and over it falls a cape of transparent silver tissue which is heavily embroidered in the same metal.

But perhaps the coming bride may say "too much." Perhaps she may protest that in a costume so spectacular as this she is apt to look more like the float in the Old Home week parade than the heroine of her own wedding. True it is, too, that this model has dipped its wing to the call of the pageant. It would look perfectly at home in the sumptuous processional of the stage. Yet it is not nearly so operatic as it sounds. The transparent silver tissue, quivering with each step, has saved it from looking too heavily plated, too much like a coat of mail, and in this redemption the final step is taken by the white veil bound about the forehead and blowing like mist over the silvery surface.

The peg-top skirt on a wedding gown! It sounds like a limerick tossing its saucy head in a law book. Yet nowadays the wedding frock sways to every breeze of fashion and here in this silver frock Beer has given us a short skirt with the correct bunchiness over the hips. One more revolutionary step is taken in this model. Instead of being white, the deep, silver embroidered girdle is of blue taffeta, obviously because Monsieur Beer was lenient with that old superstition about the "something blue."

Capes and sashes and poke bonnets—it sounds like an attractive enough program for any bridesmaid—no matter how particular. And this year all these fashionable touches have been used in the wedding party. To the left appears a lovely little frock of embroidered white muslin trimmed with rosebuds and forget-me-nots and availing itself to the full of the pictorial license of the cape. More sophisticated is the bridesmaid frock to the right—one where a gown of plaited mousseline de soie of lavender is combined with a great taffeta sash of light blue. The effect of sky and violets is lovely and is particularly effective where the bride herself is wearing silver cloth. The lace used in this frock is Valenciennes.

The SUCCESSFUL HOME GARDEN by J. H. Heide

Article No. 55.

VANDALISM.

THE amateur who begins gardening at this propitious time is fortunate in being able to command the willing assistance of many sources of information never dreamed of before. Large tracts and even farms are tendered the willing without charge. He may even have the ground plowed and cultivated for the cost of a postal card.

As a result little gardens will spring up on all sides to please the eye and benefit the community. Some will be fenced or otherwise protected, but most of them will be exposed to the thoughtless whims of ill trained children; to the pilfering habits of thieves too lazy to take advantage of the assistance now offered, and, finally, to the perverted natures of ill bred vandals who delight in destruction and the misery it causes.

Supt. Kanst of Lincoln park declares that the average home gardener, on an exposed plot, has been able to harvest only 20 per cent of his crops. Can this be true? Are we a pack of thieves, or do we tolerate thieves to discredit the fair name of our community?

The fact remains that the south park commissioners have refused again to establish a demonstration garden, when it is so sorely needed, on account of the depredations of thieves and vandals. Lincoln park started a garden in 1915 and not only were the vegetables plucked before they matured but the soil was stolen and carted off.

If these things happen on public grounds, under special police protection, what has the private gardener to look forward to, unless public sentiment steps in to protect him? Lincoln park has erected an eight foot fence around its vegetable garden this year, a glaring rebuke to a community which takes no interest in its own institutions.

Who are the offenders? Sex is no bar to the wanton, selfish destructiveness. Even well dressed women will deliberately squat down on a beautiful flower bed in the public parks to be photographed in a "cute position." Children are suffered to trample and dig in beds of rare plants that are there for the edification of all.

The gardener who feels his very heart plucked out by the heedless destruction of some horticultural masterpiece is invariably abused for his interference with the divine right of citizenship. The payment of taxes is flaunted as a license to pluck or destroy the common property of all. If the offender has a speaking acquaintance with a politician that gardener or officer is in danger of being deprived of his means of livelihood for the effort to safeguard the public domain.

Just one thing is imperatively needed. The general public must constitute itself a public guardian of the efforts now being put forward in parks, private lots, and back yards. Each must exercise his right and duty either to arrest the thieves and vandals or to request action by the nearest police officer.

The man who sees his season's work wantonly destroyed is apt to commit a punishable crime in the protection of his produce. Let us not suffer rowdyism to endanger the interests of those who take up the hoe for us all. If no additional council action is necessary, may the police do their best to protect the gardener.

Childhood Ambition Contest.

Did you ever have a childhood ambition—a humorous one? Of course you did. And what you did wasn't anything like what you dreamed. Tell us what your great ambition was—and then tell us how far short you fell. Do it in 250 words, on one side of the paper, and address manuscripts to Childhood Ambition Editor, Chicago Sunday Tribune. For each story printed $1 will be paid. No manuscripts returned.

An Animal Trainer.

I was inflicted with ambitions too numerous to mention, but one in particular I recall.

A visit to the circus inspired me with the ambition to become a wild animal trainer. Upon my arrival at home I began to practice in what I thought the approved manner, upon the family cat and dog.

Poor Tabby regarded my antics and determined stares questioningly or dozed indifferently. Prince proved just as poor material, for he thought the commands and whip snappings a new sort of game and romped and barked joyously.

The nearest I succeeded in becoming a trainer of any kind, as the years have shown, was to become the trainer of the minds of America's young hopefuls in a rural school. Even the coldest of stares seemed hopelessly inadequate in causing "the bad boy" to desist in his pursuit of diversion. A. E. C.

Tough Luck, Madge.

I am 13.

My childhood ambition was to happen in childhood; for I always had longed to climb trees.

When my father bought some lots outside the city I was sure by dream was coming true. But—not so, because when I went to visit the lots last summer, my father's had not a tree on it, and as far as the eye could reach no tree could be seen. MADGE.

What Drink Has Cost Me

by Antoinette Donnelly

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

FROM a college diploma to a drunkard's degree entitling her to an enforced stay of three months in a home for inebriates—that's what drink and drugs have done for Ethel H., in a little over six years.

Twenty-seven years old on her next birthday Ethel will be! When she graduated from the University of —— she was one of the class beauties. With the havoc wrought by the intervening years of vicissitude much of her beauty has been destroyed. But there remains enough to make you realize the price a beautiful woman pays for alcohol.

Her eyes are that soft blue-gray, shaded by black lashes. Her hair is black as the proverbial raven's wing. But, like most every other drink victim I have seen, the hair shows the neglect and carelessness of personal hygiene and an indifferent pride. Unbrushed and unshampooed looking, with strong evidence of dandruff and oiliness, and, worse than that, in spite of the fairly generous quantity of hair she had, there were two spots on her head about the size of a half dollar that were actually bald—due, undoubtedly, to the undermined condition of her general health.

The teeth, too, I found to be, even more than the hair, the telltale of an alcoholic career. Evidence piles high has been accumulated on the devastation worked by drink on the stomach and digestive organs and, in fact, on all the vital organs. That good teeth depend upon good digestion and a healthy mouth and stomach is indisputable. In nearly every drink victim I have seen there was not only evidence of the damage done to teeth through the disease engendering influence of alcohol on the vital organs—teeth gone, teeth with cavities, and ulcerated looking gums—but there was that unforgivable evidence of total avoidance of the tooth brush.

"I used to have such good teeth," Ethel told me. "I used to be proud of them and took care of them; but I don't know, I don't seem to care any more whether they look nice or not."

Ethel's skin contributed heavily toward ruining the effect of her pretty eyes and her perfectly shaped nose and her remarkably beautifully shaped hands and feet. I have never seen lovelier hands—long, slender, and exquisitely formed—and her feet are those of generations of high breeding.

"I don't know what I can do for my face," Ethel said appealingly. "I never had a pimple or a blackhead in my life until I started drinking and using drugs. And look at it now—broken out so terribly."

I asked her about her double chin which looked grotesquely out of place on her long thin neck and her tall and slender body.

"O, that's from drinking," she affirmed. "I used to massage it when I first noticed it, but I got too lazy to do that. I ought not to have it except that I used to weigh thirty pounds more than I do now, but my weight has gone down rapidly lately because I cannot eat half the time and half the time I don't want to. When I'm drinking I never care about eating."

Ethel came first into my notice one day in the courtroom. I was arrested by her voice. It was so sweet, so soft, so soothing, and innocent in quality, with a bit of a southern drawl, that it sounded out of place in that dragnet of unfortunate humans. And her English was so superior to every other offender that my interest was quickened. She never slurs a word and she has a vocabulary that is enviable.

Her dress was pretty shabby from her hat to her shoes.

Drunkenness and other things were the charges against her. And the "other things" are invariably the shadow that stalks along with drink.

"Yes, I admit I had been drinking pretty heavily for three weeks," she answered the judge, "otherwise I never should have been guilty of doing what I was when I was arrested.

"My mother sent me a ticket to come home and as soon as I get out of here I am going to her," she continued.

Ethel H., 27, College Graduate, Whom Drink Brought to This Chair in a Home for Drunkards.

But the judge realizing she was not quite "sobered up," thought it better to hold her over for another day before trusting her to her own judgment and actions. So next morning she was called again before him. But in the meantime, the three days' fast from drink had so unnerved her that she could hardly walk into court and her hands shook so violently, he had to send her to a home for "drunks," where she now is and likely will be for some time to come.

"I was popular in college," she told me, "and I used to be taken out quite a lot. And that was when I first learned to drink. But I never drank much then. I would take the things that any girl would take who went out to cafés with boys. But I don't remember ever being under the influence, though.

"In fact, it wasn't until after I was married that I ever remember being intoxicated," she continued.

"I eloped with a man years older than I. My mother didn't want me to have anything to do with him. And my sister, too, who is a brilliant girl and a graduate of the same university as I, tried to persuade me against marrying. But I did. And I found I was married to a drug fiend.

"He taught me to use heroin," she continued, pathetically. "For a couple of years I had the habit and it landed me in the hospital, a wreck physically. Along with it, too, I was drinking some. But when you are taking drugs you do not feel the alcohol call very strong. Then a doctor friend of my family took me in hand and cured me completely of the heroin taste. It took a little time to do it, but he finally cured me totally and completely.

"But you know," she continued, "in ninety-nine cases out of one hundred after one is cured of a drug habit he or she becomes a drink victim.

"I craved drink all the time, and for the last two years I have been going down and down, until I've come to this. I don't know what is ever going to become of me. My husband left me some time ago and I hate to go back home and disgrace my mother again. I went home once before and I got a good position, although I really did not have to work, but I felt I could keep out of mischief better if I were busy. But before three weeks were over I couldn't stand it. I didn't have the strength to stick the day through. And I went home to her one night hopelessly drunk. She was an angel to me, though. O she is so good I can't go back again and make her heart bleed the way I did that other time. She always forgives me and she said she always would. But I'm going to keep away until I have straightened out for good.

"Do you think," she pleaded for an assuring answer, "after I get out of here that I will soon be strong enough every way to go along on a different path?"

It was hard to reassure her that it would be soon, for it will take a long while to build her up physically and mentally for the Herculean task. Herculean the task is for a man. For a woman "getting back" is ten times more difficult. But it has been done.

SHORTY: A GIRL 5 FEET 5 INCHES at 19 should weigh 125 pounds. You must combine exercises with your diet if you hope to make any strides in reducing. In reducing Mrs. Eva Lane thirty-six pounds in six weeks I had her practice certain exercises from fifty to a hundred times two and three times a day. Dieting without exercise will leave the muscles flabby and ugly. My instructions for reducing will give you all the information you wish about reducing. This includes hot baths, hot and cold showers, and massage. I shall be glad to send them to you if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

F. C.: AFTER YOU HAVE MASsaged your face with a good skin food apply ice to the face. This closes the pores and tones up the skin. Then apply some more of the skin food, rubbing off what will not absorb easily. I shall be glad to send you my formula for skin food and instructions for facial massage if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

* *

MRS. E. B.: AN EMINENT SKIN specialist says that an excessive growth of hair is usually a peculiarity of structure of the skin. Some persons have an unusually abundant development of hair follicles. This characteristic may be individual, but in most cases it is hereditary. The only means of permanently removing superfluous hairs is electrolysis. This work should be done by an expert only.

MISS JULIA G.: THE ONLY WAY I can get word to you is to answer your [illegible] through the paper, as you did not send me a stamped, addressed envelope. Yes, 166 pounds is much too heavy for a girl of 18. No wonder it aggravates you to be called "Beef Trunk" and "Pork"! I'll tell you what to do, send me a stamped, addressed envelope and I'll mail you my instructions for reducing so you can steal a march on all your teasers.

* *

HELEN: A GIRL FIVE FEET FIVE inches in height at the age of 16 should weigh 125 pounds. You are only about six and a half pounds under weight, and I should not be distressed about it if I were you. Just try to keep yourself in good health by eating nourishing food and getting lots of fresh air and plenty of sleep and rest. It all depends upon the kind of foot you have whether you can wear low heels or not. Persons with high arches can wear high heels comfortably, while those with broken arches should wear a heel about an inch high. If you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope I shall be glad to send you my instructions for gaining weight.

PEGGY R.: THE ODOR FROM PERspiration can be overcome by using a 25 per cent solution of aluminum chloride in distilled water. Dab on the part gently every second or third day and allow it to dry on. It is usually sufficient to make three such applications, then to wait for a recurrence before resuming treatment, or one application a week may be made to ward off recurrences. It is best to apply the lotion at night before retiring. Be sure after using that it is thoroughly dry before putting on any clothing, otherwise it may cause an eruption of the skin and will rot the clothing. After it is thoroughly dry it will not affect the clothing.

B. L. S.: THE SURE CURE FOR your fair sized mustache is the electric needle in the hands of an expert only. If hair is removed by electricity in the hands of an expert it will not return again or leave any ill effects. I have an astringent for reducing enlarged pores which I shall be glad to mail to you if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

MARGARET C.: WHITE HEADS are small collections of sebaceous matter which have been caught under the horny epidermis and have dried into hard, cheesy masses. They are really a sort of imprisoned blackhead and are often associated with them, although white, because protected from the surface dirt. They are easily removed by pricking the cover with a sterile needle and pressing out the contents.

MISS B.: THERE IS NO WAY TO remove the kink from your hair, even though it is red. You are greatly to be envied. Many girls would give all their worldly wealth to be blessed with curly hair. Just think, you don't have to worry about the dampness or rain taking the curl out of your hair and do not have the additional expense of having it curled by a hairdresser. With a few clever manipulations with the comb you are all dolled up for the evening.

JESSIE B. G.: THERE IS NO charge for my diet and exercises for reducing. Just send a stamped, addressed envelope and I shall be glad to mail them to you.

REAL LOVE STORIES

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every story published. Manuscripts will not be returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

LEARNING TO TALK.

WHEN they were wee tots their fathers fought about them. His father said it was nothing that she learned to talk more quickly than he. "Why, girls always beat boys at talking!" When her father pointed out that she learned to walk first he retorted angrily that boys "were slower to develop, confound you!"

When they were 10 he put an angle worm down her back and he was so silent before her torrent of words that it was plainly seen that she had learned to talk, first, and that she had more experience, too.

When they were 17 and in high school he failed in an English recitation and she rose immediately after and quoted the passage perfectly. Then when she gazed at him triumphantly her eyes lacked any "I hate to go above you" expression. His soft, round jaw that lacked the lean firmness it was to attain a few years hence, set with a snap and a girlish flush flooded his face. But he said nothing. He had not yet learned to talk!

When they were 20 he watched his older brother, a gay Lothario, take her to a dance to which he escorted his sister. He failed to even get a dance with her and beyond sulking and glowering in corners and spoiling his sister's evening, he raised no row. You see, he hadn't learned to talk yet.

When they were 23 he accepted a lucrative position in South America. His chum brought her to the station to see him off and his parting words were, "Good-by, old scout! See you soon, I hope." And he clapped her on the shoulder as heartily as though her slender back equaled in breadth his own husky one.

He was gone two years—two years he spent in a tropical jungle, two years in a lonely hut, two wistful, eager years, when his dreams were many and rosy, dreams of home, dreams of her.

When he came home, with his name and his fame as an engineer spread broadcast, she was the first he called on, and his greeting was, "Hello, good friend! How's the world treating you? Are you smiling in the mirror?"

And then he sat down for two years at home—two years just as wistful, just as lonely as those in the jungle, while he watched her go to places with other fellows. Two years when his tongue clove to the roof of his mouth in a dry, dreadful fashion, for he didn't know enough to talk, yet. Two years when he wished that he'd die. Two years at the close of which he hailed the chance to recruit and go to Mexico. And then for a few months he worked off his surplus energy in diligent frontier duty for Uncle Sam.

It was one exceedingly hot day that he and three brother officers sat under the flap of a tent, playing poker. He was playing in a listless, devil may care fashion, just holding his own. He reached in his pocket for a pencil and her latest note crinkled under his touch. Her last sentences, "We'll all be glad to see you home again; do you think you can make the fraternity dance?" recurred to him.

His eyes wandered dreamily out over the cactus lined, sun baked plain. His thoughts were anywhere but on the game, when one of the players roared: "Speak up, man! Speak up! Say something, you idiot! Nothing venture, nothing gain!"

"By Jupiter! You are right," he bellowed and without another word he flew from his dazed companions, across the parade grounds to the commanding officers' headquarters, got a furlough, and was on the train for his home town in four hours.

Before he even went to his mother he saw "the one girl," somehow, at last, learned to talk, ventured all, and—gained all! He is the happiest man on earth now. I know, for I am she!

WAR HOME ECONOMICS.

By Alice Geubel de la Ruelle.

Supervisor of Home Economics in the Training Schools of Paris.

WAR in bringing new duties to the men has brought also new duties to the women. While the men are fighting the enemies of our country we women must find the enemies of our homes, and among those one of the most injurious, but one of the most easily vanquished, is waste.

Waste in expenditure of food is not only a lack of duty at home but also a lack of duty to our country, to our allies. In using twice as much of anything as is necessary we spend twice as much, and we make this thing more scarce on the market. Hence, its price goes higher, not only for us, but for others, those others being our neighbors, our countrymen, our allies.

Let us work practically together to eliminate waste. This is a war in which there can be no pacifists.

Waste in food is great in the United States. I remember landing in New York a few weeks ago, several French people and myself, whose minds were so full of the war we had seen at home we could not help seeing the fearful waste, particularly in the great restaurants. Why, the whole of France and Belgium might be fed with all the good food that is thrown away.

French housewives, who are generally thrifty, have learned to be still more so since the war began. Every table thing, every article of food, is used by them to its best advantage. However, and this is an important point to notice, the food of the family must be as good, as nourishing, as abundant as ever. It is only extravagance that must be banished from the table.

There is a way of getting a good soup, and cheap, too, for indeed it costs nothing. Let us simply take together the things laid aside, which the inexperienced cook is going to throw into the garbage pail.

There are, for instance, the neck, with the head, of a fowl; its gizzard, the extremities of the wings and of the legs. Let us take all that, wash it, cut it into small diced pieces, the gizzard being previously cut up and the inner part, which forms a sort of pocket, containing the grains, being removed.

There are also some crusts of bread, the green leaves of celery, of lettuce, of cabbage, a small carrot, a bit of parsley. Let us toast the bread, and then have it cut into dice. Let us add to it the vegetables, washed and cut into pieces. If we have any other remnant of meat, vegetables, cereals, or rice, add to it.

With a little leftover butter, preferably in a new enameled kettle, if not, a French casserole, let us roast our meat on a moderate fire, stirring it with a wooden spoon. Then add a half spoon of flour, and before turning brown, slowly stirring it, add cold water. Add all vegetables, cover the kettle, and allow it to cook gently for about an hour. The proportions are for each pound of mixed meat and vegetables, one quart of water and a teaspoon of salt.

This soup is easy to make, nourishing, and most economical. It is a basic soup, with, if necessary, a supplementary few things, in every French home. An intelligent housewife may vary it infinitely according to her resources. If she has been boiling previously any potatoes or any other vegetable, she must not throw the liquid away, but keep it and pour it into the soup instead of ordinary water. The soup will be the better for it. An onion, a cluster of garlic, a bay leaf, a clove, all boiled in the soup, make it richer and more tasty, but do not forget that some combinations are to be avoided; tomatoes, cabbage, asparagus, for instance, do not agree.

A good menu is as follows: The "scrap" soup, stew with vegetables, salad, dessert.

Here is a recipe for stew for four people—Two pounds of stew meat, four carrots, six potatoes, two onions (not too small), two turnips, tablespoon of salt, some pepper.

Breast or neck of veal, or mutton, or beef, may be used. Have the piece of meat cut rather small and put in a kettle with some butter or fat on the fire, stirring it with a wooden spoon till it is beginning to brown. Then add half a tablespoon of flour, stir again and add water enough to cover it. Allow it to cook slowly for more than an hour, add the vegetables, enough water to cover it, and let it cook again for about two hours.

A good stew requires at least three hours of slow cooking.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you most sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action, yet always effective. They bring about that exuberance of spirit, that natural buoyancy which should be enjoyed by everyone, by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

You will know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets by their olive color. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

Doris Blake Says

If you were born this week you are

Courageous.

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped and addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"NEVER say die" is an appropriate motto for most of you Taurus people born this week, for you are courageous even when you know that everything is going against you. You have wonderful power of endurance, and keep right on fighting until you have won.

Your circle of friends will be small, but choice. And this circle may change now and then, for unfortunately your qualities do not always wear well. Literary ability, combined with a bitterness of speech that verges on the sarcastic, makes your pen a force for good or evil, as you choose to direct it. Judiciously employed, it is a powerful battering ram for the demolition of injustice and a weapon against evil in high places.

Your undertakings are often conceived in and covered with a veil of mystery. You may perhaps have and keep your secret, but everybody knows that you have one. You are close mouthed regarding your own affairs. You can stand a certain amount of flattery and consideration for your feelings, but you may not render as much as you like to receive.

You are witty, original, willful, sympathetic, and kind. Most of your unpleasant conditions are of your own generating. Your imagination is strong—too much so sometimes. You are poetic, musical, in a somber sort of way, and love harmony. You are idealistic and artistic and a lover of the beautiful, but you do not find it easy to get within reach of your ideals. You love the good things of life and are fond of dress.

Taurus folk are great lovers of science, literary pursuits, and art in its various branches. You may also prove a success as a banker, broker, confidential secretary, soldier, actor, or decorator.

Money with you is only a means to an end, and you give it freely as long as it lasts, but shabbiness is an eyesore. A great deal of your success depends upon your education and your vigorous brain is capable of almost endless labors and concentration.

Being the head of the sign of the earth, you will be congenial with those born in Capricorn, Dec. 23 to Jan. 20. Should you marry a Libra person, Sept. 24-Oct. 23, there will be congeniality on a more intellectual basis. Scorpio, Oct. 24-Nov. 22, being the exact opposite in the zodiac, would also make a happy union. But in any of these unions the chances of a Taurus person's happiness depends greatly upon himself.

Your most fortunate times in the year to undertake new enterprises are the two weeks beginning Sept. 5 and Jan. 11. Your colors azure, red, and lemon yellow; birth stone, moss agate and emerald.

What to Say.

"Dear Miss Blake: If I invite some friends in to spend the evening and when they leave they thank me for the evening's pleasure what reply shall I make?

"V. M."

Say, with your most gracious smile and with a heart in what you say: "The pleasure has been mine."

ETIQUETTE

By ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER

Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope. Please write on one side of the paper only.

A GREAT deal has been said and written about the charm and air of cultivation shown in a well modulated voice, but its sister virtue, a gentle, attractive laugh, has, so far, hardly been touched upon. These two things would naturally seem to be complementary, but this is not always the case. Both men and women who have, through care or by nature, acquired pleasing tones in speech have not infrequently neglected to develop pleasing laughs.

Some writer—I've forgotten who it was—said that in all nature there's no sound so horrible as human laughter.

One can express appreciation of humor and mirth without loud laughter. Emerson, the Concord philosopher, one of the most genial and delightful of mortals, is reported by his contemporaries as having never laughed, although his smile was the readiest, most radiant imaginable.

Try for a while expressing mirth by a smile, or, at most, by soft laughter. It was the gentle poet Goldsmith who wrote:

"The watch dog's voice that bay'd the whispering wind,
And the loud laugh that spoke the vacant mind."

* *

INQUIRER: At an afternoon reception it would be nice to serve tea and coffee, dainty sandwiches of two or three kinds, nuts, olives, bonbons, and tea cakes. As you suggest, a punch could be served in an adjacent room.

One Fatal Evening.

I am sure I lost a handsome husband by one silly act. One of the finest young men in town was quite attentive to me until one fatal evening. We, with a party of young friends, went into a local store during a rain storm. Several women had left their hats in the store and one of these was a fright. I put it on and caused a roar of laughter from my friends. I noticed my escort did not seem to enjoy the joke and the next day I learned the reason. The hat I made fun of belonged to his mother. The episode taught me a much needed lesson, but the price I paid was the love of a real man. M. B.

He Spent the Night.

It was a warm Sunday afternoon in August, just the time to dress up in your best Palm Beach suit, pack your hammock under your arm, take the street car to your girl's house, and put up the hammock between two trees, thus spending the afternoon pleasantly.

I did all these, and fortunately, as I thought, my particular girl lived on the car line, so I would not have far to walk in the hot sun.

We spent the afternoon drinking lemonade and fanning ourselves. At dusk I finally broke away, then I had what I considered a clever idea. I hung the hammock up between two trees in the parking in front of the house and proceeded to wait for a car in peace and comfort.

I felt my senses leaving me, but it was too much trouble to move. I awoke with a start. Some one was laughing. I looked around and discovered to my chagrin that the sun was shining brightly. I had spent the night on the parking.

Thinking to Please Him.

Wallace used to admire the way I dressed my hair and said he hoped I would always keep it looking nice.

Thinking to please him after we'd been married I did up my hair in curlers until at last Wallace said in disgust: "For the love of Mike, turn out the light and don't waste electricity on that silly hair of yours! You wouldn't if you knew how ridiculous your kinky wool looks, anyway." Such is life! H. F.

The HOME HARMONIOUS

By Anita de Campi

A Girl's Room In a Cottage

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

IF you are about to furnish or to refurnish a bedroom perhaps some suggestions in following the descriptions may help you to formulate your plans. The types of rooms are varied, and all are in course of development by different interior decorators.

The room illustrated is a girl's room in a cottage. The furniture is in birch, stained light brown. The draperies are of tan linen cross barred with blue. The bed cover is of tan mercerized cotton, with a ribbon strapped border of dark and light blue. The standard lamp has a shade of dark blue, dull green, and bright orange cretonne, with wide orange silk fringe and yellow tassels, and the tiny table lamp has a silk shade of bright flamingo red. The floor is covered with a gray blue filling.

A bedroom with a canvas wall, devoid of pictures, a neutral tinted rug, and simple dark oak furniture sounds almost austere, but it is redeemed from austerity by the drapery, a beautiful blocked linen with an Elizabethan design of large queerly conventionalized flowers and leaves on an ecru ground. The frame of the bed, with its four straight high posts, is completely covered with linen made into a pair of curtains at the head, the foot, and both sides, double faced so that they are the same inside and out. The bed is surmounted by a "roof" and a valence. The bedspread matches the drapery, and a chaise longue at the foot of the bed is upholstered and pillowed in the same material.

The inside window curtains are the same as the bed curtains. The material is so gorgeous that it would discount any other decoration used in conjunction with it. Small objects are kept in the dresser. There is no bric a brac. Were it not for the abandon of color in the fabric, the whole room would be painfully plain and cheerless.

Charmingly quaint is a colonial room with wall covering in blue and white willow pattern, the same as is seen on old willow china with cooing doves, the two lovers, the castle, the willow tree, bridge, boat, irate parent, etc. The furniture is as simple as can be, an old fashioned bureau, a poster bed, Martha Washington worktable, a wing chair and foot stool, and a few Windsor chairs.

The curtains next the window are of white ruffled muslin, looped back under plain old blue inside curtains trimmed with ball fringe. A blue and white rug crocheted by the owner herself, for the making of which we will give directions to all who ask, decks the floor, and the whole thing is made to glow with a pot of red and yellow tulips on the window sill.

A "Dutchy" little bedroom has a gray wall and dark blue and white checked calico curtains edged with narrow orange fringe. The woodwork in the room is painted white and the straight line furniture is brown. Several brown wicker chairs with calico cushions break the severity of the room. One is of navy calico with orange sprigs, another is white with a design in red dots, another is striped dark blue and white, and another is brightly fowered chintz.

At the window is a wicker bird cage with a big green silk tassel hanging from it, and on the long window sill is a row of flowers in painted flower pots, each in a painted saucer. A tiny bookcase at the head of the bed takes the place of a somno stand. On this is a brown wicker shaded lamp with a wide orange silk fringe. Three branch candle brackets placed at intervals on the side walls are fitted with red wax candles. These are more for ornament than for use and merely supplement the lighting fixtures. A thinly padded blue and white checked calico comforter is used as a bedspread and the bolster shaped pillow, made the exact width of the bed, has a sham to match.

A bedroom with black lacquered furniture has the wall paper of wide soft gray stripe alternating with bands of gray and white uneven stripes, on which are printed vines and flowers in gray. The inside draperies in this room are of black satin. The curtain poles and rings are ostentatiously displayed. The poles are covered with gray brocade and black velvet and the rings are made of small round Japanese bracelets in jade, jet, crystal, sandstone, coral, etc., giving the most vivacious touches of color. The ivory roller shades have short curtain strings finished off with big Japanese tassels, all of different colors. The black satin draperies are lined with mustard colored damask, and a mustard damask day-spread covers the bed perfectly flat, the bed being dressed without pillows.

The generally accepted mode of curtaining this season is to have the inside draperies reach the floor and the glass curtains come only to the sill. Three pairs of curtains to each window seem none too much. Thin net or voile curtains are placed against the glass, covering it completely; then comes a pair of colored voile curtains, matching the tint of the wall paper, and left with an opening between them. In other words, they are drawn slightly back to show the glass curtain. The third pair of long opaque inside curtains are drawn still further back to show those of colored voile. This arrangement, while allowing variety to the separate rooms, gives the uniform appearance that is so desirable from the outside view.

No more dainty bedroom can be imagined than a Louis XVI. This is not easily attained, however. In this the walls should be architecturally correct, formally pilastered and paneled. Pale gray and rose are popular colors. The wall may be flatly painted in two light shades of gray and the furniture enameled in the same color.

The head and foot boards of the bed are often padded with satin to match. The day spread and bolster cover may be of gray taffeta trimmed with a little pinked ruching of rose taffeta and lined with rose. If pictures are used they should be delicate French prints, gilt framed, and hung with satin ribbons.

In such a room the floor is covered with taupe tufted carpeting, and the chairs upholstered in gray and rose stripe, broken with a tiny floral stripe. Sometimes a single piece of dark furniture is added for the sake of accent—a marquetry desk for example.

In contrast to this is a room furnished in French walnut. The wall is covered with putty colored linen damask or two tone paper in damask pattern. The floor is stained dark brown and almost covered with a large richly colored oriental rug. The inside draperies are of linen in old blue and plum color figures, over the glass curtain of cream marquisette. The bed has a cover of plum colored taffeta.

Answers to Inquiries.

MOLLY: I think that a light neutral shade of blue would be more pleasing than deep blue and orange in your rooms. Don't you think it would be better for you to know something about the quarters you are going to move into before you decide on your furnishings? A day bed is an excellent article of furniture. That you could buy safely and get a wing chair, too, as you suggest. Tables are lovely to have, particularly the kind that fold and can be set aside. Gate leg tables are good. Yes, I should be glad to hear from you again and will be able to help you better when I know more what you need.

MRS. J. I. C.: You know, of course, calcimine can be done over the paper. It is not, however, always satisfactory. I suggest oyster gray for your side walls with painted woodwork a few shades darker the same color. I think that big men enjoy overstuffed chairs with rather low backs that permit comfort. A day bed would be nice in place of your davenport. I suggest pearl color instead of white for the kitchen, with old blue trimming. Small mats are used on the tables rather than large table covers. These are made of rounds or squares of upholstery fabrics, such as you could pick up among the remnants. Mulberry would be a good color for your porch cushions.

MRS. M. S.: Could you not sandpaper your graphophone and then paint it a gray green, ornamenting it with painted motifs after the fashion of Russian peasant furniture? I have seen a shallow bookcase fitted against the back of an upright piano and the arrangement seemed pleasing.

The little hostess was near the door, waiting eagerly for the bell. This was her birthday, and each little guest would bring her a present. Mother, who was at the top of the stairs, ready to come down, overheard this dialogue:

"Hello, Gertrude, I brought you a present."

"Thank you," politely from Gertrude, and then, after the package had been opened, came this: "Say, didn't I see this on your mantel piece at home?"

Johnny Hawkins' father had died a couple of years before and now his mother had married again, this time to a Mr. Carver. She gravely explained to him about his new papa and told him that his name was now John Carver and not John Hawkins any more. The next Sunday her small son took his accustomed place in his Sunday school class. The teacher was calling the roll.

"John Hawkins," she called when she came to his name.

Complete silence.

Thinking he had not heard she called again, "John Hawkins."

No response.

Again, "John Hawkins," a little vexed this time. "Why, Johnny, why don't you answer; don't you hear?" she said at last.

"I'm not John Hawkins any longer. I'm John Carver; didn't you know we got married?" explained Johnny with great dignity.

One afternoon my mother and I were sitting on the porch when a neighbor's little girl came up on the porch, but did not look at us. She walked into the vestibule and was ready to ring the bell when I said: "Don't ring the bell, Ruth. Father will think it is company and get excited, as he is taking a nap."

"Well," said Ruth, "isn't I tompany?"

A mother of my acquaintance suggested to her 5 year old daughter that she pray for a baby sister or brother. Time passed and the 5 year old was rewarded for her prayers, and when the question of a name arose, the little miss demanded the right to name the baby, saying: "I'll name that baby; I did the praying."

Billy was told to amuse his baby brother for a while. He obeyed, saying just loud enough to be heard: "Huh, who ever heard of a he nurse girl?"

PREPARING SMALL PORTIONS.

A REASON for the wastefulness in many a kitchen, both small and large, is that the small portion is not valued as it should be. Just as a single teaspoon of vanilla will go a long way in flavoring, so will many a small thing—say, even that part of the carrot stems between the leaves and the root, or the upper and green part of the new onion, both of which commonly go into the waste.

And what results in even greater loss to the eaters is the fact that a great many people do not know how to cook the small portion. Take a soldier who knows how to cook a single egg, perhaps on a hot rock in a box made out of an envelope, or make a single cup of coffee out of a small portion, or in his mess cup to cook a single potato or a single onion, making it savory with condensed milk or cream, or how to prepare his own small allowance of cereal—such a man will be far better fed than a comrade who is not so handy.

In the tramp world small cookery in utensils made out of tin cans is common and seemingly satisfactory. In the schoolgirl world there is sometimes accomplished in a small way effects similar to those procured by the poor artists in Paris, who have often become highly superior cooks on an inconceivably small money allowance.

When basket buying becomes more common with us it will be easier to buy the small portion—the single mushroom, as in foreign markets; the single onion [present prices might bring that about], two or three potatoes, a three inch square of squash. The seller wastes no paper and string, and, being at no expense for delivery, is, in some localities, even today, more willing to accommodate in this way than most people believe. I often buy one or two tomatoes, a stalk of celery, one artichoke, etc., in one of the leading groceries.

A dainty and rather inspiring economy can only be mastered when one understands how to procure and utilize to advantage the small portion. The whole essence of the art of seasoning meats, and even vegetables and eggs, depends on knowing how to use one onion, or one-fourth of an onion, or even one slice, wrapping the rest in wax paper to preserve it; of using one clove of garlic, one stem of celery, a half inch bit of green ginger, etc., or a bit of chives grown in a pot in the kitchen, or some of the spring sprouts.

Equally important is it to know how to use the teaspoon of granulated tapioca or vegetable gelatin, or the tablespoon of flour, or cornstarch, or arrowroot, or rice flour, in thickening little preparations that enhance our dishes in all sorts of ways. Plain pilot bread or any cracker, dry and unpalatable, perhaps, may be made quite the opposite by dipping it in a hot sauce made of one tablespoon of butter and one of flour, cooked together, and then with one cup of boiling water. Hot foods are more economical for the body than cold ones. They conserve heat, which represents body work.

Two cooking methods that are of great service in small preparations are those of whipping and whisking. A cup of plain sour milk, well whisked and eaten with a little sugar, may be quite as agreeable as a junket. By judicious whipping a one-half pint bottle of cream may serve a family of two or three in four different ways. Nowadays whipped cream, perhaps sweetened a bit, is eaten on cake and gingerbread, on cooked creams, pumpkin and cream pies, on puddings, on top of many soups and salads as a garnish, on ice cream or with the sundae, on a compote of fruit, in the cup of cocoa or coffee, etc. It is essential to the dessert jellies. It is the characteristic part of the parfaits, charlotte russes and mousses, and Bavarian creams.

Whipped Cream and Dates.

Four tablespoons of cream, thick enough to whip, may often be taken off the quart of milk. If cold to chill it will whip readily. Use a cup with a bowl-like bottom instead of one with any creases, and the turbine egg beater. These four tablespoons will yield at least 100 food units. One and one-third tablespoons of thick cream yield 100 calories or food units. Suppose this is added to a quarter of a pound of dates, which will yield from 350 to 400 food units. The dessert will then yield as much of energy as many a meal, say one of an inch thick slice of bread, a square of butter, one lamb chop, and a goodly proportion of mashed potato.

To prepare the dates pour boiling water over them and let stand for two minutes. Pour off the water, drain, push out the stone, and examine the inner lining carefully, and break into small portions. If two tablespoons, rather scant, of sugar is added to the complete mixture, another hundred calories results, and twelve pecan meats another 100.

When one requires but 2,600 food units a day, as most women and clerical people do, see how easy it is to get a good portion in this simple dish? Plain whipped cream, sweetened and flavored, will be enjoyed by a child as much as ice cream, and can be prepared in a minute.

Sour Cream Salad Dressing.

It does not lessen the food value of cream to have it sour. As summer approaches many a small family probably will often let some part of a bottle of cream sour. Whipped up and sweetened, this is as palatable as the best butter on brown bread, and is excellent on a cabbage salad. Whip with the turbine egg beater, add a pinch of salt, a scant teaspoon of sugar for four tablespoons of cream, and about the same of lemon juice or vinegar. The flavor of the vinegar is generally preferred.

Cup Custards.

One of the best ways of using up a cup of milk is to make two small cups of custard with it. If the milk is boiled the custard cooks more quickly. For each cup allow one egg beaten slightly or until it will hold to the beater and run off like cream, and two level tablespoons of sugar, a bit of salt, and a few gratings of nutmeg. Pour into small buttered cups, set in a water bath which must not be allowed to boil, and bake until the egg sets or until the handle of a silver teaspoon inserted will come out clean. To make it go farther add three crackers rolled fine.

Soft Custard.

One can use exactly the same preparation as for cup custard for a soft custard sauce to use with fruits, etc., cooking it in the double boiler or quicker over the fire turned to lowest point. Egg yolks alone are best for such a custard, as a base for ice cream and other preparation, about five yolks to a pint.

Egg and Tomato.

One little tomato and an egg may be cooked together in various ways deliciously in a cocotte or shirred egg dish, or with little less trouble scrambled over the fire. In an East Indian fashion, with the name "patahol," this is cooked as follows: Peel and cut in slices one or two tomatoes and fry them in a little butter. When they are tender add an egg well beaten, cook while stirring both together until they are of a smooth consistency. A little minced onion or a bit of canned red pepper may be added or cooked a little before the tomato is best. Add salt to taste. The hard part of a can of tomatoes, or half of it, may be strained, mixed with the well beaten yolk of an egg, the stiff white folded in, the whole seasoned to taste and baked in a soufflé dish for one.

Fondue.

With a slice of bread or without, with one egg and a bit of cheese the relative of the Welsh rarebit, but something considered more digestible, is easily and quickly made. Melt one tablespoon or a little more of butter in a small saucepan over the fire, grate a piece of cheese about the third of the weight of an egg, or up to six tablespoons when grated. Add one well beaten egg and the grated cheese to the butter in the saucepan, and stir constantly until the cheese is melted and the whole the consistency of Welsh rarebit. Salt lightly and serve on toast and eat with a cracker.

Cream Cheese.

With no more than four tablespoons of sour cream one may get a bit of cheese of the type of one of the most elegant cheeses of Paris by salting it slightly, stirring it smooth, and straining it through a cloth. A little pressure may hasten the process, and it is better not to let it stand too long in the cloth. Remove to earthen dish and cover close if not used at once.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING-HAND

by MARION HARLAND

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

When an address or other information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to the newspaper office.

Correspondent for a Small Boy.

"IN the Helping Hand column of some months ago was a request for a correspondent for a small boy. If not too late, I would be glad to send the lad entertainment occasionally. I did not see the name at the time or I might have written sooner. The initials signed to the letter were E. F. P. S. B. M."

The little boy has been supplied, but on the chance that some other small lad may covet a corerspondent, I will put the address of S. B. M. on file.

His Need Supplied.

"I am writing this to thank you for putting in the Corner my last request for a printing press. I received two offers of assistance, one from a kind woman who sent me the nicest little printing press I have ever seen, just what I had asked for, and the other from a kind man, who offered to assist me in getting the press. To say I am proud would be a small term for expressing my gratitude. I hope I may soon be able to extend a helping hand to some fellow sufferer and also to repay you for your kindness to me.

"A. D. H."

I am more than repaid by the knowledge of the kindness of my Cornerites to this young man, and though I have no doubt he has already written in acknowledgment to the generous friends who wrote to relieve his want, I wish to express my thanks to them in addition to his. His case appealed to me particularly, and I am most glad that he has met with so satisfactory a response to his plea.

"I should like to have pictures cut from the women's magazines and other periodicals. I want to make our walls pretty with them.

The illustrations to our magazines are so many and varied and in a number of cases so attractive that there ought to be no difficulty in providing this correspondent with all the pictures she wants to beautify her walls. I stand ready to send her address in response to a request for it.

Reading Matter for Prisoner.

"In a recent issue of the Corner you speak of D. O. S., who is confined in a penal institution and wishes reading matter. If you will send his address to me I shall be delighted to gather some magazines and send them to him. Also, can you give me the name of something which will help me to get rid of fleas?

"Mrs. W. L. S."

Thank you for your kind offer, but the person of whom you speak has already been supplied through the generosity of other friendly Cornerites. I will print your offer on the chance that some one else may care to accept it. The best remedy for fleas I have ever found is oil of pennyroyal. This should be put plentifully about the house in cracks and crevices, so as to make the place unpleasant for the pests. I am told that if garments, rugs, etc., are soaked in gasoline this will drive off fleas, but, of course, great care must be taken not to have a light in the room where articles have been thus treated. Can any one else send us other cures?

Windows Are Bare.

"I see that you have many requests for quilt pieces, and still I would be glad to get a few and so to have some curtains. My windows are bare and I am not able to buy anything for them. If there is some one who has bought new draperies and has no use for the old ones, I should be so glad to get them. I am an invalid with small children, and my husband cannot get work to do, so anything would be appreciated. I hope I shall have an answer to this soon.

Mrs. M. L. W."

We have constant appeals for quilt pieces, but then we also have many offers of such scraps and I trust this request may come to the eyes of some one who has pieces to give away. As to the curtains, I am less positive, but there may be some one who has discarded hangings this spring who may be willing to bestow them upon this correspondent.

Friendless Middle Age.

"I have always been interested in the Corner and I am wondering now if you can cut the Gordian knot for a stranger in the city. I see and hear much of people who are known, but it is mostly of young girls, with their lives before them and with every chance that youth and insouciance can give to enchance their charm.

"But how about the mature woman in your midst, who perhaps knows herself to be highly educated, accomplished, entertaining, and an all around good companion? On taking a casual look around the different places of amusement it is seldom one sees a mature man accompanied except by a girls in her teens or early twenties. She may have the charm of youth, but do wit and intelligence count for naught in the scheme of things?

"I read not long ago an incident of a traveling man who wrote concerning himself. It seems that until he became middle aged, home ties to his mother kept him from forming other associations. When he was bereft of her he was all alone. He voiced the wish that there were some means whereby he could meet some one who would welcome him upon his arrival in the city and who would appreciate the companionship of a good clean man, if for no other reason than sociability.

"Well, I feel as he did. If not given to forming the acquaintanceship of the opposite sex in a casual manner, what chance has a good woman to meet pleasant men? I am no man hater and a purely feminine diet surfeits me. I read a notice the other day of a social club that met five hundred strong with seventeen male members (attached at that) in attendance! What course would one pursue to meet pleasant men?

"Questioner."

The difficulty you mention is one that has often impressed me, and although I can make certain suggestions which would do in some cases, none of them might meet your needs. In the first place, the woman with a church connection has chances to become acquainted with nice people. The woman who interests herself in charitable and philanthropic and industrial work meets others of like interest, both men and women. So do musical persons have a chance to meet. I would advise you to consider what are your especial interests and to see if you cannot discover some methods in one of the lines I have mentioned by which you can get in touch with pleasant co-workers. This may lead you to making friends of the kind you wish, and bring you into closer associations with people who may seem worth while to you. Will some one else write and express an opinion upon this topic? It must be one that has come to the attention of many others and I think a discussion of it might be helpful.

Likes to Read Novels.

"I would like to have you convey this message from me to H. G. B. This is the first time I have written to any one in the Corner, but as I am a shut-in and have read nearly all the books in the neighborhood and all I could get from other sources I thought I would answer her offer. Of course, I don't know what kind of books she has, but I like novels. I have a card at the library, but I have much trouble getting the books and having them returned. Usually I have to give a child a nickel and pay a fine if late, and so I have stopped getting them for a while. I crochet a great deal, but I am about out of orders for yokes, so I will read more than ever. I now crochet a while and then read a while. I do what little housework is to be done myself. I notice my nervousness when I write more than at any other time.

"Mrs. C. E."

I regret that the books offered by H. G. B. have all been given away. Is there some one else who will write for the address of this shut-in correspondent and send her some of the books she wishes?

The Skin You Are Ashamed of Now You Can Be Proud of Tomorrow

After twelve years of scientific study, a specialist has at last perfected a real complexion beautifier. It is positively guaranteed to make you look years younger. He learned that certain Oriental beauties owe their flawless complexions to an emulsion of an extract of the seeds of a wonderful Oriental flower. This emulsion is so beautifying, so marvelous in its virtues that it at once became the most popular complexion preparation sold in New York. All you do is to anoint your skin with it, not neglecting under the chin, where women show their age so plainly. Then wash with warm water and a face cloth. Do this twice a day, when you would otherwise wesh your face. Follow these directions a few days and you will really look years younger. It is so astringent that wrinkles, crows' feet and enlarged pores vanish as if by magic; the skin becomes many shades lighter, fresh, clear and youthful. This treatment banishes blackheads and pimples. It is ideal for massage, and women say it prevents and removes freckles. If your hands get rough and red this will keep them soft and white.

If you honestly want a perfect complexion, go to The Fair, Buck & Rayner, any Department Store or your own druggist and ask for creamed La-May (French Creme L'Ame). You get enough for a month for only 35c. Do not forget your complexion must quickly show a marked improvement or your dealer is authorized to return your money without question. You are sure to be delighted. Millions of women have received this offer, and every one heard from writes like Blanche Dearing, who says: "This wonderful preparation has cleared my skin, lightened my complexion and given natural color to my cheeks. My friends say I look many years younger than my age."

Remember, Creme L'Ame (La-May) is a new discovery; nothing so beautifying has ever before been made. One thousand dollars is offered to any chemist who analyzes Creme L'Ame (La-May) and finds it contains petroleum, glycerine, cocoa butter, lanolin or anything that will grow hair. No other complexion preparation is sold in America under such a positive guarantee. When Creme L'Ame (La-May) has banished your wrinkles, reduced your enlarged pores, cleared your skin, lightened your complexion and given natural color to your cheeks, you will know why it is now used by over a million American women. Out-of-town readers can order by mail of the American Agent, Herbert Roystone, 106 E. 19th St., N. Y.

WHY SOME FAIL.

COMING from some of the letters that have reached this desk recently from girls who "admit" they are experts in stenography, but complain of not being able to hold a job for any length of time, or prove themselves to a great extent, I should believe that the only requirement to being a successful stenographer is the ability to take dictation in shorthand and manipulate the typewriter with speed.

A letter before me, written by a girl who signs herself "Expert Stenographer" is typical of the poorly educated girl who complains that she cannot get a job even though she can take dictation at the rate of 100 words a minute and run the typewriter at a speed of eighty-five a minute. The letter is replete with grammatical errors and misspelled words, which, along with utter disregard for punctuation and arrangement, solves the mystery of failure. It makes one marvel that the author of such a letter could have received a diploma from a business college.

Many girls, who through willfulness or vanity cut short their education, imagine that the necessary equipment for a successful stenographer consists in spending a few months in a stenographic school, merely learning to write shorthand and run a typewriter.

The conversation of two young girls on the street car the other day interested me. They were evidently students of a business college. One of the girls, pointing to some books the other carried, asked why she was taking them home.

The girl with the books said, "Why, to study, of course."

"Do you study grammar and spelling?" asked the other in astonishment.

The girl with the books smiled as she answered in the affirmative.

"Well," said the first speaker. "I don't think knowing your grammar perfectly is going to count much when you are looking for a position. I'm spending all my time acquiring speed. That's what counts. When I have a job, the grammar of the man who dictates the letters will be good enough for me, he's the one who should worry about that end of it. As for spelling, I believe in letting Webster take care of that. If I keep a dictionary in my desk, what difference does it make whether I'm a good speller or not? I am going to stick only to shorthand and typewriting, and when I can do eighty-five words in a minute, I think I'll qualify as a good stenographer."

The girl with the books was silent for a moment and then said: "I think just as you do, but my sister, who has been a stenographer for five years, insists that I bring my grammar and speller home with me and study them every night. She hears my lessons before I go to bed.

"Sometimes I make a fuss and tell her I think I'm wasting time on grammar and spelling that I ought to be giving to shorthand. Then she says, 'Young lady, some day your employer will hand you a letter and say: "These people are kicking about a delay in their last shipment. Write them explaining diplomatically that the delay was unavoidable and assure them their future orders will receive our prompt attention." That sounds easy, but when you try to put your employer's thought into your own phrasing you will wish that you had paid more attention to the simple rules that govern the forming of sentences. And also let me tell you that when you have a notebook full of dictation and only a couple of hours in which to transcribe your notes you will have no time to refer to your dictionary when you are in doubt about your spelling. I advise you to stick to your grammar and your spelling book if you wish to be a good stenographer.'"

A wise old sister! Her experience had taught her not to underestimate the value of a thorough drilling in the fundamentals of the English language.

News and Views of the Theater

By Percy Hammond

THE authors of "Turn to the Right" do not like it to be said that their play is immoral in that its three beguiling prison birds are married at the end to the three nice village belles. To prove that

While the lamp holds out to burn
The vilest sinner may return

they cite various authorities from the Hymns and Spiritual Songs of Isaac Watts to Holy Writ, including reports from famed New York penologists of the present day. They regard their amusing heroes as poor, limed souls who, freed from Sing Sing's snares, repent their transgressions and are therefore "half or altogether innocent." "Who," demands Mr. Winchell Smith, "who shall say that he who has sinned and is sorry—and these boys are sorry—is not as worthy as he who has never been tempted?"

Possibly it is the comfortable manner of the culprits' atonement that is objected to by the gloomy few who believe that the livery of repentance should include the hair shirt of retribution. "Gilly" and "Muggsy" and "Joe" have rather an easy time between the prison doors and the magic jam which leads them to the altar. Even Mr. Smith will not deny that in cracking the old skinflint's safe and picking his pocket they feel the true rapture of a hazardous joy. But most of us are pleased with skill and humor when employed in the questionable acquisition of money, and the depredations in "Turn to the Right" are both expert and funny. For those who are more fastidious one of Mr. Smith's naïve defenses is submitted. "There was a big roll in the safe," says he, "and Muggsy took only $125!"

SUGGESTING methods of conserving natural resources in the present crisis, a correspondent writes that he believes much white paper might be saved without great distress to the nation if the following things were not printed:

The songs of Irving Berlin.
Noon editions of the afternoon journals.
Fiction in the Saturday Evening Post.
Newspaper "comics."

On Tuesday morning, he might have added, there appeared in THE TRIBUNE a report of a play called "'Ception Shoals." Neither the subject nor its treatment had to do with the war, yet there the story was, measuring approximately fifteen inches in length in each of the more than 400,000 TRIBUNES published and sold. I do not know how many acres of Canadian forest were ravished for pulp to manufacture the paper occupied by those unimportant reflections; but by multiplying 400,000 copies by 15 inches one finds that something like ninety-five miles of words (column measure) were printed about "'Ception Shoals" in this journal alone.

When it is estimated modestly that each of the million readers of THE TRIBUNE'S dramatic news devoted five minutes to perusing the account of "'Ception Shoals," the evidence of nonthrift becomes sickening. Five million minutes—nearly ten years of seedtimes and harvests given to reading a criticism of "'Ception Shoals." Ten years—it is thirty years, computing eight hours to a day! In the midst of the fearful meditation I tear my calendars and vow to square myself with conservation as quickly as may be possible upon the fertile greens of any golf links yearning to be tilled.

As further sacrifices in the interest of war-time frugality the appended dissipations are nominated by various reporters, editors, compositors, stereotypers, reviewers, and office boys of THE TRIBUNE:

Mahler's Eighth.
Pierrot plays.
Roscoe Arbuckle.
Water holes.
Tripe.

THIS problem of conduct, submitted by a motion picture player of prominence, is passed on to such thoughtful readers as may be good at solving the intricacies of formal patriotism. The actor was at supper in the most popular and the most arrogant of the anti-American restaurants in Chicago when the band began to play "The Star Spangled Banner." Having been an American soldier before he embraced the fillums, the actor, doubting the sincerity of the performance, remained seated. Whereupon he was hissed and threatened by the star spangled zealots who surrounded him. It is now his desire to know whether he should thus have indicated his resentment of what he considered an affront to the national hymn or to have sanctioned the suspected hypocrisy by standing. The obvious answer to which is that when in Rome it is at least comfortable to do as the Romans do.

There will be no successor to David Montgomery as Fred Stone's associate. "Hereafter I will work alone," says Mr. Stone. "If I can't do that, I'll retire."

Miss Alexandra Carlisle, an Englishwoman, impersonates the Ohio lady in Tarkington-Street's "The Country Cousin," and Philadelphia newspapers don't like the way she mixes middle-east diction with British pronunciation. In "Turn to the Right" at the Grand one of the village types uses the elegant "nevah" with the homely "ain't" in the same sentences.

Lew Fields evidently does not see a long life for "Bosom Friends," even with the extravagant cast with which he presented it in the east. He will go into the New Century theater revue with Raymond Hitchcock, Julian Eltinge, and Miss Elsie Janis.

The Lambs will not gambol this spring in the outlying districts as has been their custom. Instead they will depend exclusively on New York for funds, giving a week's entertainment at the New Amsterdam next month.

Sir Herbert Tree's "Colonel Newcome" fell short of its expected success in New York and it will end its brief run this week. Sir Herbert will then return to England. Last Friday he addressed the young women of Vassar.

George Broadhurst has found a new play in a Hungarian story by Irmi Foldes and under the title "Over the Phone" he will present it with Henry Kolker, W. J. Ferguson, Will Deming, and Miss Alma Belwin. It is about a European painter who comes to America to make portraits of rich women and falls in love with one of them.

"The Bird of Paradise" on its third visit to the Olympic opened to receipts of $1,932, breaking all its records. Since then it has attracted large audiences, most of them ukelele players.

"The Show of Wonders" will, it is said, have a complete new equipment for its Palace theater summer run. The spectacle is now making its way west, playing two weeks' engagements in one week cities, and it is due in Clark street May 15 or thereabouts, depending on how long will be required to set it to the Palace stage.

Walter Catlett, a glib clown who was noticed here in "So Long, Letty," will be among the performers in the next Follies.

Vernon Castle, wearing battle medals, was a dancer at the opening of Mr. Ziegfeld's Frolic in New York last week. "Here is one tango bird who sure made good," said Will Rogers, introducing him. Mr. Rogers in his monologue discussed President Wilson. "Say something about Marshall," shouted an Indiana tourist. "Marshall who?" inquired Mr. Rogers.

Twenty-two new patriotic songs were put out last week by the hungry doxologists, it is said. One of them is called "Kiss Me, America; I'm Your Red, White, and Blue Baby Doll."

Victor Jacoby has composed music for "The Runaways," a comedy in which Miss Billie Burke appeared several seasons ago. Although Miss Julia Sanderson insists that she has retired, the piece is said to be intended for the Sanderson-Brian-Cawthorn triumvirate. Mr. Brian has wagered $200 with Miss Sanderson that she will return to the stage within a year.

A romantic light opera called "Yesterday" is in course of composition by Glen MacDonough and Reginald De Koven, whose last previous collaboration was "The Algerian," in 1894.

Henry Miller's enthusiastic faith in the judgment of the Pacific coast will be further tested this spring by a production of "Anthony in Wonderland," by Monckton Hoffe, which Charles Hawtrey is playing in London.

After a fortnight of "Getting Married" at the Princess, Frank Keenan will present there his play of Japanese-American politics, "The Pawn." "Getting Married" will begin a week from tomorrow night and it will be acted by William Faversham, Miss Hilda Spong, Charles Cherry, and Miss Henrietta Crosman. "The Love Mill," an operetta, will be sung for the first time at the Illinois next Sunday by Ralph Herz et al. under the direction of Andreas Dippel.

"When Johnny Comes Marching Home," a musical comedy of the civil war period, will be revived by its producer, F. C. Whitney. It was a favorite half a generation ago.

Miss Beatrice Noyes, who played here in "Kick In" and "Mile-a-Minute Kendall," was married last week to Donald Gallaher, one of the actors in "The Country Cousin." Mr. Gallaher's most recent visit here was with Miss Barrymore as Emma McChesney's boy, Jock.

The tearful ending to Miss Jane Cowl's "Lilac Time" has so much distressed its patrons that at their request she has made it happier.

Miss Queenie Vassar, who is Mrs. Joe Cawthorn, is a grandmother, a son having been born to her son, Harry Kernell and Mrs. Kernell, a New York newspaper woman.

Burns Mantle's New York Theater Letter

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—During the early days of his radicalism in the theater Arnold Daly announced a production of "Mrs. Warren's Profession" in the Garrick theater, New York. That was twelve years ago, and while the manners and morals of the dear old Knickerbockers and those who live with them probably were no better then than they are today, they were less commonly discussed, not to say displayed, in public.

On hearing the announcement, therefore, the anti-vice forces became considerably het up. An agent was sent to the police to protest. "It's an outrage," declared the agent, in effect. "The idea of his attempting such a thing." "What's the trouble?" queried the police head. "This Daly person is about to produce a play called 'Mrs. Warren's Profession,' written by that awful Bernard Shaw, and we, as good citizens, will not stand for it." "Why? Isn't it a good piece?" "Good! Do you know to what profession it refers?" "No. Millinery?" "Well, hardly. It refers, my dear sir, to the profession of prostitution." "My Gawd!"

Whereupon a police detail was ordered forth, the streets in front of the theater cleared of a public waiting curiously to see Mrs. Warren and the inmates of her household as they emerged from their temporary quarters, and the manager of the company arrested.

A few days later the Supreme court judges, acquainting themselves with the play itself, issued an injunction permitting as many performances as any one cared to give. After which "Mrs. Warren's Profession" was played without hindrance for several weeks and caused not the slightest excitement. Being an unpleasant play it was not a popular play and as soon as the limited public interested in it had seen it the business fell away to nothing and the engagement was brought to an end.

An echo of this exciting experiment was heard last week when Mary Shaw, the original Mrs. Warren, revived the play for the benefit of the Gamut club, an organization of professional women banded together to help, not only the weak sister but the strong as well. The first audience was hand picked, in that it was composed mainly of actor friends of the club, who had paid $2.50 a seat to help the charity. But there was a brisk sale at the box office for the second performance next day, indicating that a part of the public was still looking for the shock.

And still the shock eluded them. However, the revival did them much good by proving that there is a vast difference between the dramatization of ideas and the dramatization of Broadway in action, between the "immoral" play dictated by brains and that dictated by instincts.

Mrs. Shaw again gave a splendid performance as that "genial and fairly presentable old blackguard of a woman," as Shaw describes her, and Beatrice Beckley (Mrs. James K. Hackett) played the strong minded Vivie, her daughter. In the mother's confession of the poverty that drove her finally to the profession she had embraced the older actress was particularly effective and Miss Beckley, cutting all references to Vivie's fondness for cigars, speeches that caused a lot of discussion when the play first appeared, was able to make the girl a more normal and consequently a more commanding figure.

There was an interesting meeting of the Barrymores the other night. The play was "Peter Ibbetson," a belated dramatization of the Du Maurier story, and both Lionel and Jack Barrymore were in the cast, Jack playing the soulful hero and Lionel the wicked uncle.

In a stage box sat Ethel, flanked by her aunt, Mrs. John Drew; her cousin, Louise; and her husband, young Mr. Colt. And as the boys proceeded with the play, scoring the familiar Barrymore hits, the Drew-Barrymore family wept joyfully and thrilled with that family pride and loyalty which is so fine a character of theirs. Between acts Ethel frequently dabbed the tears out of her eyes and dashed back stage to encourage the boys, for all the world like a fluttering mother of two stage children.

The offstage picture recalled to mind a paragraph from an old biographical note concerning the Barrymores. John Drew took Ethel and Lionel into his own company and trained them in art," it reads. "John Barrymore, having no dramatic talent, was educated in drawing. The shadow of early sorrow is found in the boys. John's drawings for the magazines are grewsome and modeled after Doré. Llonel's performances are tragic and emotional. Ethel inherits the unquenchable humor of her mother, who could make epigrams with a breaking heart. The Barrymore boys are talented, but gloomy; the Barrymore girl is high spirited and vivacious."

And here is John, the lad without dramatic talent, scoring by far the greatest artistic successes of the three; Lionel, just returning from a virtual abandonment of his stage career, which he quit in a huff at the outset of his most promising engagement after he had been advanced to stardom in "The Other Girl"; and Ethel, partly because she has been unable to find a play that suits her and partly because she can make more money doing it, devoting her time to the movies.

Lionel, too, has done much for the screen drama, and quite a bit for himself in a financial way, by devoting his time to it. Whether his return to the stage in "Peter Ibbetson" is by way of experiment, to discover whether or not he still is a good actor and capable of regaining his old position, or whether it merely represents another of his ephemeral flights inspired by his liking for the part offered him, we cannot say. If it was a hit he was looking for, he scored it almost immediately, and by good acting rather than because of the friendship of the audience. His sense of character is unerring, and his Col. Ibbetson is a definitely projected and carefully finished study of that old tyrant.

"Ibbetson" will be recalled as the Du Maurier story which most of that author's readers declared to be immeasurably superior to "Trilby." Rather skillfully dramatized by John Raphael, it is a story of dreams and dreamers, the romance of the highly spiritual Peter and the sweetheart of his youth, she who was Mimsy in Paris and became Mary, Duchess of Towers, in London. They had been playmates as children and met again years later, after Mimsy had married and was lost to her childhood's lover. And in their first meeting they discovered that their child's game of "dreaming true" was still possible to them; that by concentrating their thoughts on each other as they went to sleep they could project their respective souls into that land of memories where they were happiest and thus cheat the fates that had separated them.

In this dream world Peter sees and knows his parents, who had died when he was young, and when in the actual world the uncle who has brought him up insults the memory of his mother Peter kills him. He is sentenced to be hanged for this crime, but the sentence is later commuted to one of life imprisonment, and for forty years he languishes in Newgate prison. He lives to a happy, harmless old age, however, because in very fact to him stone walls do not a prison make. Each night his eager soul slips through the bars and past the guards of Newgate and finds the soul of his Mary waiting to greet him, and together they spend the hours till waking time roaming the world unconsciously conscious, as you might say, of an unutterable happiness.

The dream meetings are staged, three of them, back of the front scene, and are effectively shown through gauze curtains and under cleverly arranged lights. The first night, however, the production was handled as awkwardly as it could have been by a crew of amateurs in Ashtabula, and Peter slept only by grace of a superior patience and a fine stage training. Most of the scenery fell on him or near him each time he went to sleep, and it was hard to believe that the play was being given in the Republic theater, Forty-second street and Broadway, and not in Elks' hall, Missoula. Also it speaks promisingly for the grip the story had on the audience that it kept it seated and interested until midnight, when Peter's soul finally dodged the last stage brace and met his beloved in a sky blue heaven of considerable pictorial beauty.

There was a rumor floating around the Metropolitan Opera house the other night when Caruso was pouring his farewells for another season into his portion of the "Rigoletto" score that the tenor was practicing "The Star Spangled Banner" in his dressing room. The crowd, which jammed the Metropolitan until the side walls bulged and the panic experts of the fire department breathed uneasily, hearing the rumor, refused to leave. After the opera was concluded as many as could get from the balconies and galleries onto the orchestra floor ran down there and stood cheering and calling for the tenor. Finally, after Caruso had bowed his head almost loose, he offered three cheers for America as a substitute for the song, and then three more for the allies.

THE OHIO MAGNETIC CONTROL

OHIO ELECTRIC

THE poetry of motion and the romance of sunny climes where love and adventure beckon on every hand—these are for those fortunates who may travel by gondola—or Ohio Electric.

The even, road-smoothing riding qualities of the Ohio make every highway as delightful as a water-way. And, in the comfort of the luxuriously fitted interior, time o' year makes no more difference than kind o' day.

In an Ohio Electric you are serenely comfortable on bitterest cold days—or in heaviest storms.

The perfect magnetic control gives you supreme confidence in your car and in yourself. You start, speed up, reverse or stop as easily as you switch on an electric light in your own home.

The Ohio Electric is the ultimate electric—for milady who wants the utmost in power, refinement, luxury and beauty. And it is moderately priced, too—one may be bought for as little as $2480. You are always welcome—whether you wish a demonstration or merely come to inspect.

MR. KERRIGAN CALLS ON US.

THE telephone message that Mr. J. Warren Kerrigan was on his way over and soon would put in a personal appearance in our office caused a wild flutter among the office contingent. For at least five minutes every looking glass in the place was surreptitiously working, and everybody edged his chair so as to be within the range of the door, for, be he liked or disliked, a moving picture idol is an idol just the same, and J. Warren Kerrigan ranks among the pioneers of the screen-deified adored.

"There he is," I heard the murmur, and looking up, saw advancing toward my desk a tall, bronzed, manly looking man accompanied by another tall man, not so bronzed person. I rose.

"Mr. Kerrigan?" I asked. The visitor bowed and held out a strong right hand. It was indeed Mr. Kerrigan et secretary. I may as well be here acknowledged that Mr. Kerrigan out of pictures is a great improvement. Mr. Kerrigan in most pictures I have seen him he has appeared rather pasty faced and feminine. In real life he is as tan as can be. Really any one I should think would describe him as being a "regular guy." Conversationally he is matter of fact and voices no conceit.

"You don't look tired," I said after the usual formalities had been exchanged. "I should think you would be. It must be awfully hard work making as many towns as you have been doing on your tour and shaking hands with so many people."

"It has been hard," Mr. Kerrigan agreed, "but I liked it. I didn't intend to make as comprehensive a journey as I have, but as soon as I started I began getting requests to appear in towns I had not contemplated visiting, and I, of course, thought it was to my interest to do so. You know, this is all business. I am going to have my own company when I get back to Hollywood, and I want to make a go of it. I thought a personal handshake is the best publicity stunt there is. I don't mean by that that I don't enjoy meeting the people. I do, but—" He sighed.

"Whuffah that?" I queried.

Said Mr. Kerrigan: "I wish they didn't all want to go into moving pictures. They pester the life out of me with requests to take them back home with me and give them a chance. Young girls and old ladies frantically told me that they would give anything to go with us and try their fortunes."

"But O, you Mann act!" I laughed. Reprimed.

"That's what I had to remind those who wished to run away," he said.

Then he asked boyishly: "Whaddo they all want to know about me anyway? What questions do they ask you?"

"Well," I said, "they would know whether or not you are married. Art?"

"Not yet," deposed Mr. Kerrigan, flushing a beautiful red.

I said: "I think one great reason for your popularity has been the fact that you are said to be so good to your mother."

Quoth the secretary: "Ah! He and his mother are the greatest chums in the world. His mother would never think of letting anybody else get a breakfast for him. Other people may cook his dinners and suppers, but Mrs. Kerrigan never misses a breakfast when she is able to get up and about."

"Mother was broken hearted because she couldn't come with me on this trip," said my handsome visitor, "but she has not been well for some time and the doctor said it would be absolutely impossible for her to put up with the inconveniences of such a tour as I have been compelled to make. She writes she has been terribly lonesome, for, though there are eight of us, I am the baby."

Bryant Washburn

We then discussed Mr. Kerrigan's plans for a while. He expects to produce features adapted from books—if he can find the books. He declares he has always been at a disadvantage through having inexperienced directors. Oscar Apfel is the man he hopes to secure. Bessie Barriscale will be with Mr. Kerrigan and have her own company, he hopes.

We will be interested in seeing Mr. Kerrigan in pictures now that we know him personally, and we think that in justice to himself he will eschew flowing ties and postures and sport shirts which disclose his almost too beautiful neck. If he will only give us himself reely as he appears really there is no reason why he should not "get across."

The reason that we oftentimes repeat on photographs of the motion picture stars in various departments of the paper is that some stars have so much better press agents than others. We are flooded with photographs—and splendid ones—of the new comers, but for pictures of such people as David Powell, William S. Hart, Blanche Sweet, Gladys Hulette, Tsuri Aoki, Wallace Reid, Mabel Taliaferro, Viola Dana, Marjory Wilson, June Caprice, Bessie Love, and Bessie Barriscale we must wait or do without. There should be, we believe, a school for press agents, where they would be taught to produce not the bunk so many of them do but real live news and pictures which newspapers want.

Tom Foreman has been transferred to the Morosco studios and will play opposite Vivian Martin in her next Paramount picture.

"ASK ME!—ASK ME!—ASK ME!"

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

J. B.: Such a lovely letter! I do try to be fair. As to being afraid, I don't know just whom to be afraid of. Anyhow, I am glad you like me. I may be mistaken, but it seems to me that the first book you mention was utilized for picture purposes. Thank you so much for writing.

JANE C.: Messrs. Beaumont, Calvert, Haydon, and Ashley are directors at Essanay. Perhaps one of these is the person to whom you refer. You are entirely welcome for the service I was able to render you. It is always a pleasure to help so appreciative a correspondent.

ANNA R.: I am glad I "struck" it. Mary Pickford is five feet one inch tall. I liked her vurr' much in "The Poor Little Rich Girl." I have no information about the other actress you mention. Sorry. Write again some time.

DOROTHY: Cleo Ridgley is with Lasky, Los Angeles, Cal. I reckon you will see her in pictures if you watch out for her. Not especially.

MARGARET M.: It's nice to have received another letter from you. When I said synopsis, I meant synopsis. If the idea is a good one it is not necessary to put it in scenario form in order to have it accepted. I appreciate your words of commendation ever so much. Thanks.

R. K.: Address Hazel Dawn and Pauline Frederick, care of Famous Players, 130 W. Fifty-sixth street, New York. Tom Moore is not in the pictures at the present time. Mary Miles Minter is about 18 years old. Her sister's name is Margaret Shelby. Address them care of the American Film company, Santa Barbara, Cal.

JACK: If you will write to Bessie Eyton, care of the Selig company, Los Angeles, Cal., inclosing a quarter, I reckon she would send you her photograph. Alas, they do request it, Jack, but she doesn't have any to give away.

"EXTRA GIRL," M. H.: I think your classification of "vamps" was vurr' funny. You are more of an observer than I, for I hadn't noticed the mustache and oblique eye. Will it make me proud? It do! Thanks, my dear. Write again.

ANNA L.: I am always glad to be of service when I can. Earl Williams' middle name is Rafael. He was born in Sacramento, Cal., and was educated in Oakland Polytechnical college. He was on the stage before going into pictures. He is 5 feet 11 inches tall and weighs 176 pounds. He is not married.

K. Y. S.: No, I haven't a cold and nobody stepped on my foot. Thank you so much for your interest.

Patriotic Women Told How to Help the Country Now.

By Mme. X.

AFTER a day spent in the various war relief work shops where large bands of zealous women were toiling with fierce haste to turn out all sorts of supplies for soldiers able or disabled, such as socks, comfort kits, sweaters, bandages of all kinds, surgical pads, etc., the question came to the surface of the mind, "where are the soldiers, or whence forthcoming, to use this vast and increasing store of supplies?"

The question was partially answered the evening of that same day when, after dining at a hospitable home on East Goethe street, the company came out to go to a war relief benefit, and in the semi-obscurity of that none too well lighted street, a little band of about twenty men, some in khaki, some in mufti, were quietly drilling. A half block to the west another, more numerous troop was visible, also learning the first principles or tactics of military training out on the public highway, in the simple, earnest, unostentatious spirit that is the way of a democracy going to war. They were no part of a great military machine, driven by war overlords to fight; they were just plain, hardworking, every day American business men, probably many of them rather tired with the day's work in office or factory, who were preparing to defend at home or abroad ideals of freedom and justice which are the breath of our nostrils.

All over the city, all over this broad land, similar squads—true descendants of the minute men of 1775—at the end of a day's toil are likewise going through the same preliminary training to make a nucleus for the great army the nation needs. So the women can't overdo their end of the task which the country has undertaken. But their labors must be well directed.

No Slighting of Local Charities.

This was forcibly pointed out by Mrs. Ira Couch Wood in her capital and convincing report, given last Monday afternoon in Orchestra hall foyer, on the National League for Women's Service and on war relief work in New York, Philadelphia, and Washington. About a hundred women gathered to hear her. Mrs. George Isham presided, and among those at the meeting were Mesdames Cyrus H. McCormick, Ogden Armour, Arthur Ryerson, Joseph Coleman, R. T. Crane, Joseph Cudahy, Russell Tyson, Joseph Winterbotham, John H. Winterbotham, and Philip Schuyler Doane.

Mrs. Wood urged women to go on with whatever they were doing for home or foreign charities while waiting for enlistment in work in a nation-wide organization under government supervision, because, as she wittily said, it is easier to direct or divert a body already in motion than to arouse it to motion.

Let the community which has allowed the tender, humane, and altogether Christlike work of the Society for Mental Hygiene to fall for lack of support heed Mrs. Wood's appeal that no local philanthropy should be slighted in these stressful times. Let us sacrifice our luxuries, our ease, our leisure, rather than our home charities, to the duties and claims of the war.

Plowing the Front Lawn.

Flaunting her superior knowledge as a leading member in the Illinois Garden club in the face of those horticulturists who say that potatoes can't be grown between Diversey boulevard and Twenty-ninth street, Mrs. Walter Brewster of 1220 Lake Shore drive has had her front lawn plowed up and is proceeding to plant "Murphies" there, right on the most fashionable residence avenue west of New York City's own Fifth avenue. Should other dwellers on that famous thoroughfare follow her example Chicago would regain its early title of "garden city of the west," a distinction lost in the flames of the Chicago fire of 1871.

The plan has its esthetic possibilities, too. On "Dick" Crane's terraced lawns a foreground of large leaved, gold fruited summer squash, backed by rows of well trellised crimson tomatoes, with a sky line of tasseled green corn on the upper terrace would afford a beautiful color scheme and setting for that gray stone Tudor mansion.

The Eckhardts, Countesses, and Edward Blairs have little visible ground for planting, but Victor Lawson's majestic Georgian residence would look well rising from beds of feathery asparagus, succulent chard, and blushing beets, with an outer rim of crisp, pale green lettuce.

Ls. Verne W. Noyes, George M. Reynolds, Mrs. James O. Heyworth, James Deering, Mrs. Archibald Freer, Mrs. S. E. Barrett, and the occupants of the Franklin MacVeagh house, failing much front garden space, could devote the little they have to parsley and mint; but Mrs. Potter Palmer could rim one of the largest, finest truck gardens within the city limits on the ground that surrounds her Norman castle. While the empty block to the south, where now the festive school boys menace the passersby with out of bounds batting in exciting baseball games, affords still another space for onions, peas, beans, pumpkins, melons, carrots, artichokes, eggplant—but why go on with a list which makes the mouth water?

Thence south to Mrs. Brewster's there's no available space for even rudimentary gardening, but Mrs. Frank Logan, Mr. Hurlbert, the University school, John Root and John Holabird, Mrs. John Borden, and Fowler McCormick all have opportunities for horticulture not to be overlooked. Further south in Lincoln parkway Mrs. Cecil Clark Davis has already turned over her mother's (Mrs. John Clark) back yard to an industrious son of Italy, who is radiant at the prospect of working onoce more in "un piccolo giardino."

Simplicity to Rule.

What can be done on the city's most conspicuous parkway can also be done in every high street and bystreet. Save on gasoline and spend on the water necessary to keep your garden green. So you'll be doing your bit for your country.

Try to direct your saving so that it doesn't cripple an industry that gives work to people who would otherwise be thrown out of employment. Save on your table. This will lower the price of food and release it for people of small means.

Mrs. Bryan Lathrop is anxious to duplicate here a movement started among the rich and prominent women of Washington, who promise the keep the following pledges:

"1. No meal to exceed three courses.

"2. One meatless day a week.

"3. Simplicity in dress and entertainments."

This recommendation, or "call to arms," is signed by nine leading Washington women, Mesdames H. Blaine Beale, J. M. Carlisle, William C. Eustis, A. P. Gardner, W. M. Grinnell, Charles Hamlin, A. G. McClintock, Medill McCormick, and Miss Helen Ernst.

It is not going to be good form to make a display of food, clothes, jewels, or other possessions while the war lasts. Neither is it going to be good form to hoard the money thus saved. We are only, after two and a half years of war relief work, on the threshold of giving.

For Europe's Many Needs.

In this connection interesting reading is afforded by a pamphlet which describes some of our contributions to Europe's many needs. In this are briefly given the personnel and work of thirty-one committees. Over $10,000,000 has been raised by the committees listed, and this does not include the great C. R. B. work (committee for relief of Belgium), nor the many Italian war relief enterprises.

In the collecting and distributing of this sizable sum of money and of the many supplies for wounded and destitute the lists of names of authors of the many forms of war relief make up a roster of distinguished, public spirited men and women of which any nation might be proud. It includes such notable elders of the tribe as Joseph Choate, Charles W. Eliot, Elihu Root, Maj. Henry Higginson, Theodore Roosevelt, ex-ambassadors like Myron T. Herrick, Robert Bacon, George von L. Meyer, George T. Marye, and Henry White, and a long list of leading women which reads like the most authoritative social directory: Mesdames William K. Vanderbilt, Schuyler Van Rensselaer, Harry Payne Whitney, Willard Straight, E. H. Harriman, Peter Cooper Hewitt, Barrett Wendell, Bayard Thayer, Marshall Field, Bryan Lathrop, Potter Palmer, Barclay Warburton, Edward Stotesbury, Miss Anne Morgan—the list culled from this report could go on and on. It is quite sufficient to show where America's heart has been since Aug. 1, 1914.

That we realize that we owe our allies more aid than ever is shown by the recent tremendous increase in offers to work at the French war shop at 60 East Washington street. Under this impetus both money and supplies are running short there. To help relieve the congestion in this shop where workers crowd every day, the Casino club is offering the use of its beautiful large, green ballroom to this organization for the three summer months. Here, with windows open to the east and west, this volunteer ban can sit in spacious, cool comfort, and work at bandage making.

Another call to our sympathies will be made by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Linden Smith of Boston, both well known and popular here, when, on May 17, at the residence of Mrs. R. T. Crane, they will give a charming little pantomime skit of Mr. Smith's designing, which will be followed by a recitation by Miss Ruth Draper of "Vive la France," her masterpiece. Boy scouts in uniform will officiate and what money is raised will be devoted to the "children of the frontier" and the "fatherless children of France."

The Linden Smiths gave this same entertainment recently in New York with great success at the Arthur Curtis James', in the tapestry hung gothic hall of their new palace in Park avenue and sixty-ninth street before a large and ultra fashionable audience.

Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, Mrs. Walter Brewster, Mrs. George Isham, and the promoters of the Bandbox shop are among those most interested in organizing this coming affair.

Last Week's Musical Festival.

The musical festival last week gotten up by Frederick Stock and the Symphony Orchestra association at the Auditorium was an event of musical and social significance. If the Mahler symphony — the "pièce de résistance" of the week—was beyond the sympathy and comprehension of many, the other great works like Tschaikowsky's "Pathetic" symphony and the Wagner evening evoked much enthusiasm. The hearty appreciation of the latter program proved that if the attendance on and interest in the festival were not what had been hoped for, it was not because of the Teutonic source of the music, but because of a good deal of not unnatural preoccupation in the thoughts of the community, and also, it must be admitted, because of a not very effective preliminary publicity campaign.

By the way, when the orchestra plays our national anthem, which brings us all to our feet, why can't the music makers rise, too? All, except perhaps the cellists, can play just as well standing. In Germany the military bands play even on horseback. It would increase the effect immensely.

The playing and singing of "The Star Spangled Banner," with the 150 musical instruments and 850 trained voices leading the chanting assemblage, gave patriotic satisfaction to the Auditorium audiences last week.

Discord in Boston's Orchestra.

Chicago is not yet in Boston's plight, where, owing to clash of national sympathies, the future of the Boston Symphony orchestra, hitherto considered Boston's most cherished institution, is seriously menaced. The orchestra's most generous supporter, the man whose name is most closely linked with its growth and stability is Maj. Henry Higginson. Since the beginning of the war he has been increasingly outspoken in his support of the allies and condemnation of the Teutonic powers. It is not to be wondered at that this attitude developed antagonism among the members of the orchestra, practically all of whom, from Herr Mück, the leader, down, are German.

The William B. Hale's of Winnetka are somewhat at sea as to their summer plans. Mr. Hale has recently given up his fine professional position and prospects here to go into the employ of the government at Washington, feeling that in this way he can best serve his country. Whether Mrs. Hale will continue to occupy their attractive new home on the eastern confines of the Skokie remains to be seen. The Arthur Cables of Glencoe are leaving their attractive home so that Mr. Cable can go into government service at Washington.

The two most popular and populous places in this part of the world this summer will be Fort Sheridan and the Great Lakes Naval Training station. After May 8 the maidens of the town will have to dance together, for most of their dance partners will be at one or the other of these training camps.

The officers in charge of the drills there will either have to barricade these camps with electrically charged barbed wire or surround them with trenches manned with the Lewis machine guns. Otherwise the budding warriors will be overwhelmed with visitors and the attention of families and friends. These would-be intruders will have to learn that war, or training for war, is a highly specialized business and cannot be mixed up with social doings and pleasures. So, kind friends and doting relatives, don't make necessary "Keep off the grounds," or "No admittance except on business" signs at either camp.

Winstons to Build.

A brief survey of social matters not directly connected with the war gives an opportunity to chronicle the fact that the Bertram Winstons, after I don't know how many years' residence in an apartment in Lincoln parkway, are going to build a house for their own occupancy in East Delaware place, immediately adjoining the Casino club on the east. This will give them, without leaving home, a share in the music with which the Casino frequently entertains its members.

The George Higginsons, who have rented their country place, "Meadow Farm," to the Inderriedens, have taken a cottage at Lenox, Mass., where they will domicile their two daughters, the Misses Theresa and Lee Higginson, while they themselves, when not at Lenox, will occupy a small house at Winnetka.

The Joseph G. Colemans will spend the summer in Santa Barbara, Cal., while their son, Loring Coleman, and his bride will occupy their Rush street house. The Hobart Chatfield-Taylors are planning to stay in their new house at Santa Barbara, putting their Lake Forest residence, the old C. B. Farwell place, on the market for a summer tenant.

It is reported that most of the men withdrew their deposits from Maj. Higginson's bank and that, when he invited Herr and Frau Mück to dinner lately the latter responded that it would be impossible for her husband and herself to accept the hospitality of one who openly expressed the sentiments Maj. Higginson did about her nation. And now the doughty major threatens to withdraw entirely his support from the orchestra next season—which means there may be no music in Boston the coming year—a tragedy for that esthetic community the extent of which it is hard to overestimate.

Boston and Chicago have been so often united to each other by the intermarriage of the youth of the two cities that the noon wedding tomorrow at Trinity church of Miss Christine Snelling of Boston to Loring Wilkins Coleman of Chicago is merely another link in the chain that binds the city by the sea to the city by the lake. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, the parents of the bridegroom, are the only members of his family who will be present at his marriage.

This wedding has been hastened by the present conditions of the country. From the gay and elaborate affair planned for June it has been changed to the simple, quiet affair of tomorrow. The ceremony will be followed by a breakfast at the home of the bride's mother and stepfather, the Russell Green Fessendens, when only relations and most intimate friends will be present. To be sure, there are said to be 145 relations of the lovely, young, blonde bride eligible for an invitation, so it won't be such a small gathering after all.

Good Shepherd Auxiliary Plans Benefit Concert

AT THE Auditorium theater this evening there will be a benefit concert under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the House of the Good Shepherd. Among the officers of the auxiliary are Mrs. Richmond Dean, president; Mrs. Archibald Hodge, treasurer; Mrs. Joseph W. Ingalls, secretary, and Dr. Anna Dwyer, Mrs. A. Hamilton Lamm, Mrs. Edward Glass, and Mrs. Michael Kanally.

The House of the Good Shepherd was founded in 1859 for the shelter and reformation of wayward girls. At the present time there are 420 inmates. Insane girls are not accepted, but there are no other restrictions. No restriction is made as to the creed of the applicant. If she is a Roman Catholic she receives instruction in that religion. If not, she is not forced to take part in the religious life of the institution.

Girls are committed from the Juvenile and Municipal courts.

There are two departments to the home, the preventive and the reformatory. Girls in the two departments never mingle. One sister alone inquires the history of the girl as she enters and not even the other sisters are acquainted with her past.

There are two classes of sisters at the home of the Good Shepherd, the regular sisters of the order and the Magdalens. The regular sisters wear white and the Magdalenes, who are women who have reformed of their waywardness and have desired to enter a sisterhood, are dressed in brown.

The outside work of the home is carried on by the Big Sisters and the Ladies' auxiliary. The Big Sisters have just been organized to do follow up work in caring for the girls after they leave the shelter of the home and the auxiliary helps with the maintenance by annual dues and by getting up special entertainments like tonight's concert for the benefit of the work. The city used to contribute to the support of the shelter, but for a year it has contributed nothing. The only other sources of income of the home are the industries which it carries on of fine laundry work, sewing of all kinds, embroidering, and the making of delicate lingerie.

Patriotism to Be Part of Bible School Course.

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

PATRIOTISM and civic help will be among the cardinal virtues inculcated in the teaching of the Federated Daily Vacation Bible schools for which active preparation is now being made. The federated schools number fifty, having a membership of 10,000 pupils, coming from the following denominations: Baptist, Congregational, Disciples or Christian, Methodist Episcopal, Protestant Episcopal, United Presbyterian, and the schools of the Chicago Boys' club.

The patriotic teaching includes a daily salute to the flag, the singing of patriotic songs, and special instruction in the duty of loyalty to the government. # About Music and Musicians

By Frederick Donaghey.

CAMPANINI, explaining to the newspapers there his reasons for undertaking a season in New York with the Chicago company, says that a desire to crush the Metropolitan is not one of them; but the pecunious pantatas of that establishment are incredulous, say so, and show their enmity toward his emprise. It seems that, back in the days when arrangements were made for the withdrawal from the Chicago concern of the Metropolitan's stockholders, a compact was made that the Alleghenies should define Farthest East for Campanini, and that equity was involved in the bond by the Metropolitan's agreeing to keep on the other side of the line. Campanini's offense is the greater because he desires to exhibit in Philadelphia and Boston, also: the former does well by the Metropolitan, which sends a cast over once a week; while Boston, despite its traditional objection to paying for tickets for anything costing more than ten cents for admission, is regarded as a reasonable prospect for the future if it be kept without opera for a season or two.

The opera-house in which Campanini plans to perform for four weeks, following his Chicago season, is the Lexington: it was put together by Oscar Hammerstein in the belief that the Metropolitan could not legally prevent him from resuming competition, despite a written contract that he would not. The consideration was that the Metropolitan took over some of his obligations, including a pastiche opera-house he built in Philadelphia. Among the tales told of Campanini's difficulties with Wall Street since he announced the invasion is one of the Metropolitan millionaire's taking-over a monstrous mortgage on the Lexington, and compelling him to pay the accrued interest thereon, as well as a full year's rent. Less credible is a second, about their threatening to send Caruso and the best of his associates to Chicago to sing in opposition to the Auditorium season.

Campanini's plan for New York is to ask six dollars for the best seats; that is what the Metropolitan has been charging for two years.

Boston, in narrative, is a city of deep musical culture; but it seems that the amiable almoner of the orchestra which carries the city's name is tired of making up deficits. One of its newspapers, the Post, recently explained that it is useless for anybody to seek to give opera there for more than three dollars a seat.

The Baner-Gabrilowitsch recital, next Sunday, will be in the Blackstone Theater, instead of in the Illinois, hitherto advertised.

Mabel Garrison, whose singing was a striking and lovely feature of the venture with the Mahler symphony, is not to return this summer to Ravinia Park: other engagements made it possible for the management to get her for four weeks only; and the routine there does not easily accommodate singers who do not fit into the scheme of opera for the season of ten weeks.

Egon Pollak has been reengaged by Campanini for the Opera. So has Sturani, who did well this season with his share of the Italian répertoire: notably, with "Francesca."

Galli-Curci, ill for some days, found it necessary to cancel a number of recent concert-dates in the Middle-West.

Max Rabinoff ended the season of his Boston-National company a week ago in Milwaukee, where the attendance was so meager that he was doubtful of his ability to go through with the engagement. He says he will revive the venture next season. One of his principal singers, Maggie Teyte, is listed for an autumn recital in Chicago.

"What," asks Leonard Liebling in the Musical Courier, "is the use of writing symphony when one [and maybe more than one] can write 'Poor Butterfly'? That undeniably-popular tune netted $25,000 in composers' royalties for three months, ending April 1."

Richard Strauss' new opera, "The Woman Without a Shadow," is understood to be on the Metropolitan's tentative list for next season.

Lucy Gates and some others recently exhumed Offenbach's "La Chanson de Fortunio" for the festivities of the MacDowell Club of New York.

Tamara Swirskaia, whose dancing was the comic staple of this season's Opera, is again involved in one of the New York Winter Garden's extravaganzas. They accept her down there as "the eminent exponent of Russian dancing."

Jewish music is to be the sole feature of a concert on Thursday night in New York, with Ernest Bloch's symphony of "Israel" featured. Bodansky, of the Metropolitan, will conduct; and Mélanie Kurt and Carl Braun will be among the singers.

Farrar's Thaïs withstood the columns of type in description of its absurdity, and figured in the final weeks of the Metropolitan's New York season as one of her best cards.

The cabaret crowd in New York is not of the belief that Fritzi Scheff, although she gets fifteen hundred dollars a week, is just what they like with their midnight food. She is, of course, singing "Kiss Me!" from "Mlle. Modiste."

Puccini's new opera, "Rondine," is partitioned, in its principal parts, for two tenors and two sopranos vis-à-vis. It has been mounted at Monte Carlo. The scene is Paris in the Second Empire; and the argument appears to be a variant of the "Camille"-"La Traviata" story.

Rosa Raisa, being told that her father is on his way hither from Russia, has turned down the opportunity to sing in Buehos Aires, where she is as much of an idol as Caruso, himself.

Atlanta raised a guarantee of $70,000 for last week's visit of the Metropolitan Opera.

The Ballet Russe has been performing in Rome. American importers are believed to be "off" the outfit, as a result of its showing in two seasons here.

Isadora Duncan, whose persistence is withered by neither age nor avoirdupois has, since the Congress decided that we are in a state of war, been doing better at the box-office as a result of dancing to the Marseillaise and wrapping herself in the American flag.

John McCormack will hereafter use no New York auditorium other than the Hippodrome: none of the others holds enough.

NEW YORK SOCIETY By MME. Y

Old Astor Home Scene of Many Charity Fetes

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—A woman of the smart set remarked in my presence last week, "Isn't it nice to have the old Astor house at 840 Fifth avenue a social center?" I resented the question a little, having been inside the mansion a number of times when the lovely young woman who as the last Mrs. John Jacob Astor was its mistress. There were a great many of the politest of the polite present on all of those occasions, and always it was for something worthy indeed.

Somehow the woman's question of last week implied that not only could any one who was any one go to the old house under its former mistress, but that she never enriched charity in any way—indeed, that one could not enrich charity in any way in that house so long as it was under the control of the girl from Brooklyn who married the late head of the great house.

This is neither here nor there, however, and what I started to say was that certainly the polite world is having ample chance to avail itself of entrance into the most distinguished dwelling in America and leave its money there. Mrs. Vincent Astor literally entertains every few minutes. That is to say, she is always "opening her house" for some cause or other—for the society for washing and sprucing up generally the emigrant, for the relief of sick babies, and dear knows what all.

Helping in War Relief.

Now she is opening it for one kind of war relief and another, and if I were a fashionable woman making an exclamation it would not be on the subject of the smart set returning into their old haunt, but on the strange phenomena of that historic home of fashion, that domicile of the only autocrat our smart set has ever known now being the scene of a different sort of entertainment.

The American house with a fountain in it, with a royal dining room, and with a staircase that you would say only a duchess could do justice to in descending is now the scene of benefits for war. That other Mrs. Astor, mother of the late master of the house, little dreamed when she came slowly, imperiously down those stairs, acknowledging her guests with a queen's remote notice, and doing all she could to establish a hierarchy, a nobility in this country—little did she dream that her grandchildren would be giving a fête there to raise funds to help preserve democracy and spread it over the world. Yet that is what happened last week, and that is what will happen again.

The Vincent Astors are helping to raise funds for the war even to the extent of turning over their ancestral home to the end of bringing in some dollars from those who wish to see, from those who wish to lounge in the home of the most aristocratic of American families. They opened the house for two benefits within a fortnight of one another.

Famous Polo Player Killed.

Members of our polo club are experiencing a new sensation. Word has just been received here that Capt. H. Herbert Wilson has been killed in action. He was a member of the British team who came over and played valiantly against our men in Hempstead in 1911. Everybody admired his work because, as they said, he was so deadly accurate in his shots.

Other men from the British team who have been over here have been reported dead since the war broke out and always the news is received with sadness by their erstwhile opponents of America, but this news has seemed nearer, more ominous than the other deaths, because it is the first to be reported since war was declared by our own country. It brings up closely to our own polo players the truth that they, too, will one of these days be under fire and in great peril. For the polo team is expecting to go almost to a man. Among those ready to drop their polo mallets for a bayonet are Robert Low Bacon, Joseph P. Grace, William Russell Grace, Devereux Milburn Jr., Morgan Grace, Louis E. Stoddard, James Park, and Harry L. Nicholls, master of the Meadowbrook hounds.

PERSONALS

Mr. and Mrs. Honoré Palmer, who have been in Florida for about two months, are expected home soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Blair and their daughter, Anita, returned to the city last week. They have been spending a few weeks on the Virginia coast.

John Jay Borland o. 2616 Prairie avenue returned last Sunday from an extended southern trip.

Wartime suggestions for reducing the cost of summering have had one most delightful outcome—that of the decision of many of those who have been in the habit of going far from Chicago to change their habit and put up inexpensive bungalows on the sands of the dunes, which are attracting much attention these days because of the great historical pageant to be given there May 30 and June 3. Upon the picturesque and primitive slopes of the mile-wide beach country along the southernmost shores of Lake Michigan in northern Indiana are being built a number of "huts" which will be the scene of many week-end and vacation parties through the summer. Among those who are planning to spend much time in their dunes abodes at the edge of the lake are Edgar Lee Masters, the Chicago poet, who with his wife and two little daughters visits the district even during the winter, which is said by dunes lovers to be the ideal season for visiting its hilly wastes; Mr. and Mrs. A. Stamford White, Mrs. J. W. A. Young, whose house parties there are famous; Eames MacVeagh, the eligible but elusive bachelor of Chicago society; and Earl Reed, the etcher.

The most dreaded feast day (movable) of the year (for those who observe it) is at hand, and on Tuesday the residence of many of our most exclusive families will be right out on some cubstone, where all their guarded treasures may be regarded by the vulgar passerby. Among those who are moving on that day to Lake Forest for the summer are Mr. and Mrs. Philip D. Armour III., Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Comes, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Yager, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McBirney Johnston, Mrs. Darius Miller, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Carry.

Mrs. William H. Bush of 1538 North State parkway is again at home after a winter in California and a recent trip east.

Miss Lolita Armour, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Ogden Armour of 3724 South Michigan avenue, who has been in Santa Barbara, Cal., for the late winter and early spring, returned home last week and will divide her time between Red Cross work and her interests in her country home in Lake Forest.

Mr. and Mrs. John R. Thompson of 4415 Grand boulevard will give a dinner dance on Tuesday evening at the South Shore Country club, at which there are to be about 100 guests.

Mrs. John A. Stevenson of 52 East Cedar street is at home after a winter's stay in Pinehurst, N. C.

Among the Chicagoans who are at French Lick Springs, Ind., are Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Townsend and the Misses Townsend, Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Austin, Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Foley, Miss Alice Conway, A. Starr Best, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Bushnell, and Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Wilson.

A week old baby boy is a new resident of the home of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Morrisson of 719 Rush street. His given name is to be James Lord.

Mr. and Mrs. John Herbert Ware of 874 Rush street are in the east for a two weeks' visit. They went to New Haven to visit their son, John Herbert Ware Jr., at Yale, and afterward they will go to Vineyard Haven, Mass., to their summer place.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hunter Garaghty of 999 Lake Shore drive, with their daughter, Miss Louise M. Garaghty, who have been passing the winter in Florida and California, returned home last week. They will stay at the Virginia hotel until they leave for the country.

Mrs. Walter L. Peck of the Blackstone hotel and her sister, Mrs. William Robertson Page, will pass the summer in Camden, Me.

Mrs. A. T. Whiting and Miss Elisabeth Whiting of 43 Cedar street have returned to their apartment.

Mr. and Mrs. Mayer D. Rosenbach have returned from a three months' trip to southern California and expect soon to leave for French Lick Springs.

Mr. and Mrs. John Fornaciari of 6337 Normal boulevard have as their guests their daughter, Mrs. Harry T. Hennessy, and her baby daughter, Alice.

Mr. and Mrs. James A. Sackley of 2949 Washington boulevard have as their guest, Miss Anna Fesenmeier of Baltimore, Md.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Harrington of Gary place left on Thursday evening for their ranch in southern California, which they will make their permanent home.

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Bliss and Col. E. R. Bliss have taken an apartment at 6350 South Shore boulevard.

Mr. and Mrs. George Raymond Jenkins of 5463 Blackstone avenue are at Virginia Hot Springs.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Pope of the Auditorium hotel are at Excelsior Springs, Mo.

Zuloaga Among New Exhibits at Art Institute

CHICAGOANS will view a number of different exhibits at the Art Institute this week, all newly arrived and all distinctive in their way.

Of them all, Zuloaga deserves attention first, for he is considered by many to be the greatest living painter in the world. Zuloaga is Spanish through and through. He knows the Spanish character in every phase.

Insatiate in his wanderings over the rugged surfaces of his native peninsula, he still travels restlessly about. He owns no regular studio, though several cities claim him as their own. In a sunlit courtyard or a sloping sierra side or hidden in a savage, inaccessible corner of the rocky kingdom, he sets his easel according to the spirit of the moment and finds material wherever his eyes chance to rest.

The masterly impersonations you will see on his canvases he has culled first hand from incidents and episodes. He is a faithful follower of the great Velazquez in basing his art on actual observation. His faces will remind you of those you have seen in Spanish art for ages. There are profiles that are Cesarean, dusky beauties that are saracenic, erect cavaliers whose insolent grace has made them the marvel of many a battlefield in the old days.

From the beginning real Spanish art has known but two inspirations. One of them is the church and the other the country. Zuloaga, possessing little of the spiritual in his makeup, has never dealt with sacred themes. The diversions and occupations of quotidian existence have appealed to him more. All types find faithful rendering from his brush. He has contributed much to the pictured treasury of human emotions, and his people seem actually to feel on the canvas.

Grave seignors still walk the streets of Madrid, muffled in dark cloaks. Zuloaga paints them darkly. Pallid ascetics still live in the depths of the Andalusian mountains. Zuloaga in their rendering loses no iota of their character.

His men are the superlatively masculine beings of Spanish life—the matadors, the toreadors, the picadors. His women, more frequent than his men, are remarkable for their beauty of coloring and their magnetic animalism. All layers of society have been covered by him. Some women you will see of social prominence and standing. Others you observe whom he has wrested from the savage depths of passion and hatred, which are always seething at the roots of Spanish life.

With Sorolla and Bilbao and a few others, Zuloaga has been instrumental in bringing Spanish painting back from the dreary, spectacular wastes where it meandered after the death of Goya. They are all the true children of "La Gloriosa," that revolution of '68, from which Spanish regeneration, politically, commercially, and artistically, commenced.

You may miss in Zuloaga the magnificent and vitality and freshness of Sorolla. Sorolla kept in close touch with nature, and the brisk sea winds were ever revivifying his spirit. Sometimes one feels that Zuloaga stands too close to the doors of that hot prison house of passion. And yet Spanish life and character is touched with tense passionateness. The cool northerner at times may find the hot winds a little stifling. But there is graphic verity in them.

Zuloaga is represented in nearly all of the large museums of Europe and in many art galleries of America. In the exhibit at the institute will be seen many of his best known and finest pieces.

There is to be his "Philosopher," a particularly strong portrait, and the sort of work he is fond of doing. Then there is his "Bull Fighter," his "Future Idols," his portrait of the Countess of Noailles, a most seductive woman of society, and his "Women on a Balony." These canvases of his show their primitive strength even in the black and white prints of an advance catalogue. When you see them on the canvas you will be doubly impressed with their force, their passion, their Celtic fatalism.

There opened yesterday at the institute an exhibition of Whistleriana. Walter Brewster has loaned his collection till June 4 and the collection contains everything Whistler wrote and almost all of the books ever illustrated by him.

On the mainfloor of the institute annex Abram Poole has a collection of war posters, American and French, which he has hung there for a short time. Bastien has some vigorous pieces of work and so has Joan Cocteau. In the hall just outside the galleries there are four American recruiting posters by Allen Philbrick, including the "Enlist" idea, and also the "Hoe for Your Country" idea.

The Art institute is rejoicing over the gift of $5,000 which has been bequeathed to it through the will of the late Julius Lowenthal. Mr. Lowenthal provided that a certain part of his estate be set aside for philanthropic purposes at the discretion of his wife, and she apportioned this amount to the institute in memory of her husband.

On Friday there is to be an exhibition of paintings by De Witt Marshall opening at the institute, which will last until June 11. On this same day the Rotary exhibition of the American Water Color society will open at the institute, the exhibition of miniatures, and also the annual exhibition of the Art Students' league.

The exhibit by Chester Leich, which opens this week, will consist of drawings and etchings. Leich was born in this country, but he has spent a large part of his life abroad. He has an extremely good likeness of himself done in charcoal in his collection.

Stanislaus Szuzalski is well known to Chicagoans for his peculiar type of artistic creativeness. He will also have an exhibit at the institute commencing next Saturday.

The patriotic competition for artists, musicians, and poets of the United States is now on at the National Arts club in New York. Every resident of the United States and every citizen of this country, no matter where he may be at present, is eligible to this contest. All articles submitted must be in the hands of the National Arts club defense committee, Gramercy park, New York, by 5 p. m. on May 31.

There is to be a prize of $500 for the best design for a valor medal to be given any person serving in the United States army or navy who distinguishes himself by any conspicuous act of bravery. Then, too, there is $250 for the best American patriotic poem and $250 for the best music for an American patriotic song.

All rights of ownership in the poem, design, or song are given up to the National Arts club with the acceptance by that society of the articles submitted. The awards are to be announced on Memorial day, and it is said that already there have been many manuscripts and designs received at the club's headquarters.

The paintings by Leon Bakst will remain at the Arts club this entire week. The exhibit which is to follow Bakst has not been announced.

Vaudeville Wit

RIALTO.

Morris and Beaseley:

"Were there any letters in the post-office for you?"

"Yes, one letter from my best fellow. I must read what he has to say. It reads: 'Friend Sweetheart: Please excuse my not coming to call on you last night, as I fell in the mud. By doing the same you will oblige me greatly. WILLIE JONES.'"

"What is your station in life, anyhow?"

"The police station most of the time."

"The last time you were arrested did you offer any resistance?"

"Only a dollar, and the cop wouldn't take it."

"Did you plead guilty?"

"No, mum."

"Not guilty?"

"No, mum."

"Then what did you plead?"

"Insanity."

"You should always remember that honesty is the best policy."

"So it is, mum. Last week I stole a dog and nobody would give me over 50 cents for him, so, like an honest man, I took him back to the lady what owned him, and she gave me $5."

"I think you're a crook."

"No, mum; I'm an inventor."

"What did you ever invent?"

"Almshouse limburger."

"What kind of limburger is almshouse limburger?"

"That's limburger without a cent."

"You're not as big a fool as I thought you were."

"Ah, thank you, lady."

"No, you're a bigger one. I don't think you ever did an honest day's work in your life."

"I worked for Carrie Nation while she was building a dam, and after she had finished building the dam a man offered to give her a saloon for it."

"And what did Carrie say?"

"Carrie said she wouldn't give a dam for the finest saloon on earth."

Herbert and Dennis:

"What's the matter with you?"

"I went up Clark street just now to get a cigar and a clumsy idiot stepped on my fingers."

"I suppose you enjoy good cigars?"

"Yes, indeed; I'm very fond of them."

"Have you ever smoked a quarter cigar?"

"I've even smoked 'em closer than that."

McVICKER'S.

Hoey and Lee:

"It's been a long time since I last saw you, colonel. We have twins in the family now."

"Ah — congratulations, and many happy returns."

"You are going to have money left you."

"Glad to hear it. I've only got $2 to my name."

"Well, after paying me you will have a dollar left you."

"Did your watch stop when it dropped on the floor?"

"Sure. Did you think it would go through?"

"I understand you are separated from your wife."

"Yes."

"Tell me all about it. What did you do?"

"Nothing. She died."

"What's the difference between a pretty girl's mouth and a couple of impertinent country fellows?"

"I give up."

"One is a pair of ruby lips and the other a pair of lippy rubes."

"They say that famous marine artist was once a plain farmer's boy. I wonder where he developed his talent?"

"Probably drawing water on the farm."

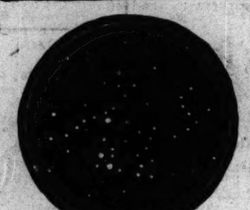
SKY MAP OF STARS NEAR THE PRAECEPE CLUSTER. DRAWINGS by E.F. MAXWELL



THE PRAECEPE CLUSTER IN AN OPERA GLASS

STAR CLUSTERS.

THE Præsepe star cluster is one of the interesting opera glass spectacles of the sky. To the unaided eye it looks like a patch of cloud. With the aid of an opera glass the eyes see it as a swarm of jewel points.

The map above will give a practical means of locating the cluster, at least will indicate the region of the heavens in which to look for it. The Great Bear, with the Big Dipper, the Sickle, with its radiant Regulus, Saturn, and the Twins, Castor and Pollus, define the field within which to look for the Præsepe cluster. It lies midway between Saturn and the Sickle.

Stars are not uniformly scattered throughout the sky, but to our vision appear in clusters of many varieties. Some of them contain enormous numbers of stars, some have remarkable form, some remarkable brilliance.

A cluster may have the appearance of a nebula. There is a brilliant cluster in the sword handle of Perseus and a striking one of globular form in the constellation of Hercules.

When Galileo first turned the first telescope upon the Præsepe cluster he saw to his amazement that what had always before been a misty patch of starlight transformed into a gleaming mass of sparkling stars. It is related that he had entertained the idea of counting the stars in the sky, not at all impossible if only the 7,000 visible to our naked eyes are considered, but after he counted thirty-four in one field in the Præsepe where none had been seen before, and many other parts of the sky like it, he decided to devote his attention to something which he might hope to live to see finished.

It might be added that the stars have since been counted down to faint magnitudes. There are more than 100,000,000 within the reach of the best modern telescopes. The method of counting employed is to set the telescope rigidly and count all the stars which pass within a certain narrow zone. The next night the telescope is moved slightly and the process repeated. Counting stars is a cold, tedious and often thankless task involving years of labor.

LINES TO AN OLD SCHOOLMATE.
(Dedicated to Sheridan McCabe.)

My old schoolmate is sick today,
Back home here in our little town,
And though around me children play,
And lilac blooms are tumbling down,
And blossoms spray the apple bough,
And I can hear the honey bee,
Somehow my heart is heavy now,
It doesn't seem like spring to me.

In spring we used to hook from school
And fish all day in Sugar crick
Beside some cool and yellow pool
Where the grass was long and the willows thick,
Or we'd hunt frogs, would Sherd and I,
And cook their legs in meal, you see,
But now he's sick—I guess that's why
It doesn't seem like spring to me.

If we could only tramp the hills
Together as we used to do,
Or dream beside the pleasant rills,
I guess I wouldn't feel so blue;
But though the fields are green and gay
With birds to hear and blooms to see,
My boyhood pal is sick today—
It doesn't seem like spring to me.

To Understand "Nemo Week's" Significance You Must Visit Our Corset Store

Third Floor—Center

It is fourteen years ago that "Nemo Week" was inaugurated and today, just as then, the most comprehensive display of Nemo corsets in all America is to be found in our corset store. Then Nemo corsets had a limited clientele—today Nemo corsets are to be had in any dry goods or department store of consequence in America. We have retained our leadership solely on the service we render, for, whether they be Nemo corsets or any other, correct fitting service is of vital importance to every woman, and through our efforts thousands of women now realize the vast difference between "just buying a corset" and taking advantage of our wonderful fitting service, which has been developed through the aid of the Nemo Hygienic Fashion Institute, until today it has the endorsement of the foremost physicians as well as modistes in Chicago, and for this fitting service no extra charge is made. Nemo corsets are foremost in providing this fitting service with the correct corsets —for the woman who wants to reduce.

—for the woman who is slender.
—for the woman of medium build.
—for the woman who is active in outdoor sports.
—for the business woman.
—for the woman who exercises.
—for the woman who has backache.
—for young housewives.
—for young mothers.
—for the woman who dances.
—for the woman who sews.

In a general way you will find that there are three types of Nemo corsets, preventive, controlling and corrective. Most women should wear the Nemo preventive corset—they would find it easier to keep youthful lines, as it poises the body correctly. Our corsetieres will adjust your corset so it fits the figure closely—the waist slightly drawn in, the curve over the hip a shade freer—not suppressed—the skirt long enough to control the flesh of the thigh, with the bones of the back close to the spine, where they are a help to the figure instead of extended and pressing on the kidneys, causing serious discomfort.

The corrective corset belongs to large women and to women whose figures have grown shapeless from being improperly corseted. Remember our corsetieres are all graduates of the Nemo Hygienic Fashion Institute. They have studied the anatomy of the body and know that the right Nemo Corset for a stout woman will distribute the soft flesh and reduce it by means of heavier boning, rubber gores, and pressure in such places as it can be brought to bear safely.

The "Nemo Week Special" this year is a combination back-resting and self-reducing corset that has been especially designed to meet the needs of the average stout figure—made as illustrated with the celebrated Nemo self-reducing strap that supports and reduces a too prominent abdomen, and in addition has the new back-resting device, which effectively relieves and prevents backache by supporting and strengthening tired back muscles and induces a healthful poise. Did you ever straighten up and brace your hands at the small of your back when tired? That is what the back-resting device does. Sizes 22 to 36, at..... 3.50

Nemo corset, style 511. A model perfectly adapted for that large class of women who do not particularly require abdominal reduction, but who desire extreme general reduction below the waist line, very low bust, sizes to 36, at ..... 5.00

Nemo corset, style 512, as illustrated, for the figure with bulging thighs, reduces them to their proper size and makes the figure look symmetrical. There are three different sections of rubber in the skirt over the thighs, so arranged that they hold the bulging flesh firmly. When seated this elastic spreads, acting as a massage on fat. Try it and see if the bulge does not disappear. Sizes 22 to 36, at..... 5.00

STRANGLED BY RED TAPE.

Only a few persons in Chicago yet understand the importance of our local board of national defense. Most people will think it a good thing, something which will help win the war perhaps, but they do not yet suspect that such organization is indispensable to winning the war.

Popularly we do not understand the significance of this movement yet. We do not understand it because the popular idea of creating an army does not yet go one thought beyond getting men. Sign up a million or so men, the notion is, and our troubles will be over. We are defended. That is as far as popular thought has gone.

What is going to become of these men who have signed up in one way or another has not yet concerned us. We take it for granted that some sort of system will transform civilians in civilian clothes into soldiers with soldiers' clothes. From somewhere in the United States are going to come blankets to cover the soldiers and food for them to eat.

That is what the English public thought the first months of the war. The government called for men. The men went, taking it for granted that the army officials would be able to take care of them and make them into soldiers capable of driving the Germans out of France.

The first check to their enthusiasm was the discovery that they must wait in line for hours and hours because the recruiting formalities, adjusted to peace time, could not be gone through fast enough. Those who got in found that there was no place to put them. There were no uniforms to put them into. There were no blankets to keep them warm, and there were no cooks who could make the army ration into presentable meals.

When they finally got to France they found that they were being defeated and slaughtered because they did not have enough ammunition nor enough equipment of any sort. When Lord Northcliffe told the English public what was happening to their sons in France the people would not believe him at first. They wanted to hang him. Now they think of him as a savior of their sons.

This entire process is going to be repeated in the United States. It is happening now. Men of the Sixth Illinois infantry, called out for guard service, shivered for days and then many of them came down with pneumonia. One died.

Some one did not know how to make out the proper sort of blanks. Or there were no blanks at hand.

Blanks to a supply officer are more important in the eye of our army system than blankets to soldiers. Absence of blanks means absence of blankets. Absence of blanks will mean absence of ammunition and absence of food.

The American army has a system of supply. So had the English army. It works fairly well in peace times, and so did the English system work in peace time. The Britishers tried desperately to make it work in war time. All it did was work hardship.

Army officials are attempting, like the British, desperately, to supply the new army in the old way. They are assigning officers to the job of buying supplies.

They do not teach army officers the dry goods business at West Point. They do not teach them very much besides the business of soldiering. That is quite enough for any man to learn. But the army assigns soldiers to buy dry goods. It assigns soldiers to buy food.

It takes a line officer and puts him to work learning army business methods—which went out of date long before the cavalry charge—and then it expects him to apply his army business knowledge to American business conditions. And the two methods are not even fourth cousins.

It is a silly arrangement. It is worse than silly; it is criminally stupid. But we must not imagine for an instant that the army supply departments will see it that way. It will take American lives to clear the brains of bureaucrats at Washington. The Sixth infantry of Illinois was probably not the first to be sacrificed. It won't be the last.

Red tape is going to have for this country a new and terrible significance. It is going to be colored with good American blood. It is going to mean to us wasted lives and widows.

The movement to organize business behind our army and apply business methods to its administration is only less important than possessing an army.

MODIFIED DRINKING.

There is a rational objection to prohibition on the ground that it endeavors to create character by statute rather than to permit it to be the incarnation of moral selection. Theories, however valid, nearly always have to accept modification, and modification is flexible. We do not permit character to be developed by selection between monogamy and polygamy but take that choice away by law. We also remove property rights from the operation of the moral selection of the person who might prefer the possession of other people's goods to the possession of his own character for honesty.

The use of alcohol is a matter of personal habit which brings controversy to violent issue between people who believe in making every one conform and people who believe that the user of liquor has a right to make his own choice, regardless of consequences to himself or to others. If he hurts others he can be punished.

There is a compromise bill in the Illinois legislature which would prohibit the use of intoxicants containing more than 10 per cent of alcohol and would allow the use of the milder intoxicants. We believe that it would knock the indefensible features out of the America saloon—if it were enforced—and that it would be a valuable aid to temperance.

The entire country may be dry soon enough. Chicago, we imagine, will be one of the last places to give up its tipple. Meanwhile here is a way of making an experiment in the interest of sobriety. It ought to put the shot of booze out of business.

FUNERAL BAKED MEATS.

It would be a miserable finish for the American nation to die in a bake oven, cremated with legs of lamb, fat fowls, and prime roasts, basted in its own juices and sizzling in its own fats.

We may not be in danger of dying in and for the flesh pots, but we are in danger of letting the stomach weaken the nation. An extravagant table in these days is certainly supplied with funeral baked meats.

These are days for Don Quixote, who could be courageous, soulful, happy, and courteous on bread and onions, and not for Sancho Panza, who needed for the sustenance of his pleasantly philosophic soul a few pullets and hares out of the caldron until he could get a really satisfying meal of roasts and sweets.

The United States has an internal enemy. It is in nearly every citizen. It is expressed in his appetite. We might go dining to damnation, browsing over the land as if we were grasshoppers and leaving it as bare as if grasshoppers had passed over it.

The nation must save, economize, watch its small expenditures, abandon its large ones, cut down on clothes and food, limit what is set on the table, increase what is raised for the table.

Any family can help by giving up things for which money has been spent, but which can be done without. Many families may help by turning the back yard or a vacant lot into a produce garden.

Money will be needed. Food may be wanted. The Germans have turned in their jewelry. They have turned in their copper kettles and ripped off their copper roofs. They do without fats and sugar. They are without coffee. The French are without coal. The English are on meatless days and without vegetables.

Production here must be stimulated and waste avoided. The family that continues to live as it did when no danger threatened is hurting the nation and the prospects of the allies. They are our allies now and they are suffering for the lack of things which we waste.

The great war loans which are to be offered need your money. The great food supply which is to be replenished needs your help. War is not selective. It is universal. It will touch or ought to touch every American family. It ought to reach every American conscience. It ought to stimulate every American to effort and self-sacrifice.

To some Americans it will be given to help only by close regulation of their personal habits and by establishing a new regimen of life.

That is the smallest sacrifice which can be asked of an American when his nation goes to war. Thrift is the smallest service which can be demanded. It is a service which every American can give and give now.

GERMAN MUSIC.

An unpleasant expression of hysteria is the suggestion that German music be blacklisted. We assume that this logic would cover all things German—German literature, German science, German medicine, German food, German customs—the Christmas tree, for example.

Pacifists might well cite this as one of the idiocies of war. We have an issue with the German government. We think the German state is a menace to our safety or its policy to our interests. We think it has injured us. Therefore we are to penalize ourselves by refusing to take advantage of the vast wealth of thought and feeling and beauty the genius of a race has produced. We disapprove of the kaiser and his projects. Therefore we punish him by snubbing Beethoven. We do not like Von Tirpitz. Therefore we refuse to listen to Bach, to read Goethe and Heine.

The president has said that we war upon the government and policies of Germany, not upon the German people. He then expressed the spirit of the American people with few exceptions. If we retain possession of our common sense we shall continue to keep the distinction in mind, even if we do not forget that the German people are not without responsibility for German policies. We shall keep as clear headed as we please and we shall not sink into the spiritual waste and folly of boche loathing.

German genius has bestowed upon the world some of the most precious possessions of civilized life. Some of the most beautiful and beloved of our customs have come from the German fireside. Its songs of childhood, of nature, and human life are a legacy enriching the life of the race. Its philosophers and its poets, its artists and scientists belong to human progress and are the friends of the human spirit.

To deprive ourselves of their gifts is to impoverish ourselves and leave our temporary enemy untouched. It is to do even more than this. It is to foster a race cleavage in our own country between non-Germans and some of the most worthy, valuable, and loyal of our fellow Americans. The exactly opposite effort should be made. If America is worthy of its own ideals it will fight this war with the utmost efficiency and vigor, but it will fight it without venom and in the bright hope of a day when all the peoples will be friends again, sharing one another's gifts in peace.

RAGTIME WARFARE.

[From the Boston News Bureau.]

Nowhere is there a better illustration of the American faith in a cure-all than in our military preparations for war.

The jitney, or one man, submarine, with its "pill on a pole," which shall make battleships obsolete; the skimming dish motorboat, which shall make the submarine obsolete; the hydro-aeroplane squadrons, which shall make all boats obsolete; the siege gun on a flat car, which shall make forts obsolete; the gun carrying aeroplane, which shall make siege guns obsolete.

College students, firm in the belief that a knowledge of engineering and theoretical minor tactics equals field experience, are training to officer troops which do not exist; ladies are variously drilling to cooperate with nonexistent forces; airmen are training to reconnoiter for field artillery still existing in the form of iron ore; medical and sanitary units are training to care for the health of mythical units.

It is nearly time to drop the "special duty" activities which charm because of sporting opportunities or uniqueness and to devote ourselves to the bread and butter of war—infantry, cavalry, and artillery for the army; battle cruisers and other vital adjuncts and more men for the navy.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

[Copyright: 1917: By the Brentwood Co.]

KING ALBERT has just given an indication of the fact that on the conclusion of the war and on the recovery of all that portion of Belgium now occupied by the Germans he will devote himself to the project of his uncle and predecessor, Leopold II., of converting the nation into a maritime power. For he has removed the younger of his two sons, Prince Charles, Count of Flanders, and 14 years of age, from the preparatory school near Eton, where he has been pursuing his studies until now, and has entered him as a naval cadet in the Royal Naval academy at Osborne on the Isle of Wight, where both of King George's eldest sons, the Prince of Wales and Prince Albert, received the groundwork of their education. He will have there as a fellow pupil another of the British monarch's sons, namely, Prince George, who is just a year older.

It is intended that the young Count of Flanders shall receive a complete training as an officer of the English navy, so as to fit him to take a prominent part in the development of the Belgian navy which King Albert proposes to create, and with which he intends to endow his native land.

Few people are aware that some sixty years ago there were three or four old wooden warships which were officially described as the Belgian fleet. But they became so antiquated and obsolete as to excite popular ridicule and were eventually abolished as calculated to arouse the contempt rather than the respect of foreign nations.

The late King Leopold, during the last decade of his reign, became imbued with a feeling as to the necessity of Belgium having a navy. As soon as he had made up his mind to convert the Congo Free State, of which he was the sovereign, into a Belgian colony, he inaugurated a movement to revive the existence of the Belgian fleet on the ground that the possession of great and rich oversea dependencies required warships in order to safeguard the lines of communication between the colonies and their mother country. Moreover, Belgium had at that time in Antwerp the greatest and busiest of all the commercial seaports of continental Europe, as well as a mercantile marine of some hundred oceangoing steamships that also stood in need of armed protection in the event of danger.

King Leopold was, however, not popular with his subjects and his mismanagement of the Congo Free State had become to such an extent a scandal of international proportions that his people were sick and tired of his entire African enterprise, resented his connection therewith, and were exceedingly averse to taking it over from him as a colony on any terms.

Consequently his movement to raise funds through popular subscriptions by various societies formed for the purpose, at his instance, for the creation of a national navy met with a very scanty and discouraging response. Instead of enough money being collected to endow the nation with a squadron of modern warships, the amount received was so small that it merely sufficed for the purchase of a four-masted barque, which was presented to the government for use as a school ship, on which the future officers and sailors of the projected Belgian navy were to be trained.

King Leopold was at the time very bitter against England owing to her repeated expressions of disapproval of his government of the Congo Free State and of his failure to adhere to the stipulations of the so-called Congo congress of Berlin in 1884. His relations with the kaiser, on the other hand, were very intimate indeed, and therefore he engaged the services of several retired officers of the German navy to act as commanders and instructors of the school ship, which he named the Avenir.

It was these German officers who were in charge of the boat when it visited New York some years ago with a large party of Belgian naval cadets and young sailors aboard.

The outbreak of the war rendered the continuation of the ship in this capacity impossible. The cadets and the sailors were drawn into the Belgian army, while the invasion of King Albert's dominions by the kaiser's troops naturally involved the dismissal of the German officers on board the Avenir.

With the object of turning the ship to some account, it was hurriedly chartered by the government to a big Belgian commercial concern at Antwerp, which hastened to get it out of Europe and to employ it for its Australian-American oil trade. It was, indeed, as an oil ship, taking on board a cargo of oil for Australia, that the Avenir, the nucleus of the Belgian navy, reappeared at the port of New York a couple of years ago.

King Albert's eldest son, being now at Eton as a fellow pupil of King George's third son, Prince Henry, and the Count of Flanders having become a British naval cadet at the Royal Naval academy of Osborne, the only remaining child of the royal Belgian couple—namely, Princess Marie Jose, just 11 years of age—has been placed by her mother, Queen Elizabeth, in the great convent school of the Holy Annunciation at Poggio-Imperiale, near Florence, where she is to complete her education. Queen Elizabeth, who was attended by Count and Countess d'Oultremont, took advantage of her stay at Florence to visit all the military hospitals there and received a great ovation.

Although the speaker of the house of commons has always enjoyed the use of a magnificent official residence in the palace of Westminster, fully furnished and equipped even to the extent of a superb silver service and state coach, everything being maintained at the expense of the government, the lord high chancellor, who may be regarded as the presiding officer of the house of lords, since he enjoys precedence over all its members, has had to content himself with a private house.

Some of the occupants of the Woolsack during the last few hundred years have been men who pushed economy to the point of niggardliness and have made their homes in houses so small and shabby as to be entirely out of keeping with the importance of their office and which afforded wholly inadequate protection to the great seal of the realm entrusted to their custody. On one occasion the great seal, which is the principal instrument of sovereignty, was carried off by burglars from the private residence of a lord chancellor, while in the case of another chancellor when his house was destroyed by a fire which swept the block he hurriedly hid the great seal in a hole in the garden, which had to be completely dug up afterward before he could find the seal.

BABY WEEK

WE are beginning the second annual baby week, and we will do well to take as a command the advice of the federal government and heed it. We are accustomed to muddling, through not paying much attention to the federal government or any other government. Since August, 1914, we have come to learn that one American cannot whip a handful of Germans, and that we are not the only pebble on the beach, and that our future and the general good cannot be left to work themselves out somehow. We are turning to the government as we have not done before in the last fifty years. We are developing a culture of our own, and a tenet of that culture is that we as individuals and as groups expect to uphold the government and we expect the government to govern, control, and direct us as individuals and as groups.

In a certain sense baby week is by government order and under government direction. The women's clubs made a suggestion upon which Miss Lathrop acted, and in consequence state and local health departments and all sorts of private agencies are working for the babies this week.

The psychology of the street this week is that of war. Let's get this into our heads. Social welfare, and this includes baby welfare, are war measures. If you talk with a Britisher, a Frenchman, or a German you will hear him referring constantly to man power. He will talk about food, munitions, armies, but he will bring in constantly man power. You will not know what he means at first. Then it will dawn upon you that in defending the kultur, traditions, and material resources of a country it is necessary to reckon with the conservation of human beings along with planning for shells and food and the raising of armies.

So far from seeing a lapse in movements for conservation of life and health in the war stricken countries, we find that they are growing. What was before the war a vague impulse felt by the few is now a command of government, and, what is more, a broadly recognized necessity. In Belgium before the war there was but one baby welfare station. Last summer there were nearly 400. And Belgium as a whole has not many more people than has one of our monster cities. These 400 cities are furnishing milk for babies. They are teaching mothers the importance of breast feeding. Where the mother would breast feed her baby, but is not able to do so because she is underfed, they furnish food. They help in the care of well babies and the nursing of sick ones. They teach mothers how to take care of babies, as well as help them directly in caring for them. In consequence of all this, the infant death rate in Belgium in 1916 was 85.

There are few states in the United States that have so low a death rate. The Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis association says that state has a rate of 81.9; Utah, California, Oregon, and Washington are also low, but most of the states have a baby death rate that is considerably above that of Belgium.

Poor stricken Belgium has had to learn the need of man power and the care of babies with them is patriotism and religion. They write it as part of their duty to their flag; they make it a part of their prayers.

We are proud of the baby death rates of La Crosse, Salt Lake City, Seattle, Portland, and Los Angeles. They have lower rates than Belgium, but then New York City, the most successful of large American cities in controlling sickness among babies, has never been able to come within ten of the Belgium rate.

The principal object of a baby week is to interest the general run of people in baby welfare—the people who have no babies of their own and not enough basic love of their fellow man to make them help for the joy of helping. To these I suggest the thought that baby welfare is a patriotic duty.

The meaning of a baby death rate of 100 is that 100 babies die before reaching the age of 1 year out of each 1,000 born. A baby death rate of 200 is a disgrace to any community. A baby death rate of 100 is quite creditable.

Now let us analyze these figures a bit. A baby death rate of 200 means that eight of each ten babies born live to reach 1 year of age. A rate of 100 means that nine out of each ten live to reach the age of 1 year. Of these ten mothers in the first group eight will be well satisfied with themselves, their way of feeding and caring for their babies. They may hold themselves out as teachers of young mothers among their acquaintances. They cannot understand why their methods and their record should be disapproved of. The other two feel too badly about it to say much.

In the second group nine mothers out of the ten are satisfied with their methods of baby care. We see that the only difference between the results in the two groups is that in the second one more baby lives and one more mother is satisfied than in the first. Eight of the mothers in each group can see no difference between the two methods, so far as results are concerned. One in each group is certainly unhappy and dissatisfied. We see that the whole difference between the two groups revolves around one mother and one baby.

And yet when we come to study results from the standpoint of society we find that a community with a baby death rate of 200 is on the down grade, whereas one with a rate of 100 is on the up grade. The argument is that no mother has the right to judge of what she and other mothers should do on the basis of her own little experience. She should learn everything she can from experience, books, lectures, infant welfare stations, everywhere she can, and pass it on to others. Maybe her own baby would have lived without it. She may be one of the eight. But then, on the other hand, she may be that ninth one who is very much affected one way or the other.

A second object of baby week is to interest mothers in the very best and latest in the care not only of their own babies but in the care of all babies. It may not be the privilege of some mother to save the life of her own baby. Maybe her baby was safe anyway. Maybe her own baby was lost anyway. But even in that case it may be the privilege to save the lives of some other babies.

There are some mothers who know enough to save their babies but who cannot apply the information.

The weather will be hot next summer and the price of ice will be high. In normal times 45 per cent of the homes do not have iceboxes and ice in them. Next summer the percentage will be even higher. In many places milk is delivered once a day. What chance is there for good milk for the baby in a home where there is no ice and no icebox? A lot of milk is dirty and poor.

What good does it do for a mother to know if she must buy cheap, dirty, poor milk for her baby? Next winter coal will be high. What good does it do for a mother to know about fresh air when she must buy coal by the bucket? Another of the functions of baby week is to raise money that babies may have clean milk, ice, and coal.

The principal object of a baby week is to interest the community at large in babies. Some may become interested in the promotion of registration who cannot be interested in more personal work. Birth registration is far from being satisfactory. The United States census office recognized birth registration in but few states—which means that registration is not 95 per cent complete in more than half a dozen states. There are more than six states with good laws, but the majority of such states have poor administration. For instance, the Illinois law is approved of by the census office, but the administration is so poor that the state is not in the registration area. In some places the people of this group can be interested in better registration laws; in others they can be interested in getting better registration officers that there may be better enforcement.

There are some towns with poor milk supplies that can be interested during this week in measures for a better milk supply. Some schools may decide to examine milk samples brought in by pupils as their contribution to baby week.

Another object in a baby week is to get better care for the babies. A feature of the week will be clinics held at infant welfare stations and baby shows. Mothers take their babies to infant welfare stations for examination by specialists in baby care. The physicians sit down and talk over with the mothers individual babies and baby care in general. The mothers meet visiting nurses at these stations. A few days later the nurses call on the mothers and they talk still further about the care of babies in general and the babies in the homes visited in particular.

The woman who takes her baby to a modern baby show learns a great deal. She gets a chance to compare her baby with other babies. She learns something about good points in babies. She learns that some things that she has thought unimportant the people who make up score cards think very important, and vice versa. She gets a chance to talk with other mothers about baby care. She will talk to the examiners and judges. From them she will learn much if she goes to the baby show with an open mind, and most mothers do.

Another advantage from baby week is that fathers get interested in and learn something about babies. In most foreign families in our cities it is the husband and father who decides what the baby shall eat and how the baby shall be cared for. Although he does the deciding he does not know much about babies. During baby week the husbands and fathers can be expected to learn about babies.

The Wisconsin bulletin advises: "If you cannot have a baby week have at least a baby day."

The large cities can give a week to the babies without exhausting the field or going over the same subject twice. If a small place had a baby week most of the people would be called upon to repeat. Some of them would hear on Friday what they had heard on Monday. Villages may not be able to manage more than one afternoon. But every community should have some form of exercise for which they should call upon churches, women's clubs, boy scouts, camp fire girls, schools, and parent-teachers' organizations. Everybody can be interested.

LOVES RAW VEGETABLES.

M. B. E. writes: "Are raw vegetables injurious to one's health? My friends contend they are, and as I am fond of all kinds of vegetables in their raw state I feel concerned. I always eat of them while preparing my meals; in fact, most vegetables are more palatable to me raw. I would rather have one slice of a raw potato than the same whole potato cooked. Now, do not misunderstand me to say that I do not eat vegetables cooked, for I do, and plenty of them, as I eat little or no meat at all. I am only saying which are preferable to me. I eat most everything that grows except egg plant. I hope for an answer in the negative, as I cannot see how I can overcome this habit of so long standing—a fixed habit of a woman of 40 in seemingly good health."

REPLY.

There is no objection to eating raw vegetables in moderation, provided you make certain they are clean. There is some objection to eating raw potatoes. It is somewhat difficult to digest raw starch in quantity. Second, greenish colored potatoes and potatoes that have grown near the surface of the ground contain some of a drug that is related to belladonna.

EATS ORANGES.

A. M. B. writes: "Will you please tell me through your column whether it is harmful to the stomach to eat two oranges every night before retiring? They are beneficial to me as a laxative."

REPLY.

No.

NOT ENOUGH FOR BABY.

Mrs. R. A. writes: "I have a baby 13 months old. I feed him nothing but Mellin's food and water. Is that enough?"

REPLY.

A baby 13 months old needs some vegetables, meat, and fruit. He should have some hard toast to chew on, some meat bones to gnaw, some orange juice, and some finely chopped vegetables. All this in addition to his Mellin's food.

MEATLESS DAYS

[From London Opinion.]

"Nothing this morning, butcher, except that you might send up three pennyworth of bones, to make soup."

Butcher (whose daily call for orders has for some time been a fruitless errand): "H-m-m-m! (Sarcastically.) Expecting company, I pre-sume!"

PETITION WILL RECEIVE ATTENTION.

Chicago, April 20.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Kindly inform me if the alley between Kedzie avenue and Troy street, from Ogden avenue to Twenty-first street, is to be paved this summer, and if so, when will the work be started? W. J. KALAL, 1832 South Troy street.

An estimate has been ordered for paving the alley between Ogden avenue, Nineteenth street, Troy street, and Kedzie avenue, and if the engineer is able to make up an estimate this spring the alley will probably be paved late next fall.

There are no proceedings under way at the present time for paving the alley between Nineteenth and Twenty-first streets, Troy street and Kedzie avenue, but if a petition requesting this improvement, signed by owners of some of the property fronting on the alley, is presented to this board, such proceedings will be started, but the alley cannot be paved until 1918. M. J. FAHERTY,
President Board of Local Improvements.

OPENING SCHOOL STREET.

Chicago, April 20.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Is School street going to cut through from Drake avenue to Central Park avenue? M. SCHULTZ, 3264 North Drake avenue.

School street between Drake avenue and Central Park avenue will not be opened this year owing to the fact that condemnation proceedings will not be completed and the assessment collected for at least one year from this date. The proposition has been referred to the engineer for report and if he is able to make up the report and survey before construction work starts this spring a public hearing can be held and subsequent proceedings can go forward from that time. M. J. FAHERTY,
President Board of Local Improvements.

CIRCULARS IN MAIL BOXES.

Chicago, April 20.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Is there not a law regarding the stuffing of mail boxes in apartment buildings with advertising matter? In our building the mail boxes are always clogged with circulars and other matter, and the halls littered with it. H. E. ROGERS.

There has been no legislation by the city council on the subject of stuffing of mail boxes in hall of apartments, the corporation counsel having advised the council that they are without power to pass such an ordinance. JOSEPH SIMAN, City Clerk.

CHILDREN LIABILE FOR SUPPORT.

Chicago, April 24.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I am one of three sons who two years ago through fire were left destitute. Since I've been the main support of father and mother. Brothers haven't paid any money toward support. Can they be made to pay? READER.

Yes, under pauper act children can be compelled to contribute to support of aged parents. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

GENERALLY INCLUDED IN TRUST DEED.

Chicago, April 24.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Am about to pay a mortgage which comes due. Have been told it will be necessary to pay $3 for a release which it is necessary to have that it may be recorded. Is this based on law or merely an arbitrary act? J. Z.

It is generally included in trust deed which mortgagor signs, and is reasonable fee to which trustee or mortgagee is entitled. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

PROHIBITED IN THREE STORY BUILDINGS.

Chicago, April 23.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—My landlord often insists on turning out lights in apartment building hallways after 9:30 p. m. Is there an ordinance prohibiting this? READER.

City ordinance prohibits this in three story buildings. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

HUSBAND'S HEIRS NOT ENTITLED.

Chicago, April 24.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Will you kindly answer the following: Husband dies leaving no estate, no children, and no will. Wife dies later leaving small estate, no children, and no will. Are husband's heirs entitled to any share in the wife's estate? H. M.
No. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

BANKS AND THE WAR.

Evanston, Ill., April 24.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Can the government in time of war take over money in banks or mortgages? Would you advise putting money in a mortgage in time of war, and can the government claim it at such a time? M. O'HARE.

They cannot under present law. We are of opinion that present conditions do not require any unusual action. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

MILK IN UNSEALED BOTTLES.

Chicago, April 20.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Why are not bottles of milk sealed when delivered to the consumer? I frequently am obliged to buy milk from a store in the neighborhood and each time find there is no cream at the top. These people have small children and are not very prosperous and I strongly suspect the cream is carefully skimmed from the top of the milk and the bottle filled to the top. If bottles of milk were sealed this would not happen and the milk would be cleaner. M. M. M.

It is strictly against the city ordinance to deliver bottles of milk to the consumer not sealed.

If M. M. M. will kindly inform the food bureau such action will be immediately taken to have this practice stopped. JOHN DILL ROBERTSON,
Commissioner of Health.

FOOD PRODUCTION IN THE SOUTH.

Charleston, Miss., April 22.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Placing its patriotic duty above every financial consideration, the Lamb-Fish Lumber company of Charleston, Miss., has entered the big food drive and will not raise a boll of cotton this year on 2,200 acres, but will put it all into food and feed crops.

"Raise food crops or fight," was the message P. H. Stark, general superintendent of the company's plantation, told his sixty tenant families when they came to him for a renewal of the annual crop arrangement. The tenants decided to work in the corn and soy bean trenches in preference to going to the front, and Mr. Stark went to Memphis to take up details of his large food raising project.

Some 1,850 acres will be planted to prolific corn and 600 acres will be planted to mammoth yellow soy beans. There will be fifty acres of sweet potatoes, fifty acres of Japanese seeded ribbon cane from which the tenants will make their own sirup; fifty acres of cowpeas, and fifty acres of late potatoes. There will be ten acre fields each of cabbage, onions, tomatoes, turnips, and early potatoes.

Cowpeas also will be sown broadcast in the corn at the last cultivation, and rutabagas will be drilled in part of the corn. Much of the land will be planted in double crops. After the soy beans have been harvested there will be time for planting winter wheat, and the soil will be in excellent condition for it.

In former years the Lamb-Fish Lumber company usually raised some 1,200 acres of cotton. The patriotic departure from old established lines in the face of a threatened food crisis in the south is causing much favorable comment in agricultural and lumber circles. X. X. X.

OFFICERS FOR THE NEW ARMY.

Chicago, April 22.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—A close study of the published details of the plans for the officers' reserve corps training camps leads to a most astounding and disconcerting conclusion. Officers for the first army of 500,000 are to be drawn from among the number of men who complete this training course successfully. Only those who do so will be eligible for commissions in the new force. Therefore those men who, by reason of service in a guard unit, cannot attend this camp will not be considered when it comes to commissioning the officers for our first new army.

I do not for a minute suppose that the army proposes to adopt a policy so unjust and so ruinous to the morale of the guard. The conclusion I have drawn, however, is one that is current among many of the guardsmen who refused the Hay oath, and therefore, by reason of their subsequent discharge, can enter these camps; and the guardsmen who did "come clean" are beginning to get a trifle nervous—something for which they can hardly be blamed, when the topsy-turvy handling to which they were subjected last summer is recalled. Consequently it would be a great comfort to these latter men, and a corresponding "prod" to the others, if the army authorities would give a definite, clean out statement of their policies in this matter. GUARDSMAN.

A RADICAL SUGGESTION.

Chicago, April 21.—[Editor of the Tribune.]—In report by staff correspondent at Washington published April 20 occurs the following statement: "The strength of the volunteer element in the house, aided by the pacifists and pro-Germans, is considerable." In this morning's issue a dispatch from Washington reads as follows: "Approximately 3,000 German residents of the United States are under close surveillance."

I want to know if the pro-Germans in the national house of representatives are under surveillance and, if not, why not? They are in position to do infinitely more damage to this country than the same number of German residents of the United States.

If there are pro-Germans in our house of representatives that body should take steps to force their resignation. Failing that, action by an old fashioned vigilance committee would be in order. This statement is made advisedly and without heat. No man should be allowed a seat in our national councils who is not pro-American wholly and without taint. L. C. DOLL.

ALCOHOL AND WAR.

Mendon, Mich., April 22.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I read a great deal about the abolition of alcoholic beverages now that we have gone to war, but if I am not mistaken more of the fighting will be done by those who use some alcoholic stimulants than the grape juice advocates. E. H. KIMMEL.

The Tribune's Weekly Almanack

APRIL MAY

MAY—the idealization of spring, the marvel of regeneration, odorous and green, sweet as a virgin, scented with lilacs and wreathed in violets, sung to by the hylas and wood thrush, sung to by the whip-poor-will, young and timid with its oak buds, bold with its grasses.

It is a caress—a caress which touches when the giver is not within arm reach. It suggests tenderness and does not reveal it. It is reticent and the delicacies of its grace and sweetness are inviolable.

It causes bold arms to want the full contact of expression which would realize possession, but the bold arms do not even move. The inviolability of May is that of the shad bush when against the filmy new green of the woods the white blossoms star the background.

A thunderstorm shatters these blossoms. A violent wind will scatter them. They live their time only if they may be undisturbed by force. They are the symbols of May.

May is a songful, promiseful, odorous moment in the processes of the year when light winds carry the sweetness of the earth abroad and when life arises in fresh ceremonials to proclaim that it lives and is lovable.

David Pinski
(HOFFERT PHOTO)

"ONE of the most brilliant plays in the last twenty years," is the verdict of Prof. Baker of Harvard on David Pinski's "The Treasure" (Huebsch). "One of the greatest living dramatists" is the distinction which David Pinski has won for himself from English critics—and that on nothing more than "The Treasure" and two one act plays in "Six Plays of the Yiddish Theater" (Luce), the only plays of his published in English.

For eighteen years David Pinski has lived in New York, editing a socialistic Jewish paper, the Jew Militant, and writing most of a small monthly magazine in Yiddish, and in his moments of high creation writing plays which are as expressive of the Jewish nationality and universal in their application as Ibsen's are universal through his keen delineation of the particular nationality of the Scandinavians.

Except to Jewish-America David Pinski is practically unknown, but he cannot long remain so. Since the publication of the translated version of "The Treasure" (for which Ludwig Lewisohn, the famous translator of Hauptmann, put aside a Hauptmann drama in his eagerness to get "The Treasure" to an English reading audience) he has actually become the one literary dramatic discovery of America.

What Jewish America thinks of him is sheer adoration. He came to Chicago last week to give a few lectures and to help with the rehearsals of one of his plays, "The Mother," which the Yiddish Literary and Dramatic society is producing in Yiddish this evening at Central Music hall. Last Sunday evening they had a reception for him and he was deified as no one less than Christy Mathewson or Tod Sloan has ever been crowned with applause and flowers and carryings on shoulders.

There is decidedly the stuff that genius is made of in his personality—he is simple, truly simple, as all great men have been, but filled with a fire that smelts life and refines the gold of it. And as all men of great power (whether it comes to an actual working strength for millions or is concentrated into potential power for a few thousands), he is filled with romantic ideals, ideals that don't "pay," but that somehow grow dearer for their apparent impracticability.

All this you know when you meet him, gentle of manner, vibrant with energy, with that glint of human humor in his eyes that sees the quip in the harsh realities of life. "The Treasure" (which is the only long play I know), for instance, is cold materialism, but even in the graveyard Mr. Pinski sees the ironical humor of man's ardent devotion to money.

The tale of his life is interesting but not violent. Born in Russia, he was intended for a rabbi, and was famed for his knowledge of the Talmud, but he revolted against the calling at 10, produced a play at his grandmother's house at 11, and decided to become a writer. He went to Vienna study medicine, was driven back to Russia by the persecution of his parents there, and settled in Warsaw among the young Jewish literary ardents and began to write.

First he wrote in Russian and Hebrew, but he soon decided that if he wanted to help his people he must talk to them in their own language and he began at 17 to write exclusively in Yiddish. Although the language, a dialect, has been spoken for four centuries, there has been no literature in Yiddish until the last thirty years. He was the sixth man ever to write in Yiddish when he began writing in 1889.

In Warsaw he had the first success with the story which we know as "In a Madhouse." He went then to Berlin, where he became one of the Hauptmann group. I imagine that his journey to Berlin wasn't absolutely voluntary, for he was one of the founders of the famous "Bund," the Russian revolutionists. In Berlin he was acclaimed a master second only to Hauptmann in the delineation of labor in his tragedy of a factory, "Isaac Sheftel." It was his first great play and, at the same time, the first labor play in Yiddish. And it had a romantic and tragic success.

Plays in Yiddish of that sort were then forbidden admission into Russia by the censors, and production of Yiddish plays was a grave offense. Despite the danger, the play was printed on gossamer thin paper, sewed into coats, and thus smuggled into Russia. Literary and dramatic societies, secret ones, sprang up all through Russia for the production of "Isaac Sheftel." One night a performance was surprised by the powers, and the play was still read, but the memory of the punishment for its production never let it be produced again.

There was too little chance for Yiddish plays in Berlin, and Mr. Pinski, who had become very well known in New York through his foreign correspondences and his short stories published there, accepted a place on the editorial department of a Jewish weekly because he understood there was a Yiddish theater in New York and he had visions of getting his plays produced. The managers refused even to read the plays because they were written in three acts and New York audiences demanded four!

Then followed years of study at Columbia for a Ph. D. in Germanics so that he could teach German literature and drama. He deliberately missed his doctor's examination, however, because he was working on "The Zwie Family." After that he devoted himself to literature solely, except for his share in a small Yiddish printing company. His popularity has increased to the point of last Sunday's demonstration. Among his own people and the best of America's literary judges have given him recognition since he was discovered by the translation of "The Treasure." "The Treasure," by the way, was produced by Max Reinhardt in 1910 at the famous Deutsches theater in Berlin, the only modern play which Herr Reinhardt ever directed personally.

Mr. Pinski is still a young man, just 45. He speaks English, an accented English, to be sure, with quaint phrasings and literary idioms, but he will not write in any language but Yiddish. Despite that, however, he has a literary vision which will give him a place in the histories of universal literature.

For Baby week, May 1-7, the civics and documents department of the public library has all sorts of government documents about the care of the baby, food, hygiene, diseases, amusements, welfare agencies, and records of the official baby saving campaigns. Have you taken my advice yet about getting acquainted with the civics and documents department on the first floor, Randolph street side?

In George Allen England's newest mystery tale, "Pod Bender and Company," there is this paragraph: "Some days thereafter three passengers sat in a smoking compartment. One, a commercial traveler, courted his briar and read 'The Alibi.'" "The Alibi" is one of Mr. England's own. Why haven't authors thought of reminding the public that they have written other books in this way before? It's an effective way, especially if the character finds the book "one of the best he had ever read."

All of President Wilson's recent books have been published by Harper & Bros. in answer to J. D. They include the five volume "History of the American People," his "Life of George Washington," two essayish volumes, "When a Man Comes to Himself" and "On Being Human," and his latest book, "The President of the United States."

William Butler Yeats has gone back to Ireland to live, an Irish friend of the Tabloid tells me. He has bought a castle in Bally Lea, near where he was born.

Irving Bacheller considers "The Light in the Clearing," a tale of the north country in the days of Silas Wright (Bobbs-Merrill), the most important thing he has ever done. He has spent most of the time for the last three years on the book. During his summers in St. Lawrence county he has studied local conditions and old manuscripts about Silas Wright. On the day the book was published the St. Lawrence County society, of which Mr. Bacheller is president, had a celebration.

"Louisburg Square" (Macmillan) is a first novel by Robert Cutler of the class of 1916 of Harvard. Louisburg square, on Beacon hill, is the living old Boston, and in that atmosphere Mr. Cutler has lived and had his youthful literary being.

Amelia E. Barr celebrated her 87th birthday by working eight hours on her newest novel, "A Woman's Problem." She finished the fourth chapter of the book the day before her birthday. "It will be my seventy-seventh book when it is finished," she said. "I consider writing one of life's choicest delights." "Joan" (Appleton) was her seventy-sixth.

THE Chicago Automobile Trade association, sponsors of Chicago's first used car show, which opens at the Coliseum next Saturday, announced yesterday the personnel of the technical committee which will examine and test every car offered for display before it is admitted to the exhibition.

These men, on whom the car buying public must depend for assurance that the cars offered are worth the prices asked for them, represent the association's notion of the most experienced automobile engineers to be found in Chicago. They are Eugene Silver of the Cole company, chairman; F. E. Edwards, Victor Electric company; E. J. Krimsky, Chicago Auto Sales company; W. H. Hunt, Simmons Motor Car company; A. D. Mortimer, Haynes Motor Car company; H. M. Daily, Illinois Motors, Inc.; A. D. Marine, Maxwell Motor Sales corporation; William Georgian, L. Markle company; C. W. Williams, Reo Motor Car company; H. S. Ross, Packard Motor Car company; A. Wikoff, Louis Geyler company; Arthur Bunker, Bird-Sykes company; Harry P. Branstetter, Kissel Kar company, and A. J. Bruene, Oldsmobile Motor company.

The work of inspecting the cars submitted and testing them by actual driving begins tomorrow in the small park on Michigan avenue between Twenty-second and Twenty-third streets, and along a section of Wabash avenue. In the inspections each dealer will be told in detail of his car's defects, should any of them fail to pass, and he will be allowed a second inspection after the machines have been overhauled. Cars that do not pass on their second trial will be ruled out entirely.

More than seven hundred of the used vehicles have already been listed for examination, and Manager Tom Convey is racking his brains to find space for all the dealers who want to participate in the affair.

Thirty-four distributors of pleasure cars, four truck dealers, and six accessory concerns have been allotted exhibition spaces. Inasmuch as dealers may show cars other than those of their own make—cars which they may have received in trade—the number of makes shown probably will approach fifty.

The general plan of the show was outlined in this section last Sunday. All cars exhibited will be for sale and will be marked with tags indicating that they have been examined and bearing the price in plain figures. No deviation from this price will be permitted.

The show opens Saturday morning and closes Sunday night, May 13. Deliveries of such cars as are sold will be made during three periods daily—from 7 to 10 a. m., 5:30 to 7, and 10 to 11 p. m. As each car is removed another will take its place.

Special diversions, to be announced later, are scheduled, and the various automobile organizations of Chicago have been allotted special days during the week.

A POCKET EDITION FOR MILADY

This Baby Motor Car, Propelled by Electricity, Was a Feature of New York's "Wake Up, America," Parade.

BYRON'S PHOTO

Not all the baby automobiles of the moment use gasoline. This one, photographed while it was carrying two members of the stage women's war relief in New York's big "Wake Up, America" parade, is an electric affair.

The model used was geared for a speed of about six miles an hour, although for use in congested places these miniature vehicles are ordinarily geared for a speed of from four to five miles an hour. The battery is capable of driving the car about twenty miles or more on a single charge and is readily and quickly recharged.

These "motor chairs," which are controlled with one hand, are being widely used at Palm Beach, Fla.; Long Beach, Cal., and several other resorts. Wounded soldiers have found them useful in Europe.

A new model is to be placed on the market shortly which will have a victoria body and will be capable of traveling ten miles an hour with a proportionate increase in mileage.

WAR

Straws Which Show How the Current of Sentiment Lies in the Automobile World.

THE first actual, direct war recruiting of automobile drivers and mechanics into army service has begun in the east, where the quartermaster's corps is organizing for the Atlantic coast forty motor truck companies, each containing thirty or or more trucks. For these units 1,300 truck drivers are needed to enlist as sergeants. The Society of Automotive Engineers is aiding actively in finding men for this service. Similar truck companies will be formed later throughout the country, but for the present motor organizations in the middle west are purely volunteer affairs, listing the men from the personnel of future reserves will be picked.

A report that a large mobilization camp is to be established near Springfield, Mass., has led the Fisk Rubber company to offer the war department free use of its forty-five acre athletic park just outside the city. The facilities for physical training, it is suggested, would make the park particularly valuable in hardening recruits and national guardsmen for war service. A similar offer of Joy field, in Detroit, has been made by officials of the Packard Motor Car company, who suggest that it be used for aviation training. The field was inspected by army aviation officers in 1915 and a favorable report made on its advantages. The Packard company has been testing its aircraft engines there.

The governing bodies of the Motor and Accessory Manufacturers, at a meeting held recently in New York, appointed a mobilization committee consisting of C. W. Stiger, Christian Girl, W. O. Ruthenford, and James H. Foster and wired Howard E. Coffin of the council of national defense that the committee is ready to "mobilize the resources, both materials and men, of the members of the M. and A. M. for the purpose of cooperating with the government in all its needs. The organization also voted to lend its financial support to the mobilization work being done by the American Automobile association and the Society of Automotive Engineers.

War and Gasoline.

Motorists will "do their bit" by standing for another sharp rise in gasoline if tentative provisions in the proposed war revenue bill are retained. The plan now is to tax refined petroleum and gasoline on the basis of 10 per cent of the wholesale price. This would amount, hereabouts, to nearly 2 cents a gallon.

It has been agreed in subcommittee that the only tax on automobiles will be at the factory and will be levied according to the value of the car. The rates as proposed by Secretary McAdoo are small, ranging from $1 to $10.

Lone Car to Cross Divide.

Differences of opinion regarding the route to be taken by the San Francisco Advertising club's motor caravan from the coast to St. Louis in May have apparently reached an impasse. Towns left off the itinerary have presented good roads claims so vigorously that the whole matter has been reopened, and it is probable a scout car will leave San Francisco tomorrow, following the proposed new Lincoln highway across Nevada to Salt Lake City and thence over the midland trail to Denver, returning over a different route.

The pathfinder's report as to the merits of the disputed trails probably will determine the route of the big hegira—if the pathfinder gets through. His schedule provides for his arrival in San Francisco only four days before the caravan is to start, and much snow and many difficult grades are to be faced in the Rockies thus early in the season. Crossing the divide by motor early in May would establish a new record.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

Harry Newman, who recommends Hal twelves, now has "motor cars and aircraft," across the top of his letterheads. And he insists the aircraft are really going to materialize before long. Meanwhile he is congratulating the factory he represents on its acquisition as chief engineer of Darwin Hanauer, who is credited, among other things, with having designed the now popular four passenger or cloverleaf roadster.

Bucking snowdrifts and fighting its way through a veritable sea of slush and snow, a Mitchell six from Los Angeles has climbed to the crest of the San Bernardino mountains, bringing in the first mail as well as the first automobile of the year to the famous Pine Knot lodge, 11,600 feet above sea level. The only mail the lodge proprietor had received before was brought by men on snowshoes.

A. A. Leaders Meet May 25 to Plan War Work

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 28.—(Special.)—May 25 is the date decided upon by the American Automobile association executive board for the holding of a special meeting of the board of directors, to take place in Cleveland at the Hollenden hotel.

"This year's gathering will have a decidedly different atmosphere, because of the present war conditions and the further fact that the motor vehicle and the highway play prominent and vital parts in near future developments," said President H. M. Rowe, who made comments on the present situation.

"Never before in the history of the country has there been a more urgent need for the improvement of the highways and the linking together of these highways, for never before were agricultural and military necessities so closely interwoven. We must raise more foodstuffs and we must get these products to the nearest market in the most economical manner. We must prepare the most used roads for the hardest possible kind of usage.

"This is the moment to weld our people into a real nation and to recognize the salient fact that the good of any one section is of concern to all other sections of the country. One cannot measure national benefits with a yard stick. Now we are starting in to think in the broad unit, and it is the motor driven vehicle and the travelable highway which jointly are accelerating this broader understanding and relationship."

Among the score of motor clubs and several thousand members admitted at the April session of the executive board of the Club Automovilista Jalisciense of Guadalajara, Mexico. In its application the Mexican organization stated that all of its members would be pleased to be associated with the A. A. A. and added that "it would surely be of mutual benefit to the two great nations of the American continent who are such good neighbors, when the day comes that we will see a road from Washington to Mexico City, such as now exists from Washington to San Francisco." The Guadalajara club explains that its principal activity will be to bring about the speedy building of highways so that there may be a more complete exchange of commercial sociality between the two countries and the better knowing of each other.

Upon motion of President Rowe the A. A. A. passed resolutions of a patriotic character wherein the national body summarized the expressions of state and local motor clubs throughout the country in offering mobilizing and full cooperation to President Wilson in his comprehensive war preparation.

Exhaust Echoes

"The freight situation has caused motor car buyers to withhold purchasing in the warm weather," says G. D. Fairman, who sells Detroit electrics. "That means, I think, that we are going to have an exceptionally heavy late spring business."

J. E. Cooper, local branch manager for the Maxwell, has received word of the laurels won by the champion non-stop Maxwell, which was a feature of the Chicago automobile show. After attaining a mileage of more than 100,000 the car was tested in Baltimore for fuel consumption and made 27.1 miles on a single gallon of gasoline, carrying five passengers. It's headed for Chicago again. May 23 Maxwell dealers throughout the United States and Canada will make similar demonstrations of fuel economy, competing for a championship cup and $50 in prizes.

What is the condition of Milwaukee avenue at the present time, and is it possible to use that thoroughfare clear through to Libertyville? How far beyond Half Day does the concrete part of the road run? Please also state whether Sheridan road is passable as far as Fort Sheridan.

L. A. D., Chicago.

Milwaukee avenue is in fine condition from the city limits at Jefferson Park north to a point just north of the Desplaines river. That is as far as the concrete road runs. Milwaukee avenue between the end of the concrete road and Wheeling is closed while paving work is being done. A detour around the closed section is necessary. Sheridan road has been completed through Evanston, Wilmette, and Winnetka, so there now is no break in that thoroughfare between Chicago and Fort Sheridan.

Would you consider 34x4 tires large enough for a roadster weighing 3,000 pounds? Would there be any advantage in equipping the machine with tires of a larger size, and, if so, what size would you advise?

READER, Westville, Ind.

Tires measuring 34x4 would give fairly good service on your roadster, but if the machine were mine I certainly would use a larger size. Oversized tires are much the better on any machine and while they cost considerably more they are cheaper in the end. The larger sizes give much greater mileage, are less liable to blow out, and make the car ride more easily. Try 35x4½ and I will guarantee that you will be more than satisfied with the change.

Please let me know through the medium of your touring department the best route between Chicago and Plainfield, Ill.

H. W., Chicago.

Drive out Jackson boulevard to Garfield park, north to Washington boulevard, and west to end at Marengo avenue. At this point you will find a telephone pole marked with yellow and white bands and the legend, "Ottawa-Starved Rock trail." Follow these markings south to Madison street, west to Fifth avenue, north to St. Charles street, and west through Naperville to Aurora, 40.2 miles. Here leave the Starved Rock trail and drive southeast in Fox street to Plainfield, 15.1 miles.

How many types of axles are there and what one is most generally used?

MOTORIST, Chicago.

There are four types of axles in common use. These are fixed hub, full floating, semi-floating, and three-quarter floating. Most makers use the full floating type. All but the fixed hub type are known as "live axles." The fixed hub axle is used mostly on commercial trucks.

Smith Form-a-Tractor

Guaranteed to Do the Work of Four Big, Strong Horses Costs From 40% to 70% Less to Maintain

1 This special radiator—ten times more efficient than the radiator of the Ford—guarantees perfect cooling—without this installation no automobile motor can work satisfactorily as a tractor.

2 Front end of Smith Form-a-Tractor frame fastens to front axles of Ford—a feature of strength and convenience not duplicated in any other construction.

3 Smith Form-a-Tractor frame extends full length of Ford frame, reinforcing it and leaving no part of the tractor attached to the Ford when used as a pleasure car.

4 Three rows of conical lugs—twenty-seven to each wheel give unusual efficiency in soft soil—a distinctive Smith Form-a-Tractor construction.

A wonderful, fully guaranteed tractor that will plow seven acres to every four acres plowed by horses. It will work steadily at two and one-half miles an hour, doing every kind of farm work. It can be used 24 hours a day, when necessary.

Equally efficient in all kinds of weather, even on the hottest harvest days when horses drop dead in the harness. And Smith Form-a-Tractor combines with any Ford touring car or roadster.

The Permanent Features

The permanent features of the Smith Form-a-Tractor attachment are the new cellular type of radiator, ten times as efficient as the Ford radiator, and the wonderful patented force feed oiling system that entirely eliminates scored pistons, burned out bearings and any other lubrication difficulties.

Smith Form-a-Tractor merely utilizes the wonderful power and remarkable economy of the Ford to do profit-making farm work. It does not injure the Ford in any way. The tractor attachment itself is complete. When it is not in use on the Ford, there are no heavy parts left attached to the Ford frame.

Fifteen Minutes to Install

Fifteen minutes will convert your Ford into a Tractor, or your tractor into a Ford, after you have installed the radiator and the oiling system.

Simply back the Ford over the Smith Form-a-Tractor frame—jack up the Ford axle—remove the wheels—replace them with Smith Form-a-Tractor roller driving pinions—fasten the Smith Form-a-Tractor axle back of the Ford axle and clamp the front end of the Smith Form-a-Tractor frame to the Ford front axle.

To change back to touring car, unclamp the Smith Form-a-Tractor frame—roll the Smith Form-a-Tractor axle and wheels back, take off the driving pinions and replace the Ford wheels.

Just as Smith Form-a-Truck has revolutionized hauling, Smith Form-a-Tractor will entirely revolutionize all farm work—do it better, faster, at much lower cost. Combined with Smith Form-a-Truck for farm hauling, it makes expensive horses entirely unnecessary.

Superb Construction

Materials, workmanship and design of the Smith Form-a-Tractor duplicate that of the most expensive tractors built.

Extra wide tractor wheels—strongly built 2 in. tractor axle—nickel steel roller driving pinions—4 in. channel steel frame give the highest type of construction.

Remarkable Power

Eleven times the pulling power of the Ford obtained through the gear reduction in the roller pinion bull ring gear drive system.

Smith Form-a-Tractor will start on high gear and work continuously, doing any work that you could possibly do with four big, strong horses.

For All Work

Smith Form-a-Tractor has demonstrated remarkable plowing ability, hauling 28" two bottom plows at 2½ miles an hour on high gear.

It will do every other form of farm work.

Lakes and Fish Await Motorist Up North a Bit

Here's another of those suggestions for motoring to the best nearby haunts of the festive fish. Motorists who don't care to fish will find the routes indicated just as desirable for a week end jaunt out of Chicago, either now or later in the season. Next Sunday "The Tribune" will begin a series of stories and maps outlining in detail the best short one day trips to be taken out of the city.

By John De Long and Larry St. John.

"THE bass are bitin'!" This news and the fact that the law permits one to catch bass and other fish all the year round in Illinois is causing a stir, right now, among the angler motorists of this neck of the woods.

Northern Illinois is blessed with lakes. In fact, there is "a raft of 'em" within fifty miles of the loop—fifty-two in Lake county alone—which makes it convenient for a week end jaunt. For that matter, one can leave Sunday morning, get nearly a full day's fishing, and come home the same evening, as 9 o'clock in the morning is plenty early enough to get out on a lake at this time of the year.

True, these northern Illinois lakes do not "teem with monster bass and mighty pickerel and other gamy denizens of the deep," to use the language of the railroad folders, but they are far from being "fished out," as many anglers seem to believe. Bass and pickerel are fairly plentiful, and a mess of perch, blue gills, bull heads, and other pan fish is almost a certainty.

Right at the endge of the village of Wauconda, forty-one miles from Chicago, is Bangs lake, which is about one and three-quarters miles in length and a mile wide. It is a good early lake and the accommodations and boats are both satisfactory. Work the west shore first, around to the bay. The bay is a likely place, too—in fact, all shores should be fished carefully. Besides bass, pickerel, and pan fish this lake has some real nice bull heads.

Slocum lake, directly west of Wauconda, is smaller than Bangs lake and is an "up and down" lake. That is, they are either biting well here or not at all.

Diamond lake, near Area, is noted for big bass. They are not particularly plentiful, but run extra large in size. Fish all shores.

Lake Zurich is a pretty piece of water which contains the usual supply of pan fish, while the lily pads and weed beds on the southeast side yield some nice bass at times.

Bangs lake, Diamond lake, and Lake Zurich are a little south of the real lake country, but a little farther north we run into a whole string of lakes which are near enough together so that the motorist can fish several of them in a day if he so desires.

Grays and Gages lakes offer some good pan fish, such as perch and blue gills, but are not often fished by bait casters. This in itself is often a recommendation, we have learned.

Near Grays lake is Druce lake, from which an 8½ pound bass was taken last summer. It was caught near the duck blind, but all shores are fishable. The same can be said of Crittenden lake, which is reached by a channel from Druce lake.

Lake Miltimore or Fourth lake is a large, shallow, weedy piece of water which at one time was considered the best fishing lake in northern Illinois and some anglers say it is yet. Some big strings of bass and large pickerel are taken here, as well as the smaller fish.

North of Grays lake is Taylor's lake, from which we have taken some nice fish—some good sized bass and pickerel in this little lake. The entire south shore is the best place on the lake, especially the southwest corner.

A rifle shot to the north of Taylor's lake is Round lake, which is round and about a mile in diameter. The bass fishing here is usually good and the accommodations are way above the average. This is a particularly good place to go when you take the women folks along.

Still farther north is Long lake, also a good bass lake, and nearby are Wooster, Duck, and Fish lakes. Northeast of Long lake, near the town of Lake Villa, is Cedar lake, and not far from here are Sand, Sun, and Deep lakes. These were all famous fishing lakes years ago and are not fished out yet and probably never will be.

North, a few miles from Cedar lake, is Loon lake, the best early lake in northern Illinois. There are really two lakes connected. The west lake is deep and clear, fed by springs, while the east lake is shallow and weedy. The latter is usually better early and late in the season on account of its warmer water and extensive beds of weeds, rushes, and lilies. A particularly good spot is the north bay back of the ice houses.

We have mentioned only a few of the lakes in this region, leaving out the Fox lake chain and the Fox river for a future article. In fact, when you get into Lake county you will have little difficulty in finding fishable water. Most of these lakes are small and bordered with weeds, the weed beds being usually thicker on the south and east sides, as these are usually the lee shores and the still water encourages weed growth.

Every caster, of course, has his own favorite lures, but for the novice we offer a few suggestions. Baits that are reasonably weedless are desirable and sometimes necessary for these lakes. A single or tandem spinner, a red or yellow weedless fly, and a strip of pork rind makes a good all around underwater lure and is a general favorite. Frogs on weedless hooks do good work in almost all of the Illinois lakes. Casting plugs of the underwater or wobbler types are better now than surface baits, but a little later surface artificials or a pork chunk will be effective.

For trolling a good sized spoon with a weedless fly and possibly a pork strip will be found satisfactory. The still fisher will probably get best results with small minnows, but they are not always obtainable, so a can of worms should be taken along. These are always dependable baits for bluegills, perch, bullheads, and other small fish.

The motorist-fisherman, who decides to try today's suggestion regarding routes and waters, has two optional ways of reaching the section which has the largest number of lakes. One route runs straight north over Sheridan road, through the lake shore suburbs as far as Waukegan. The other goes out Milwaukee avenue, through Wheeling and Half Day.

If the tourist decides to use the shore route he is advised to leave Chicago via Michigan avenue, Rush street, Ohio street, Lincoln parkway, Lake Shore drive, and Sheridan road, following the latter named thoroughfare without deviation through the eastern limits of Evanston, Wilmette, Winnetka, and Glencoe to Highland Park, 25.9 miles. At this point other optional routes present themselves. The motorist may continue north on Sheridan road through Lake Forest and Lake Bluff to Waukegan, a total distance of 40.2 miles from Chicago. Then turn west and drive out of town on Grand avenue and passing through Gurnee and Lake Villa to Fox Lake, 59.7 miles from Chicago. By referring to the map that accompanies this article, it will be seen that several of the fishing lakes recommended lie along the route and are easily accessible.

For Antioch and its contiguous nest of little lakes, turn north from Lake Villa and go through Loon Lake Station to the destination, 4.7 miles beyond.

Those who wish to branch off at Highland Park should go west through Half Day and then north in Milwaukee avenue through Libertyville and to cross roads 4.3 miles beyond. At this point turn sharp left or west to Grays Lake, turning right through the edge of the village and passing lake. Cross railway tracks and at three corners bear left, soon after bearing right and passing Rollins station. Continue to cross roads at the edge of Lake Villa and turn left to Fox Lake. The distance this way is 60.7 miles.

Those who elect to use the Milwaukee avenue route out of the city may either drive through Lincoln park to Diversey boulevard, turn left, cross river, turn left to Logan boulevard, and right to Logan square, and left on Milwaukee avenue or they may continue north on Sheridan road to Addison street and then turn west to Milwaukee avenue. The advantage possessed by the latter named way is that it avoids the street car tracks between Logan square and Addison street.

The route runs northwest over the Milwaukee avenue concrete road through Niles, but a detour is necessary between that village and Wheeling. Owing to road construction work now under way between the Desplaines river and Wheeling, tourists are advised to turn right one-half mile south of the House That Jack Built and then north to the Dundee road into Wheeling, again coming onto Milwaukee avenue and continuing to Half Day, where the route to Fox Lake, above outlined, is picked up. The distance this way is somewhat shorter, fifty-three miles. Diamond Lake is reached by going west from Half Day four and one-half miles. Fox Lake also may be reached this way by going from Diamond Lake through Ivanhoe, Volo, and Ingleside, but the route is not recommended at this season of the year on account of its being entirely dirt, and, therefore, slippery in wet weather.

If Lake Zurich is the objective point, the best way to reach the resort is by following the route to Half Day. At a point one-tenth of a mile south of Half Day, turn west and drive 8.3 miles. The Lake Zurich route runs through Prairie View. Ordinarily the logical way to reach Lake Zurich would be to go through Franklin Park to Desplaines and take the Rand road, which runs direct to the lake. But Rand road is under construction and will be closed until August, when the work of laying eleven miles of concrete will have been completed by the county.

Wauconda and its two dandy little fishing lakes may be reached by going to Wheeling and then branching west through Buffalo Grove and Long Grove. Wauconda is 41.1 miles from Chicago. This route also is recommended for McHenry, which lies 9.6 miles beyond.

MOTOR JAUNTS TO NEARBY LAKES

How to Reach Attractive Waters Where the Fish Are Biting Within Easy Touring Distance North of Chicago.

LITTLE THINGS THAT HELP

It Breaks in Two.

A novel combination of car lock and tilting steering wheel is offered in a device which provides for splitting the wheel in the middle at the pressure of a button, the half toward the driver dropping down against an attachment on the steering column. Here locking devices engage each other, and a Yale lock fastens the wheel against the post, making it impossible to drive the car and at the same time getting the wheel out of the driver's way. It can be installed on any make of machine.

Lock for Fords.

An efficient cartridge lock for Fords is set in the floor of the car and serves as a magneto circuit breaker, pressure on the foot lever automatically shutting off the engine and stopping the car. A serial key is used to unlock the car, making it unnecessary to use the regular coil switch key. The contraption costs 80 cents.

Old Tires Made New.

Another Chicagoan invites you to send him your worn out tires to be retreaded by a new electric process and sent back with a 3,500 mile guarantee, the cost of retreading being about half that of a new tire. The old tread is removed and, if necessary, the breaker strip and underlying ply of cushion stock. Then a layer of rubber compound, woven with fine wire set diagonally in both directions, is laid over the exposed fabric, the new tread placed outside, and electricity applied to wire terminals which have been left exposed to do the "curing." An advantage of the new method is said to be that the heat, applied internally, does not devitalize the rubber originally in the tire.

Motorcycle Fans to Have National 'Gypsy Tour' Day

A NATIONAL motorcycle "gypsy tour" day that will bring out at least 20,000 enthusiasts of the two and three wheeled sport is the ambition of the Motorcycle and Allied Trades association, composed of motorcycle manufacturers. Preliminary plans are already under way at the association's headquarters in Milwaukee.

Tentative dates for the event have been set as June 16 and 17, on Saturday and Sunday. A conservative estimate of 200 tours all over the country has been made by the chairman of the association, and applications for entry blanks made thus far indicate that this figure may be doubled. The project will have the financial backing of the trades association and will be conducted under the auspices of the Federation of American Motorcyclists.

Interest will be added by the awarding of a trophy in the shape of a fob or medal to each person finishing the tour. One of the rules of the tour will be the limiting of the ground covered each day to 100 miles.

This will make each tour strictly a sociability run and give the entrants plenty of opportunity to see the country. The routes will pass through the largest possible number of towns in a given distance, and in many cases will meet at a noon or night control, thereby promoting intercity acquaintance in motorcycle organizations. At least half of the motorcycles taking part are expected to have side cars attached and carry feminine passengers.

Walter J. Evans of Chicago has left the International Time Recording company to become retail sales manager of the Centaur Motor company, Jeffery distributor in this territory.

South American 'Speedway' to Be 700 Miles Long

A NEW HIGHWAY more than 700 miles long is the ambitious project now being launched in Venezuela. It is the greatest public work the country has ever planned.

Compared with present means of communication, says the bulletin of the Pan-American union, the proposed highway to link two far distant cities of the country—Caracas and San Cristobal—might be properly termed a speedway. Today over a great part of the route freight and passenger traffic is transported by primitive methods, which means the mule and ox as motive power.

That these facilities are far too slow for present day activities has been known for years, and the proposed road is the culmination of a long cherished desire of the government and the people for better highway facilities.

Venezuela has something like 600 varieties of hard and soft woods in the forests through which the new road will penetrate; there are thousands of acres of fine grazing lands along the way, over which roam many cattle. A hundred and one other products that the world is demanding in increasing quantities are within contiguous territory of the new highway. In other words, a vast area that has been tapped only by primitive roads and rivers will be placed on or near a modern highway.

DANGER!

New Laws, in Effect This Week, Will Catch the Unwary Motorist if He Doesn't Watch Out.

CHICAGO motorists will do well to post themselves on three new city ordinances and two city and state regulations which take effect, most of them, this week. Violation of any of them means danger of arrest and fine, and the courts aren't accepting the excuse that the unwary driver "didn't know the law." Here they are:

STOP AT BOULEVARDS—"It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, or corporation driving or operating any vehicle . . . upon the public streets or alleys of the city of Chicago to drive or cause same to be driven on to any boulevard . . . without first bringing such vehicle to a full and complete stop." (This went into effect last week.)

DOWNTOWN PARKING—"No person, firm, or corporation owning, controlling, driving, or operating any vehicle . . . shall cause or permit such vehicle to stand on any public street or alley in the city of Chicago, upon which street cars are operated, within the district bounded by the north line of Lake street, the east line of Wabash avenue, the south line of Van Buren street, and the west line of Market street, during the hours from 7 a. m. to 10 a. m. and from 4 p. m. to 7 p. m., for a longer period at any one time than will be necessary for such vehicle to load or unload its occupants, baggage, or merchandise." (This goes into effect next Tuesday, May 1.)

LOADING ZONES—"No person, firm, or corporation owning, controlling, driving, or operating any vehicle . . . shall stop such vehicle or cause the same to stop within the spaces herein established [see diagram] and designated as loading zones, except upon the signal of a police officer; provided, that one vehicle at a time shall be permitted to stop within such loading zone for the purpose of loading or unloading merchandise destined to or received from occupants of a building or buildings in immediate proximity to such loading zone. Vehicles in passing through loading zones shall do so in single file and keep as close as possible to the curb on the right." (This goes into effect next Tuesday, May 1.)

WHEEL TAX—Current licenses expire tomorrow. Failure to display a new license plate, obtainable from the city collector, is cause for arrest.

STATE LICENSES—Secretary of State Emmerson has set May 15 as the last day of grace for automobile owners whose machines carry last year's license plates. Police officers throughout the state are being notified to arrest all persons who operate cars after that date without 1917 licenses.

Motor Notes

The National factory at Indianapolis has asked its representatives throughout the country to co-operate actively with the government in every possible way.

"The name Reo will be heard from in more ways than one when actual war comes," says Herman Staebler, Chicago branch manager. "It happens that there is a Reo National Rifle club with some eighty-five members, which stood fourth in the last general marksmanship average issued by the war department. If our men are called out the sharpshooters will go first and are likely to prove highly useful."

Back of this season's new Overland Big Fours and Light Sixes are a direct line of nine preceding models from which they were developed.

They directly continue the line of models that made the Overland name stand in the public mind for integrity of value.

Overland policy has steadfastly sustained that integrity of value in the car throughout its entire service in the hands of owners.

Over three hundred thousand of these cars are now in use and the helpful suggestions of their owners and of the more than four thousand dealer and factory-branch organizations that sold and served them, are largely responsible for the balanced greatness of this season's Big Fours and Light Sixes.

Their new beauty, their perfected easy riding qualities, their proven sturdiness and mechanical excellence, their admitted tire, fuel and oil economy make them worthy of the confidence we enjoy, that they will still further enhance Overland prestige.

They embody the wisdom of the unmatched Overland experience in building cars of this type.

They are dominant values, cars of proven dependability and sterling worth.

As long as we have them for delivery before May 1st, the prices are $850 for the Big Four, $985 for the Light Six—thereafter $895 and $1025.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

Henry Paulman, Chicago Pierce-Arrow distributor, claims the distinction of being the first to display Chicago's new municipal flag and the banner of the Illinois centennial commission, having installed both in the window of his Michigan avenue salesroom last week. Wallace Rice, writer of prose and verse, designed both. He explains that in the Chicago flag, shown herewith, the three broad white bands represent the north, south, and west sides; the blue stripes the bodies of water which bound and separate them, and the two stars the Chicago fire and the World's Fair, the most significant events in local history.

"I'm willing to advertise for bids on all the city's purchases except automobiles," said Mayor Berkley of Santa Monica, Cal., at a recent meeting of the city commission. "When it comes to cars for municipal service nothing runs like the Ford or can be operated as cheaply." In several California cities policemen are now traveling their beats in Fords, and Santa Monica proposes to have at least one for this purpose.

Joe Dawson, winner of Indianapolis' most dramatic race, that of 1912, has joined the Chalmers Motor company as assistant experimental engineer, with special duties in connection with the contest and trials section of the advertising department.

The company which runs the Shaw taxicabs has added ten Jordan touring cars to its big fleet of automobiles—a proceeding which delights the soul of O. G. Heffinger, the Chicago Jordan distributor, for the Shaw concern maintains a complete factory of its own and doesn't need to go out and buy cars if it doesn't want to.

All records for Overland driveaways were broken the other day when 262 cars of all models were driven from the Toledo factory by distributors and dealers from Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Indiana. Erie, Pa., had the biggest individual fleet, taking 105 machines.

OFFICE OF THE CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND AND PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY.
Chicago, Illinois, April 12, 1917.
A special meeting of the stockholders of The Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway Company, duly called by a majority of all the directors, will be held at the office of the Company, at Room 1, One La Salle Street Station, in the City of Chicago, County of Cook, and State of Illinois, on Thursday, the twenty-first day of June, 1917, at 10 o'clock A. M., for the purpose of considering, voting and deciding whether the stockholders of the Company will consent to and will authorize:
First. The amendment of Article V. Clause 1 of the Articles of Consolidation of June 2, 1880, as amended from time to time, so as to read substantially as follows with such changes, alterations and additions as such special meeting may authorize, viz:
The Capital Stock of The Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway Company, the consolidated corporation hereby created, shall be limited to the sum of One Hundred and Forty Millions Dollars, until the amount thereof is increased by an amendment to these Articles of Consolidation adopted in the manner hereinafter provided. The said Capital Stock shall be divided into shares, each of which shall have a par value of One Hundred Dollars, and shall be issued and disposed of for the payment or discharge of the obligations of the Company and for corporate purposes at such times and on such terms and conditions as the Board of Directors or the Executive Committee may lawfully determine.
Of said Capital Stock Seventy-five Millions Dollars par value, being the present authorized share capital of the Company shall be, and shall hereafter be known and designated as Common Stock, and the remaining Sixty-five Millions Dollars par value shall be Preferred Stock entitled to preferences and priorities over said Common Stock and respectively entitled to the other rights and preferences following, viz.:
[1] Thirty Millions Dollars par value of said Preferred Stock shall be seven [7] per cent. preferred stock entitled to dividends up to but not exceeding seven [7] per cent. in any fiscal year before any dividend shall be paid upon the Common Stock, and to be entitled further from and after May 1, 1917, to cumulation of dividends unpaid up to but not exceeding the rate of five [5] per cent. per annum such accumulated dividends to be paid in full before the payment of any dividends upon the Common Stock, and entitled equally with the six [6] per cent. preferred stock hereinafter described, to be preferred in the distribution of assets on any insolvency or the dissolution of the Company over the Common Stock in the payment of the amount or value of said shares of said first mentioned class, plus any unpaid dividends at said rate of five [5] per cent. per annum accumulated thereon, upon the payment or distribution shall be made on the Common Stock; entitled to be preferred as to dividends over the six [6] per cent. preferred stock as to Twenty Millions Dollars par value of said stock, and equally with said six [6] per cent. preferred stock as to the remaining Ten Millions Dollars par value of said stock, and entitled equally with said six [6] per cent. preferred stock to cumulative dividends as follows, viz.: (a) as to Twenty Millions Dollars par value thereof, from and after May 1, 1917, at the rate of five [5] per cent. per annum, such accumulated dividends to be paid in full before the payment of any dividends upon the Common Stock; entitled equally with the seven [7] per cent. preferred stock hereinbefore described, to be preferred in the distribution of assets on insolvency or dissolution of the Company over the Common Stock, and to the payment of the entire par value of the preferred stocks of both classes, plus any unpaid dividends at said rate of five [5] per cent. per annum then accumulated thereon, before any payment or distribution shall be made on the Common Stock, subject to the preference to dividends of the seven [7] per cent. preferred stock, to the extent of seven [7] per cent. in any fiscal year which shall be first declared and paid or set aside for payment before any dividends shall be declared upon this six [6] per cent. preferred stock, but after the declaration and payment or setting aside of such one [1] per cent. in any fiscal year, entitled to share equally with the seven [7] per cent. preferred stock and to dividends declared and paid on both said classes of preferred stock; and redeemable in whole or in part, but not by lot, at the option of or contemporaneously with the seven [7] per cent. preferred stock, on any dividend payment date at one hundred and five dollars [$105] per share plus the amount of all unpaid cumulative five [5] per cent. dividends accrued thereon, upon notice of redemption given as hereinafter provided.
Notice of Redemption of either or both of the classes of stock, and the amount and terms hereinbefore set forth, shall be forwarded by United States mail to each holder of record of the preferred stock of such class or classes at the last known address appearing on the stock books of the company and shall be published in two newspapers of general circulation, one in the Borough of Manhattan, City and State of New York, and one in the City of Chicago, Illinois, once a week for three successive weeks, said notice to be mailed as aforesaid and the first publication thereof to be made at least thirty days prior as aforesaid not more than forty days nor less than thirty days prior to the dividend date upon which redemption of the preferred stock is to be made.
The amount of the Capital Stock may be increased from time to time by amendment to these Articles of Consolidation adopted at any annual meeting of the stockholders or special meeting of the stockholders duly called for that purpose, by the vote of the holders of two-thirds [2/3] of the shares of capital stock of all classes then outstanding, and such further amounts whereby the capital stock may be so increased may consist of seven [7] per cent preferred stock or Common Stock, or of any two or all of said classes of stock, provided, however, that the vote of a majority in interest of each class of stock outstanding, each class voting separately, as well as the said vote of the holders of two-thirds of the shares of capital stock of all classes then outstanding, shall be necessary for the adoption of any such amendment, whereby the amount of either or both of the aforesaid preferred stocks is to be increased.
Second. The amendment of Article VI. Clauses 2 and 3, of the Articles of Consolidation of June 2, 1880, so as to read substantially as follows (with such changes, alterations and additions as such special meeting may authorize), viz:
"2. In all elections for Directors every stockholder shall have the right to vote, in person or by proxy, for the number of shares of stock owned by him, for as many persons as there are directors to be elected, or to cumulate said shares and give one candidate as many votes as the number of directors, multiplied by the number of his shares of stock, shall equal, or to distribute them, on the same principle, among as many candidates as he shall think fit, and such directors shall not be elected in any other manner."
"3. At each annual election, commencing with that to be held on the second Thursday of October, 1917, the holders of the stock entitled by ballot the entire Board of Directors for a term of one year and until their successors are elected, if for any reason an election is not had at any annual meeting or an adjournment thereof, a special meeting for such election may be called in the manner provided by the by-laws at which all the Directors of the Company shall be elected."
Third. The increase of the Capital Stock from its present authorized amount of $75,000,000 to the aggregate authorized amount of $140,000,000, the increased amount of $65,000,000 to consist of the $30,000,000 of 7 per cent preferred stock and $35,000,000 of 6 per cent preferred stock described in the above amendment to Article VI. Clause 1 of the Articles of Consolidation.
By order of the Board of Directors.
JAMES E. GORMAN,
Vice-President.
GEORGE H. CROSBY,
Secretary.

RAISE MORE FOOD!

PRESIDENT WILSON in his appeal to the country to raise more food, said: "Without abundant crops alike for the armies and the peoples now at war, the whole enterprise upon which we have embarked will break down and fail. The world's food reserves are low. Not only during the present emergency but for some time after peace shall have come both our own people and a large proportion of the people of Europe must rely upon the harvests in America. Upon the farmers of this country, therefore, in large measure rests the fate of the war and the fate of the nations."

YOU CAN MAKE our harvests larger and thus help win the war by getting land, and you need very little money to start. $25 to $100 down is all that is necessary to begin buying 40 acres. You can pay the balance at $7 to $10 monthly, or I make easier terms for small tracts for poultry, fruit and truck. I have more than 50,000 acres of land in Manistee, Mason, Lake, Wexford, Missaukee, Kalkaska counties, Michigan, which I am selling at $15 to $25 an acre. Also, I do many things to make both buying and farming easy for you. There is an insurance feature which gives the land to your family if you die before it is paid for fully. I employ agricultural advisers to show you the best farming methods for our district.

FARM RENTERS SHOULD BUY land! A rented farm is not a permanent home and now is the time to buy before prices go higher.

DAIRYING IN MICHIGAN is very profitable. The last world's champion 4 yr. old cow came from Michigan. In 7 days she gave 570 pounds of milk. This is about 80 pounds a day. If you keep 5 cows on 40 acres averaging only 30 pounds of milk a day from each, at $2.08 per hundredweight for the price Michigan farmers are now getting), in a year you would get $1,138.80 for it. This would be only part of the returns from your land. Farming of many kinds also pays well in Michigan. Besides live stock, potatoes, wheat, and all vegetables, grains and leguminous crops are profitable. You should see these lands now.

THE NEXT EXCURSION to the lands is May 8th. PRIVATE CARS Round trip from Chicago, including berth, meals, and auto trips over the land, $12.95. Don't wait, but ACT NOW! Join us on this trip.

Texas.

FOR SALE—NEW FARM OPPORTUNITY IN ONE OF THE GREATEST STATES IN THE UNION. A new line of the Santa Fe is tapping a rich and fertile prairie section of Texas. This year 1,000 cars of wheat will be shipped from this section, and next year where already many farmers have MADE GOOD in a big way with wheat, hogs, and cattle. HERE IS YOUR HOME. Here you can get first choice—get in on the ground floor of a great opportunity. You can farm on shares the first year, ahead of the people whom the railway will bring—ahead of those who act more slowly than you do. This is the chance of a lifetime for a man of moderate means. A certain number of thrifty, farseeing farmers can acquire good land at astonishingly low prices, and for a long, easy term. If you have confidence that a great railroad, like the Santa Fe, would only recommend one of its best crops and farming, and because it wants to see new territory developed and wants newcomers to PROSPER and PRODUCE—write us at once TODAY for particulars about this district. Mild climate, social advantages, schools, churches, telephones, good roads. Everything there but enough men with their families. Will you be one of the fortunate first comers to reap the golden harvest? Not one that has been minutely inspected by a Santa Fe agricultural agent and pronounced RIGHT? Write me and get exclusive data on a copy of the special illustrated circular we are getting out. C. L. SEAGRAVES, 1105 Railway Exchange, Chicago.

UNDER normal conditions the volume and character of the transactions which made up last week's real estate market would have been deemed quite satisfactory, and the showing becomes a surprisingly good one in view of the present disturbed condition of affairs.

Not only was the volume of trading large, as indicated by the figures of the recorder's office, but it also was along unusually broad lines, practically all classes of property, with the exception of manufacturing property, being represented by really important transactions.

A particularly important feature of the week's market was the announcement of the plans for the erection of a sixteen story extra high grade apartment building between the "Breakers" and the McClurg building, on the Lake Shore drive, to cost $1,450,000.

Encouraging to Realty Men.

Taken altogether the market certainly should prove decidedly encouraging to real estate men, some of whom have been disposed to be somewhat pessimistic regarding the outlook because of the many complications and uncertainties incident to the war.

One exceedingly interesting development regarding the mortgage loan situation is the growing probability of higher interest rates, as the result of the prospective diversion of large sums of money which formerly have gone into mortgage investments to the government's big bond issue. There is a growing belief that the 3½ per cent rate is likely to be raised to 4 per cent if the war runs well into another year, as many believe it will, and a 4 per cent absolutely secure, nontaxable security, apart from the patriotic feature, looks mighty good to a great many institutions and people of large means who are said to be holding their money for investment in these securities, who formerly were free lenders in the mortgage field. It has now become certain there will be a large decrease in the amount of money available for mortgage loans, and this should mean higher interest rates.

Business Looks Up.

Business property, which cut a poor figure in the market of the previous week was represented by two important transactions, one covering Evanston property and the other downtown Chicago property, but not of much magnitude.

The Evanston deal was the sale of Rosenberg's department store at 818-24 Davis street, said to be the largest concern of its kind between Chicago and Milwaukee, to Mrs. Charlotte Sargent Smith of Chicago. The grantors were Dora and Charles E. Rosenberg and Rosenbergs, a corporation. The lot is 100x170 feet and is improved with a new three story white terra cotta building, which was completed and occupied by Rosenberg's last December. A nominal consideration was given, subject to a bond issue loan of $171,500 at 5½ per cent. The property is said, however, to have figured in at a valuation of $275,000, of which $100,000 is in the land.

Leases It Back.

Mrs. Smith has leased the property back to Rosenbergs for twenty years at a net annual rental of $18,000, or $360,000 for the term. The deal was negotiated by Chandler, Hildreth & Co., Harry M. Rosenblum attending to the legal details for Rosenbergs and Charles P. Harding for Mrs. Smith. Charles Rosenberg, the founder of the business, started in the dry goods business in Evanston over twenty years ago.

In this connection Mrs. Smith conveyed the high grade thirty apartment building of five and six rooms at 4567 to 4605 Woodlawn avenue, west front, 188 feet, with a depth of 200 feet, and an alley frontage of 240 feet. Title was taken by the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, for a nominal consideration, but the property is said to have a gross annual rental of $22,950 and is said to be valued in the neighborhood of $200,000. Chandler, Hildreth & Co. were also the brokers.

Deal in Loop.

The downtown deal was the purchase by Henry Botsford from the estate of Stephen Swift and the estate of L. J. Craig of the fee of the property in West Randolph street, forty feet west of Dearborn street, 40x100 feet, for a reported consideration of $180,000. The property is under a lease for ninety-nine years at present held by Oscar F. Meier. The lease is from March 1, 1892, at an annual rent of $9,000 for the first seven years and $12,000 thereafter.

The property is on the south side of the street, adjoining the new Cunard building, and is improved with a two story building occupied for restaurant purposes by the King Joy Lo company [illegible] by J. W. Dooley [illegible] attended to [illegible]

222 LAKE SHORE DRIVE

New Apartment Building to Cost $1,450,000, the Erection of Which Will Start at Once.

BIG APARTMENT BUILDING, PLAN FOR LAKE SHORE

Syndicate of Twelve Men to Own and Operate.

Probably the most important development of the week was the announcement of the plans for the erection of a great sixteen story apartment building to be known as "222 Lake Shore drive," between the Breakers and the McClurg apartments. Its size and interesting features connected with its ownership combine to make it a most important development in high class apartment construction here. The building will face north on that section of the drive which sweeps east from the foot of Bellevue place.

The property will be owned by a syndicate of twelve men, who will make their homes in the building, while the remaining sixteen apartments will be rented to nonowning tenants.

It is expected the revenue to be derived from these apartments will not only pay for the maintenance of the building but will reduce to a minimum the actual rents of the owners of the building.

Frontage of 194 Feet.

The building, which will occupy a frontage of 194 feet, will have fourteen renting floors with two apartments to each floor, containing about fourteen rooms. The apartments will rent at from $6,000 to $7,200 a year. The building was designed by W. Ernest Walker, who has designed many of the better class of apartment buildings in the Lake Shore drive district. It will cost about $1,450,000.

The property extends south from the drive to Walton place, 218 feet, and in order to have an unobstructed south exposure in the rear it is planned to maintain the entire Walton place frontage as a small park.

The apartments will include four large family chambers, each with individual baths, four servants' rooms and servants' dining rooms. The roof of the building will be provided with studio rooms, children's play rooms, and other improvements specially designed for the requirements of a few of the owning tenants. It will be connected by private elevators some of the apartments. Work will begin immediately, and it is planned to have the building ready for occupancy by May 1, 1918. A. J. Pardridge and Harold Bradley will manage the property.

Purchase on South Side.

In an interesting south side deal involving an important improvement, Leonard H. Roach, representing the University State bank, a recently organized institution with a capital of $200,000, has purchased from Michael Uebele & Son, 76x100 feet, at the northwest corner of Fifty-fifth street and Ridgewood court, and from Frank A. Chambers twenty-five feet adjoining the corner, for a reported price of $37,500. Plans are being prepared by Thomas R. Bishop for a two story bank, office and hall building, to cost about $75,000. Among those interested in the bank are William McKinley, Frank Kelly, Marquis Eaton, J. V. Parker, C. W. Hoff, and Mr. Roach. T. D. O'Hern and C. W. Hoff & Co., negotiated the transaction.

Hoff & Co. will have offices in the building.

F. Bowden De Forest Buys Wellington Avenue Home

F. Bowden De Forest has purchased from Charlotte L. Holden of Port Huron, Mich., an attractive three story residence at 519 Wellington avenue, near Pine Grove avenue, consideration nominal, but the property is said to have been valued at about $15,000. Paul Steinbrecher & Co. were the brokers.

ASK CHANGE TO SIMPLIFY TITLE LAW IN ILLINOIS

Delegation to Urge Prompt Action in Springfield.

The rapid growth of the Torrens system of land title registration recently has prompted J. F. Hecht, president of the Torrens league; Peter Foote, Robert E. L. Brooks, and other officers of the organization to ask for amendments to the Illinois act, which will simplify its operation.

Next Tuesday a large delegation will visit Springfield to urge prompt action on the proposed improvement of the law.

The changes provide:

That when either husband or wife fail to join in an application for initial registration, he or she may be made a party defendant to the registration proceedings.

That a mortgagees' certificate of title may be issued by the registrar in addition to the owner's certificate.

That where the interpretation of a will is obvious, the registrar shall not be put to the necessity of petitioning the court for a construction of the will.

That the fee for filing a certificate of tax sale shall be reduced from $3 to $1. This is to promote the handling of registered property by taxbuyers, to whom the size of the registration fee was a deterrent, it being recognized that tax buyers perform a useful service by paying the taxes of defaulting owners.

That the law in regard to recording plats be changed to include their filing in the Torrens office when the property is registered under the system.

"Money Moon" Series of Ads Are Bartlett's

The curiosity which has been aroused during the last few days by the mysterious "Money Moon" series of "teaser" advertisements has been set at rest. The advertiser is Frederick H. Bartlett & Co. and the "Fortune Spot" referred to in the full moon, is a term used by the firm to designate its newest subdivision development—"Greater Chicago."

"Greater Chicago" Is Title of Real Estate Booklet

"Greater Chicago" is the title of an attractive booklet just issued by Frederick H. Bartlett & Co., dealing [illegible] cipally with the "Greater Chicago" subdivision of Bartlett & Co. at Pullman. The booklet contains many illustrations.

ACTIVE TRADES IN BIG FLATS DURING WEEK

Largest of Many Months by Fred W. Upham of Consumers.

Real Estate Transfers.

Real estate transfers filed for record yesterday totaled 200, of which 154 were in the city and 46 outside, including 10 under the Torrens system. Transfers were as follows:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Rogers Park | 2 | Cicero | 13 |
| Lake View | 8 | Lyons | 3 |
| Jefferson | 30 | Maine | 2 |
| Edison Park | 2 | New Trier | 4 |
| Norwood Park | 3 | Niles | 1 |
| North town | 3 | Northfield | 3 |
| South town | 9 | Palatine | 1 |
| Hyde Park | 18 | Proviso | 7 |
| Lake | 37 | Rich | 1 |
| Calumet | 5 | Ridgeville | 2 |
| West town | 36 | Riverside | 3 |
| Stickney | 3 | Thornton | 2 |
| Barrington | 1 | Worth | 1 |

Apartment property was exceedingly well represented in the week's business not only as regards the number but also the character of the transactions reported and made matters of record, one transaction, the purchase by Frederick W. Upham, president of the Consumers company, being one of the largest in several months.

He acquired from Hans P. Jensen the seventy-two apartment building in Logan square on a lot 338x142 feet at 2614-44 North Spaulding avenue. There are forty-eight four room apartments and twenty-four five room apartments, with sun parlors and up to date equipment. The consideration is reported at $300,000, subject to an incumbrance of $160,000. In part payment Mr. Upham conveyed 3,000 acres in Iron county, Wisconsin. The Logan square building is said to have a gross annual rental of $40,000.

Thirty-nine Flats Sold.

In another big deal Michael F. Curran and Arthur Foster, architect, sold to Owen F. Hotle of Oakland, Cal., the court building containing thirty-nine flats of four and five rooms and two stores on 141x200 feet of ground at the northeast corner of Central Park and Colorado avenues, with a gross annual rental of $22,000, for a consideration said to be in excess of $160,000, subject to $96,000, the purchasers conveying the twenty-one flat building at the northeast corner of Sherman and Madison streets, Evanston, subject to $55,000, and the twenty-one flat southwest corner Sherman and Seward streets, subject to $37,500. The Evanston properties were resold to John Healy, Krause, Beak & Co. were the brokers.

The high grade eighteen apartment building at the southeast corner of Washington street and Ridge avenue, Evanston, lot 160x130 feet, has been conveyed by I. A. Ash to Margaret E. Zimmerman, consideration nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $57,000.

Belden Avenue Deal.

The high grade fifteen apartment building at 327-35 Belden avenue, lot 150 x124 feet, 216 feet west of Lincoln park West, has been conveyed by Mrs. Charlotte D. Reynolds to Hugo F. Arnold. A nominal consideration is given, but the actual figure is said to have been about $100,000.

George C. Brett has sold to Dr. Clark A. Buswell the high grade new twelve apartment building at the southeast corner of Ashland and Sunnyside avenues, lot 92x165 feet. The apartments contain five, six, and seven rooms. A nominal consideration was given, but the actual figure is said to have been in the neighborhood of $70,000. The building is said to have a gross annual rental of about $9,500. E. E. Stults and F. J. Kefter of E. R. Haase & Co. were the brokers.

The property at the northwest corner of Whipple street and Leland avenue, improved with a twelve apartment building, and also the property at the corner of Leland and Sawyer avenues, has been sold by Swanson & Erickson to Hugo M. Suder, the first named building going at a reported consideration of $60,000, subject to an incumbrance of $46,000, and the other subject to an incumbrance of $2,000. The purchaser conveyed in part payment a 100 acre farm near Desplaines valued at $30,000. John A. Schmidt & Co. represented both parties.

The eighteen apartment building at the southeast corner of Judson avenue and Lee street, Evanston, lot 97x132 feet, which recently was acquired by Axel H. Johnson, the builder, for a reported $70,000, has been sold by him to Mrs. Lota Ray Nichols for a reported $75,000, subject to an incumbrance of $49,750. The building is an English basement structure and is said to have an annual gross rental of about $10,800. H. W. Croxton negotiated the transaction.

SHERIDAN ROAD DEAL IN VACANT WEEK'S FEATURE

Colnon Buys Big Area Between 91st and 95th on Vincennes.

Several transactions in high grade vacant and in outlying acres comprised one of the most important features of the week's market. Conspicuous among these was the purchase by Mrs. Anna L. Sears of a part of the tract recently acquired by the Baird & Warner syndicate from the Catholic bishop. It covers the entire Sheridan road frontage between Addison street and Brompton avenue, with a frontage of 303 feet on the road and 275 feet on Addison street and Brompton avenue. The consideration is withheld, but it is said to have been $250,000. John T. Wheeler of Baird & Warner represented all the parties to the transaction.

The syndicate's purchase comprised the entire block between Sheridan road and Pine Grove avenue, Addison street and Cornelia avenue. It was subdivided by the syndicate and a new street opened through the center called Brompton avenue, which shortly will be paved and improved for the benefit of the lots facing on this part of the block. Mrs. Sears is said to have no plans regarding the property.

Colnon a Buyer.

In an important south side acre deal John E. Colnon, an extensive operator, purchased from the Bankers' Trust company of New York the unsold part of Fairview Park subdivision between Ninety-first and Ninety-fifth streets, Vincennes avenue and Bishop street, comprising 518½ lots. The consideration is not disclosed, but the property is said to have been offered at $100,000 during the last few months, and as Mr. Colnon's purchase was an all cash transaction it is believed he secured a substantial concession. It was owned for twenty years by John Claffin of the H. B. Claflin company.

While Mr. Colnon appeared as the purchaser, it was reported that he also acted in the interest of others who contemplate the development of the property by erecting attractive bungalows and two family dwellings. It is understood that the erection of about 100 two family dwellings to cost about $6,500 each are planned for this year. The transaction was negotiated by E. Orris Hart of E. Orris Hart & Co.

Title to Forty Acres.

The Chicago Title and Trust company has taken title to a tract of forty acres between Ninety-fifth and Ninety-third streets, South Park and St. Lawrence avenues, at a reported consideration of over $2,500 an acre. It will be known as Vernon Park subdivision.

It will be handled by William H. Britigan & Co., and adjoins on the west Montclaire, another subdivision being handled by Britigan & Co. There are approximately 320 lots in the tract, which will be sold for business and residence lots. Improvements, comprising sewer, water, and sidewalks, to cost in the neighborhood of $50,000, are to be installed. There are 111 acres in the two tracts, making it one of the largest south side subdivisions on the market.

In Rogers Park.

In an important transaction in Rogers Park acres Washington L. Sturges has acquired from the Angel Guardian German Catholic Orphans' society a tract of sixty acres on Western avenue, opposite the Edgewater golf links, with California avenue on the west, Albion avenue on the south, and Pratt and North Shore avenue on the north. Henry L. Schoolcraft will handle the property.

A nominal consideration was given in the transfer, but the property is said to be valued at from $2,500 to $3,000 an acre, and the purchaser gave back a part purchase money mortgage for $110,000 to A. H. Meads, running five years at 5 per cent. The subdivision will be known as the Ashwood addition to Rogers Park, and has been subdivided into lots of thirty-three and twenty-five foot frontage. It is stated that the lots are expected to sell for approximately $25 a front foot. The owners of the property thirty years ago put out ash trees and soft maples on every street, which have grown into beautiful trees. The property will be handled by Henry L. Schoolcraft.

Gustave Bower Buys Ellis Avenue Home

Gustave T. Bower has purchased from Max Adler the residence property at 4928 Ellis avenue, lot 50x150, with three story stone front building, containing twelve rooms, for a reported consideration of about $30,000. The deal was negotiated by J. Grafton Parker & Co. They have also sold to John B. Wickstrom for Mrs. Marion H. Bauer the eleven room dwelling on a lot 28½x150 feet at 3625 Grand boulevard for a reported consideration of about $10,000.

Leases and Loans

THERE was nothing like the showing in leases and loans that characterized the market of the previous week, due to some extent probably to the practical closing of the spring renting season. While there has been less moving than usual, with a resulting decrease in the usual number of lease announcements for this season, the situation is reported to be fairly satisfactory. Of course, there is much room for improvement, but it is immeasurably better than it was a year ago.

As stated elsewhere on this page, there is every probability of somewhat higher interest rates for mortgage loans as the result of the diversion of much money which heretofore has gone into this field to the government bond issues. It is known that many large lenders who usually lend in this field are withholding their money with the purpose of investing in the government bonds. It is believed that the withdrawal of this money will result in so curtailing the usual supply of mortgage funds as to bring stronger interest rates.

The most important of the downtown leases which were negotiated by E. E. Keebler & Co. covers the four story and basement building at 336 South State street, between Jackson boulevard and Van Buren street, which was leased for Arthur L. Farwell and Judge George L. Carpenter, representing the Katherine S. Isham estate, to Samuel M. Jess for ten years from May 1 next at a term rental of $160,000. The building now occupied by Mr. Jess at 324 South State street recently was leased by Keebler & Co. to Silver Bros. for ten years from May 1 at a term rent of $175,000.

Keebler & Co. have also leased for the same lessors to Z. Ganis the north half of the store at 228 South State street for ten years from May 1 at a term rent of $70,000. The same brokers also have leased for C. W. and H. W. Silver to Dr. F. A. Ross the third floor at 324 South State street for ten years from May 1 at a term rent of $36,000, to be occupied as a dental parlor; also for the Silvers to E. N.
